

MEDIEVAL LATIN SERIES • VOLUME 12

THE HISTORY OF THE KINGS OF BRITAIN

GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH

Historia Regum Britanniae

The History of the Kings of Britain

with a word-for-word interlinear English translation preserving the original word order

CANES NOBILES · MMXXVI

Copyright © 2026 Christopher Hench All rights reserved

Published by Canes Nobiles

The source text is in the public domain

Volume 12 of the Canes Nobiles Medieval Latin interlinear texts

The Medieval Latin text follows J. A. Giles's edition, Galfredi Monumetensis Historia Britonum (London, 1844)

Set from page scans of the edition

Translated and composed with AI, edited by Christopher Hench Artwork by Esther Steves

CONTENTS

BOOK I

I · Dedication to Robert of Gloucester	13
II · The First Inhabitants of Britain	15
III · Brutus, Exiled, Goes to Greece	17
IV · Brutus' Letter to Pandrasus	21
V · Brutus Routs Pandrasus and Captures Antigonus	22
VI · Pandrasus Besieges Sparatinum	24
VII · The Townsmen Ask Brutus for Help	26
VIII · Anacletus Betrays the Greek Army	28
IX · Brutus Takes Pandrasus Alive	30
X · The Council over the Captive Pandrasus	32
XI · Brutus Marries Ignoge; Diana Foretells His Land	35
XII · Brutus and Corineus Come to Aquitaine	42
XIII · Brutus Routs Goffarius	46
XIV · Brutus Lays Waste Aquitaine	48
XV · Brutus Fights Goffarius	49
XVI · Brutus and Corineus Divide Albion	54
XVII · Brutus Founds New Troy	57
XVIII · Brutus Gives the City to Its Citizens	59

BOOK II

I · The Three Sons of Brutus Divide the Kingdom	60
II · Locrinus Defeats Humber and Loves Estrildis	61

BOOK II

(continued)

III · Corineus' Anger	63
IV · Locrinus Marries Guendolaena, Corineus' Daughter	64
V · Locrinus Killed, Estrildis and Sabre Drowned	65
VI · Maddan and Mempricius	66
VII · Ebraucus Conquers in Gaul and Founds Cities	68
VIII · The Twenty Sons and the Daughters of Ebraucus	69
IX · Brutus Greenshield, Leil, and Hudibras	71
X · Bladud Practices Magic	72
XI · Leir Divides the Kingdom among His Daughters	73
XII · Leir, Deprived of Power, Goes to Gaul	78
XIII · Cordelia Receives Her Father Kindly	83
XIV · Leir Recovers His Kingdom	84
XV · The Deaths of Cordelia and Marganus	85
XVI · The Brothers Porrex and Ferrex at War	88
XVII · Dunwallo Molmutius and His Laws	90

BOOK III

I · The Quarrel of Brennius and Belinus	93
II · Brennius' Sea Fight with Guichthlacus	95
III · Belinus Routs Brennius, Who Goes to Gaul	97
IV · The King of Denmark Released	99
V · Belinus Confirms the Molmutine Laws	100
VI · Brennius Becomes Duke of the Allobroges	102
VII · Their Mother Reconciles the Brothers	104
VIII · Having Subdued Gaul, They March on Rome	107
IX · The Romans Break the Treaty, and Rome Is Taken	108
X · Brennius in Italy, Belinus at Home	113
XI · Gurgiunt Brabtruc Subdues the Danes	115
XII · Ireland Is Given to the Barclenses	116

BOOK III

(continued)

XIII · Guithelinus and the Martian Law	117
XIV · The Kings after Guithelinus	118
XV · A Beast Devours Morvidus	119
XVI · Gorbonianus, the Most Just of Kings	121
XVII · Arthgallo Deposed and Restored	122
XVIII · Elidurus Reigns Again	125
XIX · Thirty-Three Kings after Elidurus	127
XX · Lud, Nennius, and Cassibellaunus	129

BOOK IV

I · Julius Caesar Comes to Britain	131
II · Cassibellaunus' Letter to Caesar	133
III · Cassibellaunus Defeats Caesar	134
IV · Nennius Dies of Caesar's Blow	138
V · Caesar Returns to Gaul without Glory	139
VI · Iron Stakes in the Thames	141
VII · Cassibellaunus Routs Caesar Again	142
VIII · Evelinus Kills Hirelglas	144
IX · Cassibellaunus, Besieged, Sues for Peace	149
X · Androgeus Persuades Caesar to Make Peace	154
XI · Tenuantius Becomes King	156
XII · The Emperor Claudius Comes to Britain	157
XIII · Hamo Kills Guiderius	158
XIV · Arviragus, Made King, Submits to Claudius	160
XV · Arviragus Marries Genuissa	162
XVI · Arviragus Renews the War	164
XVII · Marius Defeats Rodric, Leader of the Picts	167
XVIII · Coillus Takes the Kingdom	169

BOOK IV

(continued)

XIX · Lucius, the First Christian King	170
XX · The Two Bishops Return to Rome	172

BOOK V

I · Lucius Endows the Churches	173
II · Severus and Fulgenius	174
III · Carausius Seizes the Throne of Britain	177
IV · Carausius, Allectus, and Asclepiodotus	179
V · Diocletian's Persecution	182
VI · Coel, Helena, and Constantius	185
VII · The Romans Appeal to Constantine	187
VIII · Constantine Wins the Empire	189
IX · Maximianus Is Chosen for the Kingdom	192
X · Maximianus Comes to Britain	195
XI · Maximianus Wins the King's Daughter	199
XII · Maximianus Invades Armorica	202
XIII · The City of Rennes Is Taken	204
XIV · Maximianus Rules from Trier	206
XV · Conan Sends to Britain for Wives	207
XVI · The Eleven Thousand Virgins	209

BOOK VI

I · Gratian Killed; the Britons Appeal to Rome	212
II · Guethelinus Urges the Britons to Arms	214
III · Guanius and Melga Invade Again	217
IV · Guethelinus Asks Aldroenus for Help	220
V · Constantine, King of Britain	224
VI · Constans Takes the Kingdom	225
VII · Vortigern Plots to Depose Constans	227

BOOK VI

(continued)

VIII · Constans Is Murdered	232
IX · Vortigern Takes the Crown	233
X · Hengist and Horsa Come to Britain	234
XI · Hengist Wins Land	238
XII · Vortigern Marries Rowena	241
XIII · Germanus, Lupus, and Vortimer	244
XIV · Vortimer Dies of Sickness	248
XV · The Treachery of the Long Knives	250
XVI · Vortigern Ransomed	254
XVII · The Youth with No Father	256
XVIII · Merlin's Mother	258
XIX · Merlin Advises the King on the Tower	260

BOOK VII

I · The Author's Preface	263
II · To Alexander	264
III · The Prophecy of Merlin	266
IV · The Prophecy of Merlin Continued	276

BOOK VIII

I · Vortigern Asks Merlin about His Death	289
II · Aurelius Ambrosius Burns Vortigern	291
III · The Praises of Aurelius Ambrosius	294
IV · Hengist Marches against Ambrosius	296
V · The Battle of Hengist and Ambrosius	298
VI · Eldol Takes Hengist Alive	301
VII · Eldol Beheads Hengist	303
VIII · Octa Surrenders at York	304
IX · Aurelius Restores the Kingdom	306

BOOK VIII

(continued)

X · The Giants' Dance	308
XI · Uther Pendragon Sails to Ireland	310
XII · The Giants' Dance Brought to Britain	312
XIII · Pascentius Brings Back the Saxons	315
XIV · The Death of Aurelius Ambrosius	317
XV · How the Comet Foretold Uther's Reign	321
XVI · Pascentius and Gillomanus Killed	322
XVII · Uther Pendragon Becomes King of Britain	324
XVIII · Octa and Eosa Are Captured in Battle	325
XIX · Uther and Igera	329
XX · Gorlois Is Killed, and Uther Marries Igera	335
XXI · Octa and Eosa Renew the War	337
XXII · Uther Carried to Battle in a Litter	339
XXIII · Octa and Eosa Killed	340
XXIV · Uther Dies from a Poisoned Spring	343

BOOK IX

I · Arthur Besieges Colgrin	345
II · Hoel Comes to Help Arthur	349
III · Arthur Subdues the Saxons	350
IV · The Battle of Bath	353
V · The Saxons Surrender to Cador	357
VI · Loch Lomond	358
VII · Arthur Tells Hoel of the Wonderful Lakes	361
VIII · Arthur Restores York	362
IX · Arthur Restores Auguselus, Urian, and Lot	363
X · Arthur Conquers Ireland and the Islands	365
XI · Arthur Conquers Norway and Gaul	366
XII · The Court at the City of the Legions	373

BOOK IX

(continued)

XIII · The Crowning of Arthur	377
XIV · Arthur Enriches All with Gifts	381
XV · Lucius Tiberius Sends a Letter to Arthur	382
XVI · Arthur Takes Counsel	386
XVII · Hoel Gives His Opinion on the Roman War	389
XVIII · Auguselus' Opinion	391
XIX · All Agree on War	392
XX · Arthur Prepares for War	394

BOOK X

I · Lucius Gathers the East	395
II · Arthur's Dream at Hamo's Port	396
III · Arthur Kills the Giant	398
IV · Petreius Cotta Captured	405
V · The Romans Ambush the Escort	412
VI · The Valley of Saussy	416
VII · Arthur Exhorts His Knights	419
VIII · Lucius Addresses His Soldiers	421
IX · The Battle with the Romans	425
X · Hoel and Gawain	429
XI · The Death of Lucius Tiberius	431
XII · Some Romans Flee and Others Surrender	435
XIII · The Dead Are Buried	436

BOOK XI

I · Mordred Driven to Winchester	438
II · The Battle of Cambula	441
III · The Saxons Rebel	446
IV · Constantine and Mordred's Sons	447
V · Conan Takes the Throne	448

BOOK XI

(continued)

VI · Vortiporius Succeeds Conan	449
VII · King Malgo's Vice	449
VIII · Careticus and Gormund	450
IX · The Author's Reproach to the Britons	452
X · The Britons Flee to Cornwall and Wales	454
XI · So the Britons Lose the Kingdom	455
XII · Augustine Comes to Britain	456
XIII · Ethelfrid Kills the Monks of Bangor	458

BOOK XII

I · Cadvan and Ethelfrid	461
II · Cadwallo and Edwin	463
III · The Anger between Cadwallo and Edwin	466
IV · Edwin Drives Cadwallo from the Kingdom	467
V · The Speech of King Salomon of Armorica	471
VI · Cadwallo's Reply	473
VII · Brian Kills Edwin's Magus	476
VIII · Cadwallo Captures Penda	479
IX · Cadwallo Kills Osric and Aedan in Battle	481
X · Oswald Becomes King of Northumbria	482
XI · Oswy Submits to Cadwallo	484
XII · Margadud Counsels Cadwallo	486
XIII · Penda Is Killed by Oswy	487
XIV · Cadwallo's Son Cadwallader Succeeds	489
XV · Cadwallader's Lament	490
XVI · The Saxons Take All Britain	493
XVII · An Angel Forbids the Return	494
XVIII · Cadwallader Goes to Rome and Dies There	496
XIX · Ivor and Ini Harass the Saxons in Vain	497
XX · The Author Ends His History	499

BOOK I

Roberto comiti Claudiocestriæ epistola dedicatoria

I · DEDICATION TO ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER

Geoffrey marvels that Gildas and Bede say nothing of the kings of Britain before Christ, or of Arthur and his successors. Walter, archdeacon of Oxford, offers him a very old book in the British tongue telling their deeds in order, and Geoffrey translates it into Latin in a plain style. He commends the work to Robert, earl of Gloucester, son of King Henry, for correction.

Cum multa mecum et de multis sæpius animo revolvens, when many-things with-myself and about many more-often in-mind turning-over in historiam regum Britanniae inciderem: in mirum contuli, into the-history of-the-kings of-Britain I-happened into wonder I-brought quod intra mentionem quam de eis Gildas et Beda luculento that within the-mention which about them Gildas and Bede in-a-lucid tractatu fecerant, nihil de regibus qui ante incarnationem treatise had-made nothing about the-kings who before the-incarnation Christi Britanniam inhabitaverant: nihil etiam de Arturo, of-Christ Britain had-inhabited nothing even about Arthur cæterisque compluribus qui post incarnationem successerunt, and-the-others very-many who after the-incarnation succeeded reperissem: cum et gesta eorum digna eternitatis laude I-had-found although both the-deeds of-them worthy of-eternity of-praise constarent, et a multis populis quasi inscripta jucunde et stood and by many peoples as-if written pleasantly and memoriter prædicentur. Talia mihi et de talibus multoties from-memory are-proclaimed such-things to-me and about such many-times cogitanti, obtulit Walterus Oxinefordensis archidiaconus, thinking offered Walter of-Oxford archdeacon vir in Oratoria arte atque in exoticis historiis eruditus, a-man in oratorical art and in foreign histories learned quendam Britannici sermonis librum vetustissimum, qui a a-certain of-British of-speech book most-ancient which from Bruto primo rege Britonum usque ad Cadwaladrum filium Brutus first king of-the-Britons all-the-way to Cadwallader son Cadwalonis, actus omnium continue et ex ordine perpulcris of-Cadwallo the-acts of-all continuously and in order in-most-beautiful orationibus proponebat. Rogatu illius itaque ductus, tametsi speeches set-forth at-the-request of-him and-so led although intra alienos hortulos falerata verba non collegerim, agresti within others' gardens decked-out words not I-may-have-gathered with-rustic tamen stylo propriisque calamis contentus, codicem illum yet style and-with-my-own pens content the-book that in Latinum sermonem transferre curavi. Nam si ampullosis into the-Latin speech to-translate I-took-care for if with-bombastic dictionibus paginam illevissem: tædium legentibus ingererem, diction the-page I-had-smeared weariness on-the-readers I-would-heap-on dum magis in exponendis verbis quam in historia intelligenda, while more in explaining words than in the-history understanding ipsos commorari oporteret. Opusculo igitur meo, Roberte them to-linger it-behooved to-the-little-work therefore my O-Robert dux Claudiocestriæ, faveas, ut sic te ductore, te duke of-Gloucester may-you-show-favor that thus you as-guide you monitore corrigatur, ut non ex Galfredi Monumetensis as-adviser it-may-be-corrected so-that not from of-Geoffrey of-Monmouth fonticulo censeatur exortum, sed sale Minervæ tuæ the-little-spring it-may-be-thought sprung but with-the-salt of-Minerva your conditum: illius censeatur editio, quem Henricus illustris seasoned of-him it-may-be-thought the-edition whom Henry illustrious rex Anglorum generavit; quem philosophia liberalibus artibus king of-the-English begot whom philosophy in-the-liberal arts erudit: quem innata probitas in militia militibus præfecit: trained whom inborn prowess in knighthood over-the-knights set unde Britannia tibi nunc temporibus nostris, ac si alterum whence Britain to-you now in-times our as if another Henricum adepta, interno gratulatur affectu.

Henry having-obtained with-inward congratulates affection

De primis Britanniae incolis

II · THE FIRST INHABITANTS OF BRITAIN

Britain, best of islands, lies in the western Ocean between Gaul and Ireland, rich in metals, fields, forests, meadows, springs, and fish-filled rivers, with the Thames, the Severn, and the Humber for its arms. Once it held twenty-eight cities. Five peoples now live in it, but the Britons held it from sea to sea until God's vengeance on their pride made them yield to the Picts and Saxons.

Britannia insularum optima, in occidentali Oceano inter Britain of-islands the-best in the-western Ocean between Galliam est et Hiberniam sita: octingenta millia in longum:

Gaul is and Ireland situated eight-hundred miles in length ducenta vero in latum continens: quicquid mortalium two-hundred indeed in breadth containing whatever of-mortals usui congruit, indeficienti fertilitate ministrat. Omni enim to-the-use is-fitting with-unfailing fertility it-supplies with-every for genere metalli fœcunda, campos late pansos habet, collesque kind of-metal fruitful plains widely spread-out it-has and-hills præpollenti culturæ aptos, in quibus frugum diversitates surpassing for-cultivation fit in which of-crops the-varieties ubertate glebæ temporibus suis proveniunt. Habet et by-the-richness of-the-soil in-seasons their-own come-forth it-has also nemora universis ferarum generibus repleta: quorum in saltibus forests with-all of-wild-beasts kinds filled of-which in the-glades et in alternandis animalium pastibus gramina conveniunt, and in alternating of-animals pastures grasses are-suitable et advolantibus apibus flores diversorum colorum mella and to-the-flying-to bees flowers of-various colors honeys distribuunt. Habet prata sub aëriis montibus amœno situ distribute it-has meadows under airy mountains in-a-pleasant situation virentia, in quibus fontes lucidissimi per nitidos rivos leni green in which springs most-clear through bright streams with-gentle murmure manantes, suaves sopores in ripis accubantibus murmur flowing sweet sleeps on the-banks to-those-lying irritant. Porro lacubus atque piscosis fluviis irrigua est: et invite further with-lakes and with-fish-filled rivers watered it-is and præter meridianæ plagæ fretum quo ad Gallias navigatur, besides of-the-southern region the-strait by-which to the-Gauls it-is-sailed tria nobilia flumina, Tamesis videlicet et Sabrinæ, necnon three noble rivers of-the-Thames namely and of-the-Severn nor-not et Humbræ, velut tria brachia extendit: quibus transmarina also of-the-Humber like three arms it-stretches-out by-which overseas commercia ex universis nationibus ejusdem navigio feruntur. commerce from all nations of-the-same by-ship are-carried Bis denis etiam bisque quaternis civitatibus olim decorata twice with-ten also and-twice with-four cities once adorned erat: quarum quædam dirutis mœnibus in desertis locis it-was of-which some ruined walls in deserted places squalescunt: quædam vero adhuc integræ templa sanctorum lie-squalid some indeed still whole temples of-saints cum turribus perpulcra proceritate erecta continent, in with towers of-most-beautiful height raised contain in quibus religiosi cœtus virorum ac mulierum obsequium which religious gatherings of-men and of-women service Deo juxta Christianam traditionem præstant. Postremo to-God according-to the-Christian tradition perform finally quinque inhabitatur populis: Romanis videlicet atque Britannis, by-five it-is-inhabited peoples by-Romans namely and by-Britons Saxonibus, Pictis, et Scotis. Ex quibus Britones olim ante by-Saxons by-Picts and by-Scots of whom the-Britons once before ceteros a mari usque ad mare insederunt: donec ultione the-others from sea all-the-way to sea settled until vengeance divina ob ipsorum superbiam superveniente, Pictis et divine on-account-of their-own pride coming-upon to-the-Picts and Saxonibus cesserunt. Qualiter vero et unde applicuerint, to-the-Saxons they-yielded how moreover and whence they-may-have-landed restat nunc prælibare, ut in sequentibus latius explicabitur. it-remains now to-touch-on as in what-follows more-widely it-will-be-explained

Brutus, post parentes occisos exul, Græciam petit

III • BRUTUS, EXILED, GOES TO GREECE

Aeneas comes to Italy, and his grandson Silvius' child is foretold by the Magi to kill both parents. The boy Brutus' mother dies at his birth, and at fifteen he kills his father with a stray arrow while hunting and is driven from Italy. In Greece he finds the descendants of Helenus held in slavery by King Pandrasus, wins renown, and agrees to lead them with the help of Assaracus, a young Greek noble born of a Trojan mother.

Æneas post Trojanum bellum, excidium urbis cum Ascanio Aeneas after the-Trojan war the-destruction of-the-city with Ascanius diffugiens, Italiam navigio adivit. Ibi cum a Latino rege fleeing Italy by-ship reached there when by Latinus king honorifice receptus esset, invidit Turnus rex Rutulorum, et honorably received he-had-been envied Turnus king of-the-Rutulians and cum illo congressus est. Dimicantibus illis, prævaluit Æneas, with him engaged he-has fighting them prevailed Aeneas peremptoque Turno, regnum Italiæ et Laviniam filiam and-killed Turnus the-kingdom of-Italy and Lavinia daughter Latini est adeptus. Denique suprema die ipsius superveniente, of-Latinus has obtained finally with-the-last day his coming-upon Ascanius regia potestate sublimatus, condidit Albam supra Ascanius with-royal power raised founded Alba above Tiberim, genuitque filium, cui nomen erat Silvius; hic the-Tiber and-begot a-son to-whom name was Silvius this-one furtivæ Veneri indulgens, quandam Laviniaë neptem uxorem to-stealthy love indulging a-certain of-Lavinia niece as-wife duxit, eamque fecit prægnantem. Cumque id patri Ascanio led and-her made pregnant and-when this to-the-father Ascanius compertum esset, præcepit Magis suis explorare quem sexum discovered had-been he-ordered the-Magi his-own to-find-out which sex puella concepisset. Certitudine ergo rei comperta, the-girl had-conceived the-certainty therefore of-the-matter found-out dixerunt Magi ipsam gravidam esse puero, qui patrem said the-Magi her pregnant to-be with-a-boy who father et matrem interficeret: pluribus quoque terris peragratis in and mother would-kill many also lands traveled-through in exilium, ad summum tandem culmen honoris perveniret. Nec exile to the-highest at-last peak of-honor would-come nor illos fefellit vaticinium suum. Nam ut dies partus accessit, them deceived prophecy their-own for as the-day of-birth approached edidit mulier puerum, et in nativitate ejus mortua est. bore the-woman a-boy and in the-birth his died she-has Traditur autem ille nutrici, vocaturque Brutus. Postremo is-banded-over moreover he to-a-nurse and-is-called Brutus finally cum ter quini anni elapsi essent, comitabatur juvenis when three-times five years elapsed had accompanied the-youth patrem in venando, ipsumque inopino ictu sagittæ the-father in hunting and-him with-an-unexpected stroke of-arrow interfecit. Nam cum famuli cervos in occursum eorum killed for when the-servants the-stags into the-meeting of-them ducerent, Brutus telum in ipsos dirigere affectans, genitorem were-driving Brutus a-weapon at them to-direct aiming his-father sub pectore percussit. Quo mortuo expulsus est ab Italia, under the-chest struck whom dead driven-out he-was from Italy indignantibus consanguineis ipsum tantum facinus fecisse. indignant the-kinsmen him so-great a-crime to-have-done Exulans ergo adivit Græciam: invenitque progeniem Heleni exiled therefore he-reached Greece and-found the-offspring of-Helenus filii Priami, quæ sub potestate Pandrasi Græcorum regis son of-Priam which under the-power of-Pandrasus of-the-Greeks king in servitutem tenebatur. Pyrrhus etenim Achillis filius post in servitude was-held Pyrrhus for of-Achilles son after Trojæ eversionem, prædictum Helenum compluresque alios of-Troy the-overthrow the-aforesaid Helenus and-very-many others secum in vinculis adduxerat. Et ut necem patris in with-himself in chains had-brought and so-that the-death of-the-father on ipsos vindicaret, in captione teneri præceperat. Agnitæque them he-might-avenge in captivity to-be-held he-had-ordered and-recognized veterum concivium prosapia, moratus est Brutus apud eos. In of-the-old fellow-citizens the-lineage stayed has Brutus among them into tantum autem militia et probitate vigere cœpit, ita ut a so-great moreover in-knighthood and in-prowess to-flourish he-began so that by regibus et ducibus præ omni juventute patriæ amaretur. kings and dukes beyond all the-youth of-the-country he-was-loved Erat enim inter sapientes sapiens: inter bellicosos bellicosus: he-was for among the-wise wise among the-warlike warlike et quicquid auri vel argenti sive ornamentorum acquirebat, and whatever of-gold or of-silver or of-ornaments he-acquired totum suis commilitonibus erogabat. Divulgata itaque per all to-his-own comrades he-paid-out spread-abroad and-so through universas nationes ipsius fama: Trojani cœperunt ad ipsum all nations his fame the-Trojans began to him confluere: orantes ut ipso duce a servitute Græcorum to-flow-together begging that with-him as-leader from servitude of-the-Greeks liberarentur: quod facile fieri asserebant, cum in tantum they-might-be-freed which easily to-be-done they-asserted since into so-great jam in patria multiplicati essent, ita ut septem millia now in the-country multiplied they-had-been so that seven thousand (exceptis parvulis et mulieribus) jam computarentur. Præterea excepted the-little-ones and the-women now they-were-counted besides erat quidam nobilissimus juvenis in Græcia, nomine there-was a-certain most-noble youth in Greece by-name Assaracus: qui partibus eorum quoque favebat. Ex Trojana Assaracus who to-the-side of-them also favored from a-Trojan namque matre natus erat: fiduciamque in illis habebat for mother born he-had-been and-trust in them he-had maximam: ut auxilio eorum inquietudini Græcorum resistere greatest that with-the-help of-them to-the-harassment of-the-Greeks to-resist quivisset. Arguebat enim eum frater ejus propter tria he-might-be-able accused for him the-brother his on-account-of three castella quæ ipsi moriens pater donaverat, quod ea castles which to-him dying the-father had-given that them auferre conabatur: quia ex concubina natus fuerat. Erat to-take-away he-was-trying because of a-concubine born he-had-been was autem frater patre et matre Græcus: asciveratque regem moreover the-brother by-father and by-mother Greek and-had-taken-on the-king ceterosque Græcos parti suæ fautores. Inspiciens ergo and-the-other Greeks to-the-side his-own as-supporters seeing therefore Brutus et virorum multitudinem, et Assaraci castella quæ Brutus both of-men the-multitude and of-Assaracus the-castles which sibi patebant; petitioni eorum securius acquievit. to-him lay-open to-the-petition of-them more-securely assented

Brutus epistolam ad Pandrasum mittit

IV · BRUTUS' LETTER TO PANDRASUS

Chosen leader, Brutus fortifies Assaracus' towns and takes the Trojans into the forests and hills. He writes to Pandrasus that a people of Dardanus' race prefers to live on flesh and herbs in freedom than in luxury under his yoke. He asks the king either to let them live free in the forests or to let them depart to other lands.

Electus igitur in ducem convocat undique Trojanos et chosen therefore as leader he-calls-together from-everywhere the-Trojans and Assaraci oppida munit. Ipse vero et Assaracus cum tota of-Assaracus the-towns he-fortifies he-himself but and Assaracus with the-whole multitudine virorum et mulierum quæ eis adhærebat, nemora multitude of-men and of-women which to-them clung the-forests et colles occupant. Deinde Brutus literas suas in hæc verba and hills occupy then Brutus letters his-own in these words regi derexit. "Pandraso Græcorum regi, Brutus reliquiarum to-the-king directed to-Pandrasus of-the-Greeks king Brutus of-the-remnants Trojæ dux, salutem. Quia indignum fuerat gentem præclaro of-Troy leader greeting because unworthy it-had-been a-people from-a-famous genere Dardani ortam, aliter in regno tuo tractari quam race of-Dardanus sprung otherwise in kingdom your to-be-treated than serenitas nobilitatis expeteret: sese intra abdita nemorum the-serenity of-nobility would-demand itself within the-hidden-places of-the-forests recepit. Præferabat namque ferino ritu, carnibus videlicet it-has-withdrawn it-preferred for in-wild-beast fashion on-flesh namely et herbis vitam cum libertate sustentare, quam universis deliciis and on-herbs life with liberty to-sustain than by-all delights refocillata, diutius sub iugo servitutis tuæ permanere; quod si refreshed longer under the-yoke of-servitude your to-remain but if celsitudinem tuæ potentiæ offendit; non est ei imputandum, the-loftiness of-your power offends not is to-it to-be-imputed sed venia adhibenda: cum cujusque captivi communis sit but pardon to-be-applied since of-every captive common is intentio, velle ad pristinam dignitatem redire. Misericordia the-intent to-wish to former dignity to-return with-mercy igitur super eam motus, amissam libertatem largiri digneris: therefore over it moved the-lost liberty to-bestow may-you-deign et saltus nemorum quos, ut servitutem diffugeret, and the-glades of-the-forests which so-that servitude it-might-flee occupavit, eam incolere permittas. Sin autem, concede ut it-occupied it to-inhabit may-you-permit if-not moreover grant that ad aliarum terrarum nationes cum tua diligentia abscedant.” to of-other lands the-nations with your diligence they-may-depart Brutus inopinato impetu Pandrasum fugat, fratrem Pandrasi Antigonum cum Anacleto capit

V • BRUTUS ROUTS PANDRASUS AND CAPTURES ANTIGONUS

Pandrasus marches against the Trojans, but Brutus falls on his army by surprise from the town of Sparatinum and drives the Greeks into the river Akalon, where many drown. Pandrasus' brother Antigonus rallies the fugitives and turns to fight, but the unarmed Greeks are cut down. Antigonus and his comrade Anacletus are taken prisoner.

Pandrasus ergo agnita literarum sententia, ultra modum Pandrasus therefore recognized of-the-letters the-meaning beyond measure admiratus est ipsos, quos in servitutem tenuerat, tanta wondered has them whom in servitude he-had-held with-so-great audacia abundasse, ut ei talia mandata dirigerent. boldness to-have-abounded that to-him such commands they-should-direct Convocato itaque procerum suorum concilio, exercitum colligere called-together and-so of-nobles his-own a-council an-army to-gather decrevit, ut ipsos persequeretur. Dum autem deserta in he-decided so-that them he-might-pursue while moreover the-deserts in quibus eos esse autumaverat: et oppidum Sparatinum peteret, which them to-be he-had-supposed and the-town Sparatinum he-was-seeking egressus est Brutus cum tribus millibus virorum, ipsumque gone-out has Brutus with three thousand of-men and-him nihil huiusmodi præmeditatum ex improviso invasit. Audito nothing of-this-kind having-foreseen from unforeseen attacked heard namque adventu ipsius, sese in prædicto oppido præcedenti for the-arrival his himself into the-aforsaid town in-the-preceding nocte immiserat: ut in ipsos inermes et sine ordine night he-had-put so-that upon them unarmed and without order ituros inopinam irruptionem faceret. Impetu itaque about-to-go an-unexpected inroad he-might-make with-an-attack and-so facto invadunt acriter Trojani, et stragem ingerere nituntur. made attack fiercely the-Trojans and slaughter to-heap-on strive Porro Græci confestim stupefacti in omnes partes dilabuntur; further the-Greeks forthwith stunned into all directions scatter et rege suo præcedente, fluvium Akalon, qui prope and with-the-king their-own going-before the-river Akalon which nearby fluebat, transire festinant. At in transeundo intra voraginem flowed to-cross they-hurry but in crossing within the-whirlpool fluctus periclitantur. Quos diffugientes, Brutus infestat, of-the-flood they-are-imperiled whom fleeing Brutus harasses infestatos vero partim in undis, partim in ripa prosternit: et the-harassed indeed partly in the-waves partly on the-bank he-lays-low and nunc hac nunc illac discurrens, duplicem necem illis ingestam now here now there running-about the-double death on-them heaped esse lætatur. Quod ut Antigonus Pandrasi frater intuitus est, to-be he-rejoices which as Antigonus of-Pandrasus brother beheld has ultra modum doluit: vagantesque socios in turmam revocavit: beyond measure he-grieved and-the-wandering comrades into a-troop he-called-back celerique impetu in sævientes Troës reversus est. Malebat and-with-swift attack against the-raging Trojans turned he-has he-preferred namque resistendo interire, quam ignavam fugam faciens, for by-resisting to-perish than cowardly flight making luteis gurgitibus submergi. Densa igitur acie incedens, in-muddy whirlpools to-be-drowned with-dense therefore battle-line advancing socios viriliter resistere hortabatur: letiferaque tela totis the-comrades manfully to-resist he-urged and-deadly weapons with-all viribus contorquet: sed parum vel minimum profecit. Nam strength he-hurls but little or very-little he-achieved for Troës armis muniti erant: ceteri vero inermes. Unde the-Trojans with-arms fortified were the-others but unarmed whence audacius insistentes cædem miserandam inferebant: nec eos more-boldly pressing-on slaughter pitiable they-inflicted nor them hoc modo inquietare desierunt donec cunctis fere interfectis, in-this manner to-harass they-ceased until with-all almost killed Antigonum et Anacletum ejusdem socium retinuerunt.

Antigonus and Anacletus of-the-same the-comrade they-held Pandrasus urbem Sparatinum oppugnat

VI • PANDRASUS BESIEGES SPARATINUM

Brutus garrisons the town with six hundred knights and returns to the forests. Pandrasus gathers his scattered men and besieges Sparatinum, thinking Brutus is inside with the captives. He surrounds the walls, cuts off the exits and the rivers, batters the walls with rams, and sets guards on his camp at night.

Brutus vero potitus victoria, oppidum sexcentis militibus Brutus but having-gained of-the-victory the-town with-six-hundred knights munivit: petivitque nemorum abdita: ubi Trojana plebs fortified and-sought of-the-forests the-hidden-places where the-Trojan common-people præsidium illius expectabat. At Pandrasus ob fugam the-protection his awaited but Pandrasus on-account-of the-flight suam fratrisque captionem anxius: nocte illa populum his-own and-of-the-brother the-capture troubled on-night that the-people dilapsum resociare vacavit. Et cum postera lux redisset, scattered to-regather was-busy and when the-next light had-retuned obsidere oppidum cum resociato populo progressus est. to-besiege the-town with the-regathered people advanced he-has Arbitrabatur enim Brutum se immisisse intra ipsum cum he-supposed for Brutus himself to-have-put within it with Antigono ceterisque captivis quos ceperat. Ut ergo ad moenia Antigonus and-the-other captives whom he-had-taken as therefore to the-walls accessit, explorato castelli situ, distribuit exercitum suum he-approached explored of-the-castle the-situation he-distributed the-army his-own per turmas: diversisque locis in circuitu locavit. Indixit etiam through troops and-in-various places in the-circuit placed he-ordered also ut alii egressum inclusis abnegarent, alii cursus fluminum that some the-exit to-the-shut-in should-deny others the-courses of-the-rivers averterent, alii crebris arietibus ceterisque machinis should-turn-aside others with-frequent rams and-the-other engines murorum compagem dissolverent. Qui præcepta effectibus of-the-walls the-joining should-break-up who the-orders with-deeds exequentes, omni nisu contendebant quibus modis obsessos carrying-out with-all effort strove by-what means the-besieged crudelius infestarent. Superveniente autem nocte, audaciores more-cruelly they-might-harass coming-on moreover night the-bolder-ones eligebant, qui dum ceteri labori fessi quietem soporis caperent, they-chose who while the-others from-labor tired the-rest of-sleep took castra et tentoria ab hostium furtiva incursione tuerentur. the-camp and tents from of-the-enemies stealthy incursion should-guard

Cives Sparatinenses auxilium a Bruto petunt

VII · THE TOWNSMEN ASK BRUTUS FOR HELP

The besieged hold off the Greek engines with fire and boiling water, but hunger drives them to send to Brutus for help. Too weak for a pitched battle, Brutus plans a night attack on the sleeping camp. With a drawn sword he tells Anacletus that he and Antigonus will die unless he lures the Greek watchmen into the forest with a story that Antigonus lies hidden there in chains.

At obsessi, in edito murorum stantes, totis viribus but the-besieged on the-height of-the-walls standing with-all strength nituntur ut hostium machinationes contrariis machinationibus strive that of-the-enemies the-contrivances with-opposing contrivances repellant, nunc tela, nunc sulphureas tedas ejicientes, sese they-may-repel now weapons now sulphurous torches throwing-out themselves unanimiter defendere intendunt. Cum autem parata testudine with-one-mind to-defend they-aim when moreover prepared the-tortoise murus suffoderetur, Græco igne atque calidarum aquarum the-wall was-being-undermined with-Greek fire and of-hot waters aspergine hostes retrocedere cgebant. Cibi tamen penuria with-a-sprinkling the-enemies to-fall-back they-forced of-food yet by-the-want et quotidiano labore afflicti, legatum ad Brutum miserunt, and by-daily labor afflicted an-envoy to Brutus they-sent postulantes ut eis in auxilium festinaret. Timebant enim ne asking that to-them to help he-should-hurry they-feared for lest in debilitatem redacti oppidum deserere cogerentur. Brutus into weakness reduced the-town to-abandon they-might-be-forced Brutus ergo opem subvectare affectans, internis angoribus cruciatur, therefore aid to-bring-up desiring with-inward anguish is-tormented quia tot milites non habebat quot ad campestre because as-many knights not he-bad as-many-as for an-open-field prælium committendum sufficerent. Callido usus consilio, battle to-be-joined would-suffice crafty having-used counsel proponit castra hostium noctu adire, ipsosque soporatos, he-proposes the-camp of-the-enemies by-night to-approach and-them asleep deceptis eorum vigilibus, interficere. Quoniam autem id deceived their the-watchmen to-kill since moreover this fieri non posse sciebat absque alicujus Græci assensu et to-be-done not to-be-able he-knew without of-some Greek assent and auxilio, Anacletum socium Antigoni ad se vocavit: illumque help Anacletus comrade of-Antigonus to himself be-called and-him evaginato gladio in hunc modum affatus est; “Egregie juvenis, drawn sword in this manner addressed he-has O-excellent youth finis vitæ tuæ Antigonique adest, nisi ea quæ tibi the-end of-life your and-of-Antigonus is-at-hand unless those-things which to-you præcipiam executus voluntati meæ fideliter acquieveris.

I-shall-order having-carried-out to-will my faithfully you-will-have-assented Affecto enim in hac sequenti nocte castra Græcorum adire, I-desire for on this following night the-camp of-the-Greeks to-approach ut ipsos inopinata cæde afficiam. Sed timeo ne eorum so-that them with-unexpected slaughter I-may-afflict but I-fear lest their vigiles, comperto dolo, inceptum impedian. Quia ergo watchmen discovered the-trick the-undertaking may-binder because therefore verti arma in illos prius oporteret: desiderarem illos to-be-turned arms against them first it-would-beboove I-should-wish them per te decipere, ut ad ceteros tutiorem aditum aggrediendi through you to-deceive so-that to the-others a-safer approach of-attacking haberem. Tu vero callide negotium hujusmodi agens, in I-might-have you indeed craftily business of-this-kind doing in secunda noctis hora vade ad obsidionem, et quemque the-second of-the-night hour go to the-siege and each-one fallacibus verbis demulcendo, dices te Antigonum a with-deceitful words by-soothing you-will-say you Antigonus from carceribus meis abduxisse usque ad convallem nemorum, prisons my to-have-led-away all-the-way to the-valley of-the-forests et in eadem illum inter frutices delitere: nec longius abire and in the-same him among the-bushes to-lie-hid nor farther to-go-away posse propter pedicas, quibus eum simulabis impeditum; to-be-able on-account-of the-fetters by-which him you-will-pretend hampered deinde duces eos ad exitum nemoris quasi eum liberaturos, then you-will-lead them to the-exit of-the-forest as-if him about-to-free ubi ego cum armata manu adero paratus illos perimere.” where I with an-armed band shall-be-present ready them to-destroy Anacletus, præ mortis timore, exercitum Græcorum prodit

VIII • ANACLETUS BETRAYS THE GREEK ARMY

In fear of death, Anacletus goes to the Greek watchmen, claims to have escaped from the Trojans, and begs them to come and free Antigonus. One recognizes him, and they follow him into the forest, where Brutus' armed men cut them down. Brutus then divides his men into three bands to enter the camp's quarters in silence and wait for the trumpet he will sound once he holds the king's tent.

Anacletus igitur viso gladio qui inter hæc verba morti suæ Anacletus therefore seen the-sword which among these words over-death his-own imminebat, continuo perterritus, jurejurando promisit sese hung at-once terrified by-oath promised himself præceptum executurum, si sibi et Antigono diuturnior vita the-order about-to-carry-out if to-himself and to-Antigonus longer life concederetur. Confirmato denique fœdere, in secunda noctis should-be-granted confirmed finally the-pact in the-second of-the-night hora quæ jam instabat, versus, obsidionem jussum iter arripuit. hour which now was-pressing towards the-siege the-ordered route he-took Cumque tandem prope castra incederet, occurrunt undique and-when at-last near the-camp he-was-advancing run-up from-everywhere vigiles, qui abdita locorum explorabant: quæruntque watchmen who the-hidden-parts of-the-places were-exploring and-ask ejus adventus causam: et utrum ad prodendum exercitum his of-coming the-cause and whether for betraying the-army advenisset. Quibus ille ingentem lætitiā simulans, in hæc he-had-come to-whom he huge joy feigning in these verba respondit: “Non equidem gentis meæ proditor venio, sed words answered not indeed of-people my a-betrayer I-come but carcerem Trojanorum evadens ad vos diffugio, orans ut mecum the-prison of-the-Trojans escaping to you I-flee begging that with-me ad nostrum Antigonum veniatis quem ex vinculis Bruti to our Antigonus you-may-come whom out-of the-chains of-Brutus eripui. Illum quidem pondere compedum detentum paulo ante I-snatched him indeed by-the-weight of-the-fetters held-back a-little before in exitu nemoris inter frutices delitere jussi: donec aliquos at the-exit of-the-forest among the-bushes to-lie-bid I-ordered until some invenirem, quos ad eum liberandum ducerem.” Dubitantibus I-might-find whom to him to-be-freed I-might-lead doubting autem illis utrum verum diceret, supervenit unus, qui eum moreover them whether true he-was-saying came-up one who him agnoverat, et salutato ipso, indicavit sociis quis esset. At had-recognized and greeted him showed to-the-comrades who he-was but illi nihil hæsitantes, ceteros, qui aberant, ocius advocaverunt: they nothing hesitating the-others who were-absent more-swiftly called et secuti sunt eum usque ad silvam, qua Antigonum and followed they-have him all-the-way to the-wood where Antigonus delitere prædixerat. Illis denique inter frutices progredientibus, to-lie-bid he-had-foretold them finally among the-bushes advancing emergit Brutus cum armatis catervis et impetu facto in emerges Brutus with armed bands and with-an-attack made upon ipsos ocius perterritos dirissima cæde affecit. Deinde them more-swiftly terrified with-most-dire slaughter he-afflicted then profectus est ad obsidionem, et divisit socios suos per set-out he-has to the-siege and divided the-comrades his-own into tres turmas, præcepitque ut singulæ singulas partes castrorum three troops and-ordered that each-one separate parts of-the-camp sapienter et sine tumultu adirent: nec intromissæ cædem wisely and without tumult should-approach nor let-in slaughter alicui ingererent, donec ipse cum sua cohorte regis on-anyone should-beap until he-himself with his-own cohort of-the-king tentorio potitus, lituum suum in signum ipsis sonaret. the-tent having-gained the-trumpet his-own as a-signal to-them should-sound

Brutus Pandrasum vivum capit

IX · BRUTUS TAKES PANDRASUS ALIVE

The Trojans slip into the camp, and at Brutus' signal they kill the sleepers in their beds. The waking Greeks flee in the dark without arms, dashing against rocks, breaking limbs, and drowning in the rivers, and hardly anyone escapes unhurt. The townsmen come out and double the slaughter.

Porro ut ipsos quicquid acturi erant edocuit: confestim further when them whatever about-to-do they-were he-had-taught forthwith mittunt se leviter intra castra, et jussas partes adepti, they-put themselves lightly within the-camp and the-ordered parts having-obtained signum promissum expectant; quod Brutus eis dare non the-signal promised they-await which Brutus to-them to-give not distulit, postquam stetit ante Pandrasi tentorium, quod super delayed after he-stood before of-Pandrasus the-tent which above omnia æstuabat aggredi. Quo audito enses ocus evaginant, all-things he-burned to-attack which heard swords more-swiftly they-draw cubilia sopitorum ingrediuntur, letiferos ictus ingeminant: et the-beds of-the-sleeping they-enter deadly blows they-redouble and nullam pietatem habentes, castra in hunc modum deambulant.

no pity having the-camp in this manner they-walk-through

Ad gemitus vero morientium evigilant ceteri, visisque at the-groans indeed of-the-dying wake-up the-others and-seen laniatoribus, velut oves ex improvise a lupis occupatæ, the-butchers like sheep from unforeseen by wolves seized stupescunt. Nihil enim præsidii expectabant, cum neque arma they-are-stunned nothing for of-protection they-expected since neither arms capiendi neque fugam faciendi congruum spatium haberent.

of-taking nor flight of-making fitting space they-had Discurrunt etiam sine armis inter armatos quo impetus eos they-run-about also without arms among the-armed where the-impulse them ducebat. Sed irruentibus hostibus continuo dilacerantur. Qui led but rushing-on the-enemies at-once they-are-torn-apart who semivivus evadebat, aviditate fugæ festinans, scopulis vel half-alive was-escaping with-eagerness of-flight hurrying against-rocks or arboribus et fruticibus allidebatur, et infelicem animam cum trees and bushes was-dashed and the-unhappy soul with sanguine emittebat. Qui solo clypeo vel quolibet alio tegmine blood was-sending-out who with-only shield or any other covering munitus, inter eosdem scopulos incidebat timore mortis, celer protected among the-same rocks was-falling from-fear of-death swift sub obscura nocte cadebat, cadentique vel brachia vel crura under dark night he-fell and-to-the-falling either arms or legs frangebantur. Cui neutrum horum contingebat, inscius quo were-broken to-whom neither of-these happened unknowing where fugam faceret, in prope fluentibus fluviis submergebatur.

flight he-should-make in nearby flowing rivers was-drowned

Vix aliquis illæsus abibat, quin aliquo infortunio periclitaretur.

scarcely anyone unburt went-away without by-some misfortune he-was-imperiled Oppidani quoque, agnito commilitonum adventu, egressi, the-townsmen also recognized of-the-comrades the-arrival having-gone-out cladem quæ dabatur duplicabant. the-disaster which was-being-given doubled Quid sit a Pandraso captivo præcipue petendum, consilium capiunt

X · THE COUNCIL OVER THE CAPTIVE PANDRASUS

Brutus binds the captive king, divides the spoils, buries the dead, and asks his nobles what to demand of Pandrasus. Mempricius advises against settling in Greece, where the kin of the slain would never cease their vengeance. He urges them to ask for the king's eldest daughter Ignoge as Brutus' wife, with gold, silver, ships, and grain, and leave to depart.

At Brutus tentorium regis (ut prædictum est) nactus, but Brutus the-tent of-the-king as said-before it-has-been having-got ipsum vincire et conservare vacavit. Sciebat enim sese magis him to-bind and to-keep was-busy he-knew for himself more vita regis quam morte adepturum quod affectaverat. by-the-life of-the-king than by-death about-to-obtain what he-had-desired Turma autem quæ cum eo erat non cessabat stragem facere, the-troop moreover which with him was not ceased slaughter to-make quæ partem quam adepta erat, usque ad internecionem which the-part which obtained it-had all-the-way to extermination deleverat. Ut igitur noctem in hunc modum consumpserat, had-destroyed when therefore the-night in this manner he-had-spent et sub luce auroræ tanta patuit populi ruina, Brutus and under the-light of-dawn so-great lay-open of-the-people the-ruin Brutus maximo gaudio fluctuans, sociis peracta cæde spolia with-greatest joy surging to-the-comrades completed the-slaughter the-spoils peremptorum juxta libitum suum tractare permisit; deinde of-the-slain according-to pleasure their-own to-handle permitted then cum rege oppidum ingreditur, expectaturus, dum gazas with the-king the-town he-enters about-to-wait while the-treasures distribueret. Quibus impertitis, munivit iterum castellum, he-distributed which shared-out he-fortified again the-castle cadaveraque sepulturæ dari præcepit: resociatisque catervis and-the-corpses to-burial to-be-given ordered and-regathered the-bands ad nemora cum læta victoria remeavit. Quæ ut tantam to the-forests with joyful victory returned which as so-great suorum animis infudit lætitiā, inclytus dux majores natu of-bis-own into-minds poured joy the-renowned leader the-greater by-birth convocavit, quæsitque ab eis quid a Pandraso petendum called-together and-asked from them what from Pandrasus to-be-sought laudarent; nam cum in potestate eorum positus esset, they-would-commend for since in the-power of-them placed he-was per omnia petitioni eorum acquiesceret, si liber abire in all-things to-the-petition of-them he-would-assent if free to-go-away sineretur. Mox illi diversis affectibus diversa cupientes, he-were-allowed soon they with-various feelings various-things desiring pars regni partem ad inhabitandum petere hortabatur, part of-the-kingdom a-part for inhabiting to-seek urged pars vero licentiam abeundi et ea quæ itineri part indeed leave of-going-away and those-things which for-the-journey suo utilia forent. Cumque diu in ambiguo extitissent, their-own useful would-be and-when long in doubt they-had-been surrexit unus ex illis Mempricius nomine, rogatoque silentio, rose-up one of them Mempricius by-name and-asked silence audientibus ceteris ait: "Ut quid hæsitatis, patres, in listening the-others says to what-end do-you-hesitate O-fathers in his quæ saluti vestræ reor accommoda? unum petendum these-things which for-safety your I-think fitting one-thing to-be-sought est, videlicet licentia abeundi, si vobis posterisque vestris is namely leave of-going-away if for-you and-for-descendants your eternam pacem habere desideratis. Nam si eo pacto vitam eternal peace to-have you-desire for if on-this condition life concesseritis Pandraso, ut per eum partem Græciæ you-will-have-granted to-Pandrasus so-that through him a-part of-Greece adepti inter Danaos manere velitis, nunquam diuturna having-obtained among the-Danaans to-remain you-should-wish never lasting pace fruimini, dum fratres, et filii, et nepotes eorum peace you-will-enjoy while the-brothers and sons and grandsons of-them quibus hesternam stragem intulistis, vobis immixti vel vicini on-whom yesterday's slaughter you-brought with-you mingled or neighbors fuerint. Semper enim necis parentum suorum memores, will-have-been always for of-the-death of-the-parents their-own mindful eterno vos habebunt odio: quibusvis etiam nugis incitati with-eternal you they-will-hold hatred by-any even trifles roused vindictam sumere nitentur. Nec vobis, pauciores turbam vengeance to-take they-will-strive nor to-you a-smaller crowd habentibus, ea vis erit, ut tot civium inquietationibus having that strength will-be that so-many of-citizens to-the-harassments resistere queatis. Quod si decertatio inter vos accesserit, to-resist you-may-be-able but if a-contest between you will-have-arisen numerus eorum quotidie augebitur: vester vero minuetur. the-number of-them daily will-be-increased yours indeed will-be-lessened Laudo igitur ut petatis ab eo suam filiam primogenitam, I-advice therefore that you-seek from him his-own daughter first-born quam Ignogen vocant, Duci nostro conjugem et cum ea whom Ignoge they-call for-the-leader our as-wife and with her aurum et argentum, naves et frumentum: et quodcunque gold and silver ships and grain and whatever itineri nostro necessarium erit. Et si id impetrare for-journey our necessary will-be and if that to-obtain poterimus licentia ipsius alias nationes petamus.” we-shall-be-able with-the-leave his other nations let-us-see Brutus Ignogen matrimonio ducit, in insulam desertam ejectus ex oraculo Dianæ discit, quam terram sit habitaturus

XI · BRUTUS MARRIES IGNOGE; DIANA FORETELLS HIS LAND

Under threat of death Pandrasus gives Brutus his daughter Ignoge, 324 ships, and provisions, and the Trojans sail while Ignoge weeps for her homeland. On the deserted island of Leogecia, Brutus prays at Diana's temple, and in sleep the goddess promises him an island beyond Gaul, once held by giants, where a second Troy will rise. The fleet sails for thirty days to Africa and beats off pirates.

Ut his et consimilibus finem dicendi fecit, acquievit ei when to-these and similar-things an-end of-speaking be-made assented to-him tota multitudo, atque suasit ut Pandrasus in medium the-whole multitude and urged that Pandrasus into the-middle adduceretur: et nisi huic petitioni faveret, sævissima morte should-be-led and unless to-this to-the-petition be-favored by-most-cruel death damnaretur. Nec mora, adductus est, et in cathedra he-should-be-condemned nor delay led be-was and on a-seat celsior positus: edoctus quoque quibus tormentis affligendus higher placed taught also by-what torments to-be-afflicted erat, nisi ea faceret quæ jubebatur: in hunc modum he-was unless those-things he-did which he-was-ordered in this manner respondit: “Quoniam adversi Dii me meumque fratrem answered since hostile the-gods me and-my brother

Anacletum in manus vestras tradiderunt, parendum est Anacletus into hands your have-handed-over to-be-obeyed is petitioni vestræ, ne vitam quæ nobis arbitrio vestro et to-the-petition your lest the-life which for-us by-choice your both adimi et concedi potest (si repulsam passi fueritis) to-be-taken-away and to-be-granted can-be if refusal suffered you-will-have amittamus. Nihil enim vita præstantius, nihil jucundius we-may-lose nothing for than-life more-excellent nothing more-pleasant censeo: nec est mirandum si illam extremis rebus redimere I-judge nor is to-be-wondered-at if it with-utmost things to-redeem velim. Quamvis autem invitus præceptis vestris obediam; I-should-wish although moreover unwilling to-the-orders your I-obey solatium tamen habere videor, quia filiam meam tantæ comfort yet to-have I-seem because daughter my of-so-great probitatis adolescenti daturus sum, quem ex genere Priami prowess to-a-youth about-to-give I-am whom from the-race of-Priam et Anchisæ procreatum, et nobilitas quæ in ipso pullulat, and of-Anchises begotten both the-nobility which in him sprouts et fama nobis cognita declarat. Quis etenim alter exules and fame to-us known declares who for other the-exiles Trojæ in servitutum tot et tantorum principum positos of-Troy into servitude of-so-many and so-great princes placed eorundem vinculis eriperet? Quis cum illis Græcorum of-the-same from-the-chains would-snatch who with them of-the-Greeks genti resisteret, aut cum tam paucis tantam armatorum to-the-people would-resist or with so few so-great of-armed-men copiam ad prelium convocaret, intoque congressu regem a-host to battle would-call-out and-entered the-engagement the-king eorum vinctum duceret? Quia ergo tantus juvenis tanta of-them bound would-lead because therefore so-great a-youth with-so-great probitate mihi resistere potuit, do ei meam filiam prowess to-me to-resist was-able I-give to-him my daughter Ignogen, do ei etiam aurum et argentum, naves, Ignoge I-give to-him also gold and silver ships frumentum, vinum et oleum, et quicquid itineri ejus grain wine and oil and whatever for-the-journey his esse necessarium duxeritis. Et si a proposito vestro to-be necessary you-will-have-thought and if from purpose your divertentes, cum Græcis permanere volueritis, tertiam turning-aside with the-Greeks to-remain you-will-have-wished the-third regni mei partem vobis ad inhabitandum concedo. Sin of-kingdom my part to-you for inhabiting I-grant if-not autem, promissa mea effectu prosequar. Et ut securiores moreover the-promises my in-effect I-shall-follow-up and so-that more-secure sitis, vobiscum quasi obses manebo dum omnia you-may-be with-you as-it-were a-hostage I-shall-remain while all-things perfecero. Conventione itaque facta, diriguntur legati I-shall-have-completed with-agreement and-so made are-directed envoys per universa Græciæ littora colligere naves. Quæ ut through all of-Greece the-shores to-gather ships which when collectæ fuerunt, trecentæ et viginti quatuor numero, gathered they-had-been three-hundred and twenty four in-number præsentantur, omni generis farris onerantur: filia Bruto are-presented with-every kind of-grain they-are-loaded the-daughter to-Brutus maritatur; et quisque, prout dignitas expetebat, auro is-married and each-one according-as dignity demanded with-gold et argento donatur. Peractis igitur cunctis, rex liber a and with-silver is-presented completed therefore all-things the-king free from carcere dimittitur: Troës ab ejus potestate secundis ventis prison is-sent-away the-Trojans from his power with-favorable winds abscedunt. At Ignoge in excelsa puppi stans, sæpius inter depart but Ignoge on the-high stern standing very-often among Bruti brachia in extasi collabitur, fusisque cum singultu of-Brutus the-arms in a-swoon collapses and-poured with sobbing lacrymis parentes et patriam deserere conqueritur: nec tears parents and country to-desert she-laments nor oculos a littore avertit, dum littora oculis patuerunt. the-eyes from the-shore turns-away while the-shores to-the-eyes lay-open Quam Brutus blanditiis mitigans, nunc dulces amplexus: whom Brutus with-caresses soothing now sweet embraces nunc dulcia basia innectit; nec cœptis suis desistit, now sweet kisses weaves nor from-undertakings his-own desists donec fletu fatigata sopori submittitur. Inter hæc et until with-weeping wearied to-sleep she-is-submitted among these-things and alia, duobus diebus et una nocte prospero ventorum flatu others for-two days and one night with-favorable of-the-winds breath concurrerunt, applicueruntque in quandam insulam, vocatam they-ran-together and-landed on a-certain island called Leogeciam, quæ antiquitus ab incursione piratarum vastabatur, Leogecia which from-of-old by the-incursion of-pirates was-laid-waste a nemine inhabitabatur. In illam ergo Brutus misit by no-one was-inhabited into it therefore Brutus sent trecentos armatos ad explorandum qui eam inhabitarent. Qui three-hundred armed-men for exploring who it might-inhabit who neminem reperientes, feras diversi generis intra saltus et no-one finding wild-beasts of-various kind within the-glades and nemora inventas cæde afficiunt: veneruntque ad quandam forests found with-slaughter afflict and-came to a-certain civitatem desertam, in qua templum Dianæ reppererunt. In city deserted in which a-temple of-Diana they-found in eodem imago Deæ responsa dabat, si forte ab aliquo the-same an-image of-the-Goddess answers gave if by-chance by someone peteretur. Onerati tandem reperta venatione revertuntur ad it-were-asked loaded at-last with-the-found game they-return to naves suas: patriæque et situm et civitatem consociis ships their-own and-of-the-country both the-situation and the-city to-the-comrades prædicant: suggerunt duci templum adire, atque litatis they-proclaim they-suggest to-the-leader the-temple to-approach and offered donis a numine loci inquirere, quæ patria eis gifts from the-deity of-the-place to-inquire which country to-them sedem certæ mansionis præberet. Communicatoque omnium a-seat of-sure dwelling would-offer and-communicated of-all assensu, assumpsit secum Brutus Gerionem augurem, et with-the-assent took with-himself Brutus Gerion the-augur and duodecim maiores natu: petivitque templum cum omnibus twelve greater by-birth and-sought the-temple with all-things quæ ad sacrificium necessaria erant. Quo ubi ventum est, which for sacrifice necessary were where when come it-was circumdati tempora vittis ante adytum veterrimo ritu tribus surrounded the-temples with-fillets before the-shrine by-most-ancient rite to-three Diis, Jovi videlicet, et Mercurio, nec non et Dianæ tres gods to-Jupiter namely and to-Mercury nor not also to-Diana three focos statuerunt: singulis singula libamina dederunt. Ipse hearths they-set-up to-single-ones single libations they-gave himself Brutus ante aram Deæ vas sacrificii plenum vino Brutus before the-altar of-the-Goddess a-vessel of-sacrifice full with-wine et sanguine candidæ cervæ dextra tenens, erecto vultu and with-blood of-a-white hind in-the-right-hand holding with-raised face ad effigiem numinis, silentium in hæc verba dissolvit: — to the-image of-the-deity the-silence in these words broke Diva potens nemorum, terror silvestribus apris, O-goddess powerful of-the-groves terror to-the-woodland boars Cui licet amfractus ire per ætherios, to-whom it-is-permitted the-windings to-go through the-ethereal Infernasque domos; terrestria jura resolve, and-the-infernal homes the-earthly laws release Et dic quas terras nos habitare velis? and say which lands us to-inhabit you-may-wish Dic certam sedem, qua te venerabor in ævum, say a-sure seat where you I-shall-worship into the-age Qua tibi virgineis dedico templa choris?

where to-you with-virgin I-dedicate temples choirs

Hæc ubi novies dixit, circumvit aram quater: fuditque these-things when nine-times he-said he-went-round the-altar four-times and-poured vinum, quod tenebat, in focum: atque procubuit supra pellem the-wine which he-was-holding into the-hearth and lay-down upon the-skin cervæ, quam ante aram extenderat: invitatoque somno of-the-hind which before the-altar he-had-spread-out and-invited sleep tandem obdormivit. Erat autem quasi hora tertia noctis: qua at-last fell-asleep it-was moreover about the-hour third of-the-night in-which dulciore sopore mortales premuntur: tunc visum est illi by-sweeter sleep mortals are-pressed then seemed it-was to-him Deam adstare ante ipsum, et sese in hunc modum affari:

the-Goddess to-stand before him and him in this manner to-address Brute sub occasu solis trans Gallica regna,

O-Brutus under the-setting of-the-sun beyond the-Gallic kingdoms Insula in Oceano est undique clausa mari:

an-island in the-Ocean is on-all-sides enclosed by-sea Insula in Oceano est habitata Gigantibus olim, an-island in the-Ocean was inhabited by-Giants once Nunc deserta quidem, gentibus apta tuis.

now deserted indeed for-peoples fit your Hanc pete; namque tibi sedes erit illa perennis:

this seek for to-you seat will-be that everlasting Hic fiet natis altera Troja tuis.

here will-be-made for-the-children a-second Troy your Hic de prole tua reges nascentur: et ipsis here from offspring your kings will-be-born and to-them Totius terræ subditus orbis erit.

of-the-whole earth subject the-circle will-be Tali visione expergefactus dux, in dubio mansit an somnus by-such a-vision awakened the-leader in doubt remained whether a-dream fuerat quem vidit: an Dea viva fuerat, quæ prædixerat it-had-been which he-saw or the-Goddess living had-been who had-foretold terram quam aditurus erat. Vocatis tandem sociis the-land which about-to-approach he-was called at-last the-comrades indicavit per ordinem quod sibi dormienti contigerat. At illi he-showed in order what to-him sleeping had-happened but they maximo gaudio exultantes hortantur ut ad naves repedarent; with-greatest joy exulting urge that to the-ships they-should-return et dum secundus ventus flaret, citissimis velis occasum and while the-favorable wind was-blowing with-swiftest sails the-setting versus eant: ad inquirendum quod diva spoponderat.

towards they-should-go for inquiring what the-goddess had-promised Nec mora, remeant ad socios, altumque ingrediuntur: et nor delay they-return to the-comrades and-the-deep they-enter and sulcantes æquora, cursu triginta dierum venerunt ad Africam:

furrowing the-seas in-a-course of-thirty days they-came to Africa nescii adhuc quorsum proras verterent. Deinde venerunt ad unknowing still whither the-prows they-should-turn then they-came to aras Philenorum, et ad locum Salinarum: et navigaverunt the-altars of-the-Philaeni and to the-place of-the-Salt-pans and they-sailed intra Ruscicadam et montes Azaræ, ubi ab incursione between Ruscada and the-mountains of-Azara where from the-incursion piratarum maximum passi sunt periculum: victoriam tamen of-pirates greatest suffered they-have danger the-victory yet adepti sunt, spoliisque eorum et rapinis ditati. obtained they-have and-with-the-spoils their and plunder enriched

Brutus cum Corineo Aquitaniam devehitur

XII · BRUTUS AND CORINEUS COME TO AQUITAINE

Passing the Pillars of Hercules and the Sirens, the Trojans meet Corineus and his people, also descended from Trojan exiles, and join them. At the mouth of the Loire, King Goffarius' envoys challenge Corineus for hunting in the king's forest, and when one of them, Imbert, shoots at him, Corineus smashes his head with the bow. In the battle that follows, Corineus breaks the Aquitanians with a two-edged axe and mocks them as they flee.

Porro flumen Malvæ transeuntes, applicuerunt in Mauritaniam; further the-river of-Malva crossing they-landed in Mauretania deinde penuria cibi et potus coacti egressi sunt e then by-want of-food and of-drink forced gone-out they-have from navibus, et dispositis turmis populati sunt regionem illam the-ships and arranged the-troops ravaged they-have region that a fine usque ad finem. Refertis vero navibus petierunt from end all-the-way to end filled indeed the-ships they-sought columnas Herculis: ubi apparuerunt eis monstra maris the-pillars of-Hercules where appeared to-them monsters of-the-sea Sirenes vocata, quæ ambiendo naves fere ipsas obruerunt.
Sirens called which by-surrounding the-ships almost them overwhelmed Utcumque tamen elapsi, venerunt ad Tyrrhenum æquor: somehow yet having-escaped they-came to the-Tyrrhenian sea ubi juxta littora invenerunt quatuor generationes de exulibus where beside the-shores they-found four generations from the-exiles Trojæ ortas, quæ Antenoris fugam comitatae fuerant. Erat of-Troy sprung which of-Antenor the-flight accompanied had there-was eorum dux Corineus dictus: vir modestus, consilio optimus, of-them leader Corineus called a-man modest in-counsel best magnæ virtutis et audaciæ; qui si cum aliquo gigante of-great valor and of-boldness who if with some giant congressum faceret, illico eum obruebat, ac si cum an-engagement he-made on-the-spot him he-overwhelmed as if with puero contenderet. Agnita itaque veteris prosapia originis, a-boy he-were-contending recognized and-so of-old the-lineage of-origin associaverunt sibi illum, nec non et populum cui they-associated to-themselves him nor not also the-people over-which præsidebat: qui de nomine ducis postmodum Cornubiensis he-presided which from the-name of-the-leader afterward Cornish vocatus, Bruto in omnibus decertationibus præ cæteris called to-Brutus in all contests beyond the-others auxilium præstabat. Deinde venerunt ad Aquitaniam: et help offered then they-came to Aquitaine and ostium Ligeris ingressi, anchoras fixerunt. Morati sunt ibi the-mouth of-the-Loire having-entered anchors they-fixed stayed they-have there septem diebus, situmque regni exploraverunt. Regnabat for-seven days and-the-situation of-the-kingdom explored reigned tunc in Aquitania Goffarius Pictus, ejusdem terræ rex, cui then in Aquitaine Goffarius the-Pict of-the-same land king to-whom ut fama indicavit externam gentem cum magna classe in when fame showed a-foreign people with a-great fleet into fines regni applicuisse: misit legatos ad inquirendum, the-borders of-the-kingdom to-have-landed he-sent envoys for inquiring pacemne an bellum expeterent. Nuncii ergo classem peace-whether or war they-were-seeking the-messengers therefore the-fleet petentes obviaverunt Corineo egresso jam cum ducentis viris, seeking met Corineus gone-out already with two-hundred men ut intra nemora venationem adquirerent. Mox eum allocuti that within the-forests game they-might-get soon him addressed quærunt cujus licentia saltus regis ingressus, feras they-ask whose by-leave the-glades of-the-king having-entered the-wild-beasts necaret. Statutum enim ab antiquo fuerat neminem he-was-killing appointed for from of-old it-had-been no-one sine jussu principis eas debere prosternere. Quibus without the-order of-the-prince them to-be-obliged to-lay-low to-whom cum Corineus respondisset: licentiam hujus rei nequaquam when Corineus had-answered leave of-this matter by-no-means debere haberi: irruit unus ex illis, Imbertus nomine, to-be-obliged to-be-had rushed-in one of them Imbert by-name et arcu curvato sagittam in eum direxit. Vitavit eam and with-bow bent an-arrow at him directed avoided it Corineus, concurratque ocyus in Imbertum, et arcu, Corineus and-ran more-swiftly at Imbert and with-the-bow quem tenebat, caput ei in frusta contrivit. Diffugerunt which he-was-holding the-head to-him into bits crushed fled ergo cæteri vix e manibus ejus elapsi, atque Goffario therefore the-others scarcely from the-hands his having-escaped and to-Goffarius necem socii nunciaverunt. Contristatus illico dux the-death the-comrades announced saddened on-the-spot the-duke Pictavensium, collegit exercitum grandem, ut in ipsos of-the-Poitevins gathered an-army great so-that on them mortem nuncii sui vindicaret. At Brutus divulgato ejus the-death of-messenger his-own he-might-avenge but Brutus spread-abroad his adventu naves munit: mulieres et parvulos in ipsis jubet arrival the-ships fortifies the-women and the-little-ones in them orders manere: ipse autem, cum tota multitudine cui vires to-remain he-himself moreover with the-whole multitude to-whom strengths florebant, obviu exercitui progreditur. Inito tandem certamine, flourished meeting the-army advances entered at-last the-contest dira pugna utrobique committitur: et cum multum diei in a-dire fight on-both-sides is-joined and when much of-the-day in agendo cædem consumpsissent, puduit Corineum Aquitanos doing slaughter they-had-spent it-shamed Corineus the-Aquitanians tam audacter resistere: nec Trojanos cum triumpho insistere. so boldly to-resist nor the-Trojans with triumph to-press-on Unde resumpta audacia sevocavit suos in dexteram partem whence resumed boldness he-called-aside his-own into the-right part prælii: et facto agmine celerem impetum in hostes of-the-battle and made a-column a-swift attack upon the-enemies fecit: et ut intra eorundem turmas sese densa acie he-made and when within of-the-same the-troops himself with-dense line intromisit, non cessavit hostes prosternere, donec penetrata he-had-thrust not he-ceased the-enemies to-lay-low until pierced cohorte cunctos in fugam coegit. Fortuna ei, amisso gladio, the-cohort all into flight he-forced fortune to-him lost the-sword bipennem administraverat, cum qua quemcunque attingebat a-two-edged-axe had-supplied with which whomever he-reached a summo usque ad imum dissecabat. Miratur Brutus, from top all-the-way to bottom he-cut-apart wonders Brutus mirantur socii, mirantur et hostes viri audaciam et wonder the-comrades wonder also the-enemies of-the-man the-boldness and virtutem, qui bipennem inter fugientes cohortes librans, valor who the-two-edged-axe among the-fleeing cohorts swinging timorem non minimum cum his verbis inferebat: "Quo fugitis fear not least with these words brought-on whither do-you-flee timidi! quo fugitis segnes! revertimini, ô revertimini, et O-timid whither do-you-flee O-sluggish return O return and congressum cum Corineo facite: proh pudor, tot millia me an-engagement with Corineus make oh shame so-many thousands me solum fugitis? At tamen habete solatium fugæ, quod ego vos alone you-flee but yet have as-comfort of-flight that I you insequar, qui toties soleo Tyrrenos gigantes in fugam shall-pursue who so-often am-accustomed the-Tyrrhenian giants into flight propellere: et ternos atque quaternos ad tartara detrudere.” to-drive and by-threes and by-fours to Tartarus to-thrust-down Brutus Goffarium fugat

XIII · BRUTUS ROUTS GOFFARIUS

The consul Subardus attacks Corineus, who splits him in two with his axe and then hews through the enemy alone. Brutus brings help, and the Trojans drive Goffarius and his Poitevins from the field. Goffarius flees to the twelve kings of Gaul, who promise to drive the foreigners out of Aquitaine.

Ad hæc verba illius revertitur quidam consul nomine Subardus at these words his returns a-certain consul by-name Subardus cum trecentis militibus, et impetum fecit in eum: cujus with three-hundred knights and an-attack made upon him whose ictum Corineus prætenso clypeo excipiens, non est oblitus blow Corineus held-out shield receiving not has forgotten bipennis quam tenebat, sed erecta illa percussit eum the-two-edged-axe which he-was-holding but raised it he-struck him in summitate galeæ, percussumque, a summo usque ad on the-top of-the-helmet and-the-struck-one from top all-the-way to imum in ambas partes dissecuit. Sed et confestim irruens bottom into both parts he-cut-apart but also forthwith rushing in cæteros, bipennem rotans, stragem acerrimam facit, upon the-others the-two-edged-axe whirling slaughter most-fierce he-makes et nunc hac nunc illac discurrens ictus recipere diffugit, nec and now here now there running-about blows to-receive he-shuns nor hostes prosternere quiescit: huic brachium cum manu the-enemies to-lay-low rests from-this-one the-arm with the-hand amputat: illi scapulas a corpore separat: alii he-cuts-off from-that-one the-shoulders from the-body he-separates from-another caput uno ictu truncat: alteri crura a summo dissecat. the-head with-one blow he-lops from-another the-legs from the-top he-cuts Omnes in illum solum, et ipse solus in omnes irruebat. all upon him alone and he-himself alone upon all rushed Quod Brutus aspiciens, motus amore viri, accurrit cum which Brutus seeing moved by-love of-the-man runs-up with una turma ut ei auxilium subvectaret. Tunc oritur one troop so-that to-him help he-might-bring then arises clamor inter diversas gentes, tunc crebri ictus inferuntur, tunc a-shout among different peoples then frequent blows are-dealt then in utraque parte fit cædes durissima. Nec mora, victoria on each side is-made a-slaughter most-hard nor delay of-victory potiuntur Troes, et regem Goffarium cum Pictavensibus gain-possession the-Trojans and the-king Goffarius with Poitevins suis in fugam propellunt. Qui vix evadens, partes Galliarum his-own into flight drive who scarcely escaping the-parts of-the-Gauls adivit; ut a cognatis et notis succursum haberet. reached so-that from kinsmen and acquaintances aid he-might-have Erant tunc temporis duodecim reges in Gallia, quorum there-were at-that of-time twelve kings in Gaul whose regimine tota regio pari dignitate regebatur. Qui benigne by-rule the-whole region with-equal dignity was-ruled who kindly suscipientes eum, promittunt sese unanimiter expulsuros receiving him promise themselves with-one-mind about-to-drive ex finibus Aquitaniæ externam gentem quæ advenerat. out-of the-borders of-Aquitaine the-foreign people which had-come

Brutus Aquitaniam vastat

XIV · BRUTUS LAYS WASTE AQUITAINE

Brutus enriches his men with the spoils and ravages Aquitaine with fire and slaughter, filling his ships with plunder. He comes to the place where the city of Tours now stands and builds a camp there for refuge. Goffarius arrives near it with the kings and princes of Gaul and a great host.

Brutus ob prædictam victoriam lætus, peremptorum Brutus on-account-of the-aforesaid victory joyful of-the-slain spoliis socios ditat, ditatos iterum in turmas with-the-spoils the-comrades enriches the-enriched again into troops resociat, resociatos per regionem ducit, affectans eam he-regathers the-regathered through the-region he-leads desiring it penitus desolari, et naves suas immensis divitiis replere. utterly to-be-laid-waste and the-ships his-own with-immense riches to-fill Accumulato igitur igne civitates incendit, et opes absconditas heaped-up therefore fire the-cities he-burns and the-wealth hidden ab eisdem extrahit: agros etiam depopulatur: stragem from the-same he-draws-out the-fields also he-ravages slaughter miserandam civibus et plebanis infert, volens infelicem gentem pitiable on-citizens and commoners he-brings wishing the-unhappy people usque ad unum delere. At dum tali clade omnem fere all-the-way to one to-destroy but when with-such disaster all almost Aquitaniam affecisset: venit ad locum ubi nunc est civitas Aquitaine he-had-afflicted he-came to the-place where now is the-city Turonorum, quam ut Homerus testatur, ipse postmodum of-the-Turones which as Homer testifies he-himself afterward construxit. Ut igitur loca convenientia refugio inspexit, built when therefore places fitting for-refuge he-viewed metatus est ibi castra sua, ut, si opus esset, sese measured-out he-has there the-camp his-own so-that if need were himself intra ipsa reciperet. Urgebatur namque timore propter within it he-might-withdraw he-was-pressed for by-fear on-account-of adventum Goffarii qui cum regibus et principibus Galliæ, the-arrival of-Goffarius who with the-kings and princes of-Gaul et maxima armatorum copia prope eundem locum advenerat, and the-greatest of-armed-men host near the-same place had-come ut cum illo bellum committeret. Peractis deinde castris so-that with him war he-might-wage completed then the-camp expectavit ibi biduo Goffarium, confidens in prudentia he-waited there for-two-days Goffarius trusting in prudence sua atque audacia juventutis suæ cui præsidebat. his-own and the-boldness of-the-youth his-own over-which he-presided

Brutus cum Goffario manum conserit

XV · BRUTUS FIGHTS GOFFARIUS

Goffarius scorns the exiles, and the Gauls in their twelve columns, thirty times more numerous, drive the Trojans into their camp and besiege it. Corineus slips out by night to the forest and at dawn falls on the Gauls from behind while Brutus attacks, and the Gauls flee. Brutus' nephew Turonus, who kills six hundred men, is buried where Tours takes his name, and Brutus sails for the promised island, landing at Totnes.

Goffarius ergo audita ibidem Trojanorum præsentia, Goffarius therefore heard in-the-same-place of-the-Trojans the-presence nec die nec noctu cessavit incedere, donec castra Bruti neither by-day nor by-night ceased to-advance until the-camp of-Brutus prope aspexit. Torvo igitur lumine intuens, paulisper near he-saw with-grim therefore eye gazing for-a-little subridens in hæc verba prorupit: Proh fatum triste! Castra smiling into these words burst-out oh fate sad the-camp etiam sua in regno meo fecerunt ignobiles exules: armate even their-own in kingdom my have-made ignoble exiles arm vos viri, armate: et per densatas turmas incedite. Nulla yourselves O-men arm and through thickened troops advance no mora erit quin semiviros istos velut oves capiemus: atque delay will-be but half-men these like sheep we-shall-take and captos per regna nostra mancipabimus. Armaverunt se taken through kingdoms our we-shall-sell armed themselves itaque omnes quos secum adduxerat: et per duodena and-so all whom with-himself he-had-brought and in twelve agmina statuti, versus hostes suos incedunt. Contra quos columns set towards enemies their-own advance against whom Brutus etiam dispositis catervis non muliebriter graditur, Brutus also arranged the-bands not in-womanly-fashion steps sed turmas suas quid acturæ essent sapienter docens, but troops his-own what about-to-do they-were wisely teaching qualiter debeant invadere et resistere edicit. Ut ergo how they-ought to-attack and to-resist he-proclaims when therefore congressum incepterunt, prævaluerunt initio Troes, et the-engagement they-began prevailed at-the-beginning the-Trojans and cædem acerrimam ex hostibus faciunt. Ceciderunt namque ex slaughter most-fierce of the-enemies they-make fell for of iis fere duo millia hominum. Unde cæteri stupefacti, fere them about two thousand of-men whence the-others stunned almost in fugam versi fuerunt. Sed ubi major numerus hominum into flight turned were but where a-greater number of-men abundat, ibi evenire solet triumphus. Galli igitur abounds there to-come-about is-accustomed the-triumph the-Gauls therefore quoniam tricies plures erant cæteris, quamquam primo since thirty-times more they-were than-the-others although at-first oppressi fuerant: tamen resociati impetum fecerunt undique overwhelmed had-been yet regathered an-attack made from-all-sides in Troes: et illata strage ipsos in castra ingredi upon the-Trojans and brought-on slaughter them into the-camp to-enter coegerunt. Victoriā igitur adepti, obsederunt eos intra forced the-victory therefore having-obtained they-besieged them within castra: meditantes nequaquam prius illinc abscedere, quam the-camp purposing by-no-means before from-there to-depart than ipsi inclusi vel colla vincienda catenis traderent, vel they shut-in either their-necks to-be-bound with-chains should-hand-over or longa fame afflicti sævissima morte afficerentur. Sequenti by-long hunger afflicted with-most-cruel death should-be-afflicted on-the-following interea nocte Corineus inivit consilium cum Bruto, se meanwhile night Corineus entered counsel with Brutus himself velle scilicet per quædam divortia in eadem nocte egredi, to-wish namely through certain by-ways on the-same night to-go-out et intra nemus quod prope erat, usque ad diem delitere. and within the-forest which near was all-the-way to day to-lie-bid Et dum Brutus sub diluculo egressus cum hostibus and while Brutus at dawn having-gone-out with the-enemies dimicaret: ipse cum sua cohorte a tergo superveniret, was-fighting he-himself with his-own cohort from the-back should-come-upon et facto impetu stragem ingereret. Placuit itaque Bruto and made the-attack slaughter should-beap-on pleased and-so to-Brutus Corinei sententia: qui ut prædixerat, callide egressus cum of-Corineus the-proposal who as he-had-foretold craftily having-gone-out with tribus milibus, occulta nemorum petivit. Adveniente ergo three thousand the-bidden-parts of-the-forests sought arriving therefore postera die statuit Brutus suos per turmas, et apertis castris the-next day arranged Brutus his-own into troops and opened the-camp pugnaturus egreditur. Occurrunt igitur confestim Galli, et about-to-fight goes-out run-up therefore forthwith the-Gauls and facto agmine cum ipso congrediuntur. Concidunt illico made a-column with him engage fall on-the-spot in utraque parte multa virorum millia, dum mutua vulnera on each side many of-men thousands while mutual wounds dantur: quia nullus adversario parcebat. Erat ibi quidam are-given because no-one the-adversary spared there-was there a-certain Tros nomine Turonus Bruti nepos, quo fortior sive Trojan by-name Turonus of-Brutus nephew than-whom braver or audacior nullus, excepto Corineo, aderat. Hic solus solo bolder no-one excepted Corineus was-present this-one alone with-only gladio suo sexcentos viros peremit. Sed ab irrudentibus sword his-own six-hundred men destroyed but by the-rushing-on Gallis citius quam debuisset interfectus est. De nomine Gauls sooner than he-ought-to-have killed he-was from the-name ipsius prædicta civitas Turonis vocabulum nacta est: quia his the-aforesaid city Tours the-name obtained has because ibidem sepultus fuit. Cum igitur utræque turmæ acrius in-the-same-place buried he-was when therefore both troops more-fiercely pugnarent, supervenit ex improvise Corineus, et a tergo were-fighting came-upon from unforeseen Corineus and from the-back hostes celeriter invasit. Audaciores proinde insurgentes cæteri the-enemies swiftly attacked bolder accordingly rising-up the-others ex altera parte incumbunt, stragemque facere contendunt. from the-other side press-on and-slaughter to-make strive Itaque Galli solo clamore Corineensium qui a tergo and-so the-Gauls by-the-mere shout of-the-Corineans who from the-back invaserant stupefacti sunt. Et arbitantes plures advenisse quam had-attacked stunned were and supposing more to-have-come than advenerant, campum deserere festinant: quos Troes usque had-come the-field to-desert they-burly whom the-Trojans continually ferientes insequuntur: insequendo prosternunt: nec prosternere striking pursue in-pursuing lay-low nor to-lay-low cessaverunt, donec victoriam habuerunt. Brutus itaque, licet they-ceased until victory they-had Brutus and-so although tantus triumphus illi maximum intulisset gaudium, dolore so-great a-triumph to-him greatest had-brought joy with-grief tamenangebatur, quia numerus suorum quotidie minuebatur, yet he-was-tormented because the-number of-his-own daily was-lessened Gallorum autem semper multiplicabatur. In dubio tandem of-the-Gauls moreover always was-multiplied in doubt at-last existens, an diutius eos oppugnaret, prælegit naves suas being whether longer them he-should-assault he-preferred the-ships his-own salva adhuc majori parte suorum, nec non et victoriæ safe still the-greater part of-his-own nor not also of-the-victory reverentia adire, atque insulam, quam ei divinus prædixerat with-the-honor to-approach and the-island which to-him the-divine had-foretold monitus, exigere. Nec mora, petivit suorum assensu classem admonition to-seek-out nor delay he-sought of-his-own with-the-assent fleet suam, et replevit eam universis divitiis vel deliciis quas his-own and filled it with-all riches or delights which acquisiverat, et ipsam ingressus est: prosperis quoque ventis he-had-acquired and it entered he-has with-favorable also winds promissam insulam exigens, in Totonesio littore applicuit. the-promised island seeking-out on the-Totnes shore landed

Brutus et Corineus Albion inter se partiuntur

XVI · BRUTUS AND CORINEUS DIVIDE ALBION

Albion is held only by a few giants, whom the Trojans drive into the mountain caves, and they settle and till the land. Brutus names the island Britain and his people Britons, and Corineus calls his portion Corinea, now Cornwall. When the giant Goemagot attacks a festival, Corineus wrestles him, carries him to a cliff, and hurls him into the sea, and the place is called Goemagot's Leap.

Erat tunc nomen insulæ Albion, quæ a nemine, exceptis was then the-name of-the-island Albion which by no-one excepted paucis gigantibus, inhabitabatur, amœno tamen situ locorum a-few giants was-inhabited by-pleasant yet situation of-places et copia piscosorum fluminum, nemoribusque præelecta, and by-the-abundance of-fish-filled rivers and-by-forests preferred affectum habitandi Bruto sociisque inferebat. Peragratiss a-desire of-dwelling to-Brutus and-to-the-comrades it-brought traveled-through ergo quibusque provinciis, repertos gigantes ad cavernas therefore all provinces the-found giants to the-caverns montium fugant, patriam donante duce sortiuntur. of-the-mountains they-put-to-flight the-country granting the-leader they-share-by-lot Agros colere incipiunt, domos ædificare, ita ut brevi tempore the-fields to-till they-begin houses to-build so that in-short time terram ab ævo inhabitatam censes. Denique Brutus the-land from an-age inhabited you-would-have-thought finally Brutus de nomine suo insulam Britanniam, sociosque suos from the-name his-own the-island Britain and-the-comrades his-own Britones appellat: volebat enim ex derivatione nominis Britons calls he-wished for from the-derivation of-the-name memoriam habere perpetuam. Unde postmodum loquela a-memory to-have perpetual whence afterward the-speech gentis, quæ prius Trojana sive curvum Græcum nuncupabatur, of-the-people which before Trojan or crooked Greek was-called Britannica dicta est. At Corineus portionem regni quæ British called was but Corineus the-portion of-the-kingdom which sorti suæ cesserat, ab appellatione sui nominis Corineam to-lot his-own had-fallen from the-naming of-his-own name Corinea vocat, populumque Corineensem, exemplum ducis insecutus: calls and-the-people Corineans the-example of-the-leader having-followed qui cum præ omnibus qui advenerant electionem provinciarum who though before all who had-come the-choice of-the-provinces posset habere, maluit regionem illam quæ nunc vel a he-could to-have preferred region that which now either from cornu Britannia, vel per corruptionem prædicti nominis the-horn of-Britain or through the-corruption of-the-aforsaid name Cornubia appellatur. Delectabat enim eum contra gigantes Cornwall is-called it-delighted for him against giants dimicare, quorum copia plus ibidem abundabat quam to-fight of-whom the-abundance more in-the-same-place abounded than in ulla provinciarum, quæ consociis suis distributæ fuerant. in any of-the-provinces which to-the-comrades his-own distributed had-been Erat ibi inter ceteros detestabilis quidam nomine Goëmagot there-was there among the-others detestable a-certain by-name Goemagot staturæ duodecim cubitorum, qui tantæ virtutis existens, of-stature of-twelve cubits who of-so-great strength being quercum semel excussam velut virgam coryli evellebat. Quadam an-oak once shaken like a-rod of-hazel pulled-up a-certain die dum Brutus in portu quo applicuerat festivum Diis day while Brutus in the-harbor where he-had-landed a-festive for-the-gods diem celebraret, supervenit ille cum viginti gigantibus, atque day was-celebrating came-upon he with twenty giants and dirissima cæde Britones affecit. At Britones tandem undique with-most-dire slaughter the-Britons afflicted but the-Britons at-last from-all-sides confluentes in eos prævaluerunt: omnesque præter Goëmagot flowing-together against them prevailed and-all except Goemagot interfecerunt. Hunc Brutus vivum reservari præceperat, volens killed this-one Brutus alive to-be-kept had-ordered wishing videre luctationem ipsius et Corinei, qui ultra modum cum to-see the-wrestling of-him and of-Corineus who beyond measure with talibus æstuabat congregari. Itaque Corineus maximo fluctuans such burned to-engage and-so Corineus with-greatest surging gaudio, succinxit se, et abjectis armis ipsum ad luctandum joy girded himself and thrown-aside arms him for wrestling provocat. Inito deinde certamine hinc stat Corineus, challenges entered then the-contest on-this-side stands Corineus hinc gigas, et alter alterum vinculis brachiorum annectens, on-that-side the-giant and one the-other with-bonds of-arms binding crebris afflatibus aëra vexant. Nec mora, Goëmagot with-frequent pantings the-air they-trouble nor delay Goemagot Corineum maximis viribus astringens, fregit ei tres costas: Corineus with-greatest strength squeezing broke for-him three ribs duas in latere dextro, et unam in sinistro. Unde Corineus two on the-side right and one on the-left whence Corineus in iram compulsus, suas revocavit vires, et imposuit illum into anger driven his-own recalled strength and put him humeris suis, et imposito, quantum velocitas pro pondere on-shoulders his-own and put-on as-much-as speed for the-weight sinebat, ad proxima littora cucurrit. Deinde summitatem allowed to the-nearest shores ran then the-summit excelsæ rupis nactus, excussit se, et prædictum letale of-a-lofty cliff having-reached he-shook himself and the-aforesaid deadly monstrum quod super humeros suos ferebat in mare monster which upon shoulders his-own he-was-carrying into the-sea projecit, at ille per abrupta saxa cadens, in mille frusta hurled but he through steep rocks falling into a-thousand bits dilaceratus est: et fluctus sanguine maculavit. Locus autem ille torn was and the-waves with-blood stained the-place moreover that a præcipitatione gigantis nomen adeptus Lamgoëmagot, from the-burling of-the-giant the-name having-obtained Lamgoemagot id est saltus Goëmagot, usque in præsentem diem vocatur. that is the-leap of-Goemagot all-the-way into the-present day is-called

Brutus Trojam novam condit

XVII · BRUTUS FOUNDS NEW TROY

Brutus seeks a site for a city and finds it on the Thames, calling it New Troy, later Trinovantum. King Lud, brother of Cassibellaunus, later walls it and names it Kaerlud, the city of Lud, which brings strife with his brother Nennius. Geoffrey passes over the quarrel, since Gildas has told it at length.

Viso tandem regno affectavit Brutus civitatem ædificare. seen at-last the-kingdom desired Brutus a-city to-build Affectum itaque suum exequens, circuit totius terræ the-desire and-so his-own carrying-out he-goes-round of-the-whole land situm, ut congruum locum inveniret: perveniens autem the-situation so-that a-fitting place he-might-find arriving moreover ad Tamensem fluvium, deambulavit per littora, locumque at the-Thames river he-walked-along through the-shores and-a-place nactus est proposito suo perspicuum. Condidit itaque got he-has for-purpose his-own evident he-founded and-so civitatem ibidem, eamque Trojam novam vocavit: et a-city in-the-same-place and-it Troy new called and hoc nomine multis postmodum temporibus appellata tandem by-this name for-many afterward times called at-last per corruptionem vocabuli Trinovantum dicta fuit. At through the-corruption of-the-word Trinovantum called it-was but postquam Lud Cassibellauni frater, qui cum Julio Cæsare after Lud of-Cassibellaunus brother who with Julius Caesar dimicavit, regni gubernaculum adeptus est: cinxit fought of-the-kingdom the-helm obtained has he-girded eam nobilissimis muris necnon et turribus mira arte it with-most-noble walls nor-not also with-towers with-wonderful art fabricatis: de nomine quoque suo eam Kaerlud dici built from the-name also his-own it Kaerlud to-be-called jussit: id est civitas Lud. Unde postea maxima contentio be-ordered that is the-city of-Lud whence afterward greatest strife orta est inter ipsum et Nennium fratrem suum: qui graviter arisen has between him and Nennius brother his-own who heavily ferebat illum nomen Trojæ in patria sua velle delere. bore him the-name of-Troy in country his-own to-wish to-destroy Quam contentionem quia Gildas historiographus satis prolixè which strife because Gildas the-historian enough at-length tractavit, eam præterire prælegi, ne id quod tantus scriptor treated it to-pass-over I-preferred lest that which so-great a-writer tanto stylo paravit viliori dictamine videar maculare. with-so-great style he-prepared with-meaner composition I-may-seem to-stain

Urbem conditam civibus donat

XVIII • BRUTUS GIVES THE CITY TO ITS CITIZENS

Brutus gives the new city to its citizens with laws by which to live in peace. Eli the priest then rules in Judea, and the Philistines have taken the ark of the covenant. The sons of Hector reign in Troy, having driven out Antenor's descendants, and Silvius Aeneas, son of Aeneas and Brutus' uncle, reigns in Italy, third king of the Latins.

Postquam igitur prædictus dux prædictam urbem condidit, after therefore the-aforsaid leader the-aforsaid city founded dedicavit eam civibus jure victuris, deditque legem qua he-dedicated it to-the-citizens by-law about-to-live and-gave a-law by-which pacifice tractarentur. Regnabat tunc in Judæa Heli sacerdos, peacefully they-might-be-handled reigned then in Judea Eli the-priest et arca testamenti capta erat a Philisteis. Regnabant in Troja and the-ark of-the-covenant taken had-been by the-Philistines reigned in Troy filii Hectoris, expulsis posteris Antenoris. Regnabat in Italia the-sons of-Hector driven-out the-descendants of-Antenor reigned in Italy Silvius Æneas, Æneæ filius, avunculus Bruti, Latinorum tertius.
Silvius Aeneas of-Aeneas son uncle of-Brutus of-the-Latins third

BOOK II

Bruto mortuo, tres filii regnum partiuntur

I · THE THREE SONS OF BRUTUS DIVIDE THE KINGDOM

Brutus dies in the twenty-fourth year after his arrival, and his three sons divide Britain. Locrinus takes the middle, called Loegria, Kamber the land beyond the Severn, called Kambria, and Albanactus the north, called Albany. Humber, king of the Huns, lands in Albany, kills Albanactus, and drives his people to Locrinus.

Cognoverat autem Brutus Ignogen uxorem suam: et ex ea had-known moreover Brutus Ignoge wife his-own and from her genuit tres inclytos filios, quibus erant nomina, Locrinus, begot three renowned sons to-whom were names Locrinus Albanactus, et Kamber. Hi, postquam pater vigesimo Albanactus and Kamber these after the-father in-the-twentieth quarto anno sui adventus ab hoc seculo migravit, fourth year of-bis-own arrival from this world departed sepelierunt eum intra urbem quam condiderat, et dividerunt buried him within the-city which he-had-founded and divided regnum Britanniae inter se, et secesserunt unusquisque the-kingdom of-Britain among themselves and withdrew each-one in locum suum. Locrinus, qui primogenitus erat, possedit into place his-own Locrinus who first-born was possessed mediam partem insulae, quae postea de nomine ejus appellata the-middle part of-the-island which afterward from the-name his called est Loegria. Kamber autem partem illam quae est ultra was Loegria Kamber moreover part that which is beyond Sabrinum flumen, quae nunc Guallia vocatur, quae de nomine the-Severn river which now Wales is-called which from the-name ipsius postmodum Kambria multo tempore dicta fuit: unde his afterward Kambria for-much time called was whence adhuc gens patriæ lingua Britannica sese Kambros still the-people of-the-country in-the-language British itself Kambri appellat. At Albanactus junior possedit patriam, quæ calls but Albanactus the-younger possessed the-country which lingua nostra his temporibus appellatur Scotia: et nomen in-language our in-these times is-called Scotland and the-name ei ex nomine suo Albaniam dedit. Illis deinde concordi to-it from the-name his-own Albany he-gave them then with-harmonious pace diu regnantibus, applicuit Humber rex Hunnorum in peace long reigning landed Humber king of-the-Huns in Albaniam: et commisso prælio cum Albanacto, interfecit Albany and joined battle with Albanactus he-killed eum: et gentem patriæ ad Locrinum diffugere coegit. him and the-people of-the-country to Locrinus to-flee forced Locrinus Humbrum vincit, Estrildem amore prosequitur

II · LOCRINUS DEFEATS HUMBER AND LOVES ESTRILDIS

Locrinus and Kamber defeat Humber, who drowns in the river that takes his name. Among the spoils Locrinus keeps three captive girls, one of them Estrildis, daughter of a German king, of a beauty whiter than ivory or snow. He wishes to marry her, which enrages Corineus, whose daughter Locrinus has pledged to wed.

Locrinus igitur rumore audito, associavit sibi fratrem Locrinus therefore the-rumor heard joined to-himself brother suum Kambrum: et collegit totam juventutem patriæ, his-own Kamber and gathered the-whole youth of-the-country et ivit obviam regi Hunnorum circa fluvium qui nunc and went to-meet the-king of-the-Huns near the-river which now vocatur Humber. Inito ergo congressu compulit Humbrum is-called Humber entered therefore the-engagement he-drove Humber in fugam, qui usque ad fluvium fugiens, submersus est into flight who all-the-way to the-river fleeing drowned was in eo, et nomen suum flumini reliquit. Locrinus ergo in it and name his-own to-the-river left Locrinus therefore victoria potitus, hostium spolia sociis largitur: nihil of-the-victory having-gained of-the-enemies the-spoils to-the-comrades lavishes nothing sibi ipsi retinens præter aurum et argentum quod intra for-himself himself keeping except the-gold and silver which within naves invenit. Retinuit quoque sibi tres puellas miræ the-ships he-found he-kept also for-himself three girls of-wonderful pulcritudinis, quarum una cujusdam regis Germaniæ fuerat beauty of-whom one of-a-certain king of-Germany had-been filia, quam prædictus Humber cum duabus rapuerat the-daughter whom the-aforesaid Humber with two had-seized puellis, dum patriam vastaret: erat nomen illi Estrildis, girls while the-country he-was-laying-waste was the-name to-her Estrildis et tantæ pulcritudinis erat, quod non facile reperiebatur and of-so-great beauty she-was that not easily was-found quæ ei conferri poterat: candorem carnis ejus nec who with-her to-be-compared could the-whiteness of-the-flesh her neither nitidum ebur, nec nix recenter cadens, nec lilia ulla vincebant. gleaming ivory nor snow newly falling nor lilies any surpassed Amore illius Locrinus captus, ejus cubile inire voluit, by-love of-her Locrinus taken her bed to-enter wished ipsamque sibi maritali teda copulare. Quod cum Corineo and-her to-himself with-marital torch to-join which when to-Corineus compertum esset, indignatus est ultra modum: quoniam found-out had-been indignant he-was beyond measure since Locrinus pactus fuerat sese filiam ipsius ducturum.

Locrinus pledged had himself the-daughter his about-to-marry

Corineus suam filiam Estrildi postpositam indignatur

III · CORINEUS' ANGER

Corineus comes before the king swinging his axe and asks whether this is the reward for the wounds he took in the service of Locrinus' father. He threatens vengeance while his right hand keeps the strength that slew the giants. Their friends intervene, calm him, and make Locrinus keep his pledge.

Adivit ergo regem, et bipennem in dextra manu he-went therefore to-the-king and the-two-edged-axe in the-right hand librans, illum hoc modo allocutus est: "Hæccine rependis swinging him in-this manner addressed he-has is-it-these-things do-you-repay mihi, Locrine, ob tot vulnera quæ in obsequio patris to-me O-Locrinus for so-many wounds which in the-service of-father tui perpressus sum, dum prælia committeret cum ignotis your suffered I-have while battles he-joined with unknown gentibus: ut filia mea postposita, te connubio cujusdam peoples that daughter my set-aside you to-the-marriage of-a-certain barbaræ submitteres? Non impune feres, dum barbarian-woman you-should-submit not unpunished you-will-bear-it while vigor huic inerit dextræ, quæ tot gigantibus per strength in-this will-be right-hand which from-so-many giants along Tyrrhena littora gaudia vitæ eripuit." Hoc iterum, iterumque the-Tyrrhenian shores the-joys of-life snatched this again and-again proclamans, librabat bipennem quasi eum percussurus: proclaiming he-was-swinging the-two-edged-axe as-if him about-to-strike cum amici utrorumque sese interposuerunt. Sedato vero when the-friends of-both themselves interposed calmed indeed Corineo, Locrinum quod pepigerat exequi coegerunt.
Corineus Locrinus what he-had-pledged to-carry-out they-forced Locrinus Guendolænam, Corinei filiam matrimonio ducit

IV · LOCRINUS MARRIES GUENDOLAENA, CORINEUS' DAUGHTER

Locrinus marries Corineus' daughter Guendolaena but hides Estrildis in an underground chamber in Trinovantum. For seven years he visits her in secret, pretending to offer hidden sacrifices to his gods. Estrildis bears a daughter, Sabre, and Guendolaena a son, Maddan, who is raised by his grandfather Corineus.

Duxit itaque Locrinus filiam Corinei Guendolænam married and-so Locrinus the-daughter of-Corineus Guendolaena nomine, nec tamen Estrildis amoris oblitus est: sed facto by-name nor yet of-Estrildis the-love forgotten has but made in urbe Trinovanto subterraneo, eam in ipso inclusit, in the-city Trinovantum an-underground-chamber her in it he-shut familiaribusque suis honorifice servandam tradidit. Volebat and-to-the-intimates his-own honorably to-be-kept handed-over he-wished saltem furtivam Venerem cum ea agere. Timore namque at-least stealthy love with her to-pursue by-fear for Corinei anxius, non audebat eam patenter habere, sed, ut of-Corineus troubled not he-dared her openly to-have but as prædictum est, eam occuluit, frequentavitque septem annis said-before it-has-been her he-bid and-visited for-seven years integris nemine comperiente, exceptis illis qui ejus familiaritati whole no-one discovering excepted those who his to-intimacy proximiores erant. Nempe quotiescunque eam adibat, fingebat nearer were indeed as-often-as her he-approached he-pretended se velle occultum sacrificium diis suis facere. Unde quosque himself to-wish a-secret sacrifice to-gods his-own to-make whence all falsa credulitate movebat idipsum existimare. Interea grava with-false credulity he-moved the-same-thing to-think meanwhile pregnant facta est Estrildis ediditque filiam miræ pulchritudinis, made was Estrildis and-bore a-daughter of-wonderful beauty quam Sabren vocavit. Gravida etiam facta est Guendolœna, whom Sabre she-called pregnant also made was Guendolaena genuitque puerum, cui impositum est nomen Maddan. Hic and-bore a-boy on-whom imposed was the-name Maddan this-one Corineo avo suo traditus, ipsius documenta discebat. to-Corineus grandfather his-own handed-over his teachings learned Locrinus interficitur: Estrildis et Sabre in fluvium præcipitantur

V • LOCRINUS KILLED, ESTRILDIS AND SABRE DROWNED

When Corineus dies, Locrinus abandons Guendolaena and makes Estrildis queen. Guendolaena raises the youth of Cornwall, and Locrinus is killed by an arrow in battle by the Stour. She takes the kingdom, has Estrildis and Sabre thrown into the river now called the Severn, and names the river Sabren after the girl.

Subsequente tandem tempore, defuncto Corineo, deseruit following at-last time having-died Corineus deserted Locrinus Guendolœnam, Estrildemque in reginam erexit.
Locrinus Guendolaena and-Estrildis into queen raised Itaque Guendolœna ultra modum indignans adivit Cornubiam, and-so Guendolaena beyond measure indignant went to-Cornwall collectaque totius regni illius juventute cœpit inquietationem and-gathered of-the-whole kingdom of-that the-youth began harassment Locrino ingerere. Conserto tandem utrorumque exercitu, on-Locrinus to-heap joined at-last of-both the-army commiserunt prælium juxta Sturam fluvium ubi Locrinus, they-joined battle beside the-Stour river where Locrinus ictu sagittæ percussus, gaudia vitæ amisit. Perempto igitur by-a-stroke of-arrow struck the-joys of-life lost slain therefore illo, cepit Guendolœna regni gubernaculum paterna furens him took Guendolaena of-the-kingdom the-helm with-paternal raging insania. Jubet enim Estrildem et filiam eius Sabren præcipitari madness she-orders for Estrildis and daughter her Sabre to-be-burled in fluvium, qui nunc Sabrina dicitur. Fecitque edictum into the-river which now Severn is-called and-she-made an-edict per totam Britanniam, ut fluvius nomine puellæ vocaretur. through all Britain that the-river by-the-name of-the-girl should-be-called Volebat etenim æternitatis nomen illi impendere, quia maritus she-wished for of-eternity a-name on-her to-bestow because husband suus eam generaverat: unde contigit quod usque in hunc her-own her had-begotten whence it-happened that all-the-way to this diem appellatum est flumen Britannica lingua Sabren, quod day called was the-river in-the-British tongue Sabren which per corruptionem nominis alia lingua Sabrina vocatur. through corruption of-the-name in-another tongue Sabrina is-called Guendolæna Maddan regem facit, cui Mempricius succedit

VI · MADDAN AND MEMPRICIUS

After fifteen years Guendolaena gives the throne to her son Maddan and retires to Cornwall, in the days of Samuel and of Homer. Maddan reigns forty years, and his son Mempricius murders his brother Malim at a parley and rules as a tyrant, destroying the nobles. He abandons his wife for sodomy and in his twentieth year is devoured by wolves while hunting.

Regnavit autem Guendolæna quindecim annis post reigned moreover Guendolaena for-fifteen years after interfectionem Locrini: qui decem annis regnaverat. Et cum the-killing of-Locrinus who for-ten years had-reigned and when vidisset Maddan filium suum ætate adultum, sceptro she-had-seen Maddan son her-own in-age grown with-the-scepter regni eum insignivit: contenta regione Cornubiæ, dum of-the-kingdom him she-marked content with-the-region of-Cornwall while reliquum vitæ deduceret. Tunc Samuel propheta regnabat in the-rest of-life she-should-lead then Samuel the-prophet reigned in Judæa, et Silvius Æneas adhuc vivebat. Et Homerus clarus Judea and Silvius Aeneas still lived and Homer a-famous rhetor et poëta habebatur. Insignitus sceptro Maddan, ex rhetor and poet was-held marked with-the-scepter Maddan of uxore genuit duos filios Mempricius et Malim. Regnumque a-wife begot two sons Mempricius and Malim and-the-kingdom cum pace et diligentia quadraginta annis tractavit. Quo with peace and diligence for-forty years he-handled who defuncto, orta est inter prædictos fratres discordia propter having-died arisen has between the-aforesaid brothers discord on-account-of regnum: quia uterque totam insulam possidere æstuabat. the-kingdom because each the-whole island to-possess burned Mempricius autem affectum suum adimplere desiderans, Mempricius moreover desire his-own to-fulfill desiring colloquium inivit cum Malim, quasi concordiam facturus. Sed a-parley entered with Malim as-if concord about-to-make but face proditiōis inflammatus, ipsum inter prolocutores with-the-torch of-treachery inflamed him among the-spokesmen interfecit. Deinde regimen totius insulæ nactus, tantam killed then the-rule of-the-whole island having-got so-great tyrannidem exercuit in populum, quod fere quemque tyranny he-exercised upon the-people that almost every-one nobilissimum perimebat. Sed et totam progeniem suam most-noble he-destroyed but also the-whole offspring his-own exosus, quemcunque sibi in regno posse succedere hating whomever to-him in the-kingdom to-be-able to-succeed timebat, vel vi vel proditiōe opprimebat. Relicta quoque he-feared either by-force or by-treachery he-crushed left also propria uxore sua, ex qua inclytum juvenem Ebraucum own wife his-own by whom the-renowned youth Ebraucus genuerat, sese Sodomitanæ libidini dedit non naturalem be-had-begotten himself to-Sodomite lust gave not natural Venerem naturali voluptati præferens. Vigesimo tandem love to-natural pleasure preferring in-the-twentieth at-last regni sui anno, dum venationem exercebat, secessit of-kingdom his-own year while hunting he-was-pursuing he-withdrew a sociis in quandam convallem, ubi a multitudine from the-comrades into a-certain valley where by a-multitude rabiosorum luporum circumdatus, miserrime devoratus est. of-raging wolves surrounded most-miserably devoured he-was Tunc Saul regnabat in Judæa, et Eurystheus in Lacedæmonia. then Saul reigned in Judea and Eurystheus in Lacedaemon Ebraucus Gallos devincit, Kaerebrauc atque alias quasdam urbes condit

VII • EBRAUCUS CONQUERS IN GAUL AND FOUNDS CITIES

Mempricius' son Ebraucus, a man of great stature and strength, reigns forty years. He is the first after Brutus to lead a fleet to Gaul, and he returns rich with plunder. In the days of King David he founds Kaerebrauc beyond the Humber, Alclud toward Albany, and the town on Mount Agned called the Castle of the Maidens.

Defuncto itaque Mempricio Ebraucus filius ejus, vir magnæ having-died and-so Mempricius Ebraucus son his a-man of-great staturæ et miræ fortitudinis, regimen Britannix suscepit, stature and of-wonderful strength the-rule of-Britain undertook quod quadraginta annis tenuit. Hic primus post Brutum which for-forty years he-held this-one first after Brutus classem in partes Galliarum duxit, et illato prælio affecit a-fleet into the-parts of-the-Gauls led and brought-on battle afflicted provincias cæde virorum atque urbium oppressione: the-provinces with-slaughter of-men and of-cities with-oppression infinitaque auri et argenti copia ditatus cum victoria and-with-infinite of-gold and of-silver abundance enriched with victory reversus est. Deinde trans Humbrum condidit civitatem, returned he-has then beyond the-Humber he-founded a-city quam de nomine suo vocavit Kaerebrauc, hoc est urbem which from the-name his-own he-called Kaerebrauc that is the-city Ebrauci. Et tunc David rex regnabat in Judæa, et Silvius of-Ebraucus and then David the-king reigned in Judea and Silvius Latinus in Italia, et Gad, Nathan et Asaph prophetabant Latinus in Italy and Gad Nathan and Asaph prophesied in Israel. Condidit etiam Ebraucus urbem Alclud versus in Israel he-founded also Ebraucus the-city Alclud towards Albaniam, et oppidum montis Agned: quod nunc castellum Albany and the-town of-the-mount Agned which now the-castle puellarum dicitur, et montem Dolosorum. of-the-maidens is-called and the-mount of-the-Deceitful

Ebrauci filii viginti ad Germaniam, viginti filiæ ad Italiam navigant

VIII · THE TWENTY SONS AND THE DAUGHTERS OF EBRAUCUS

Ebraucus has twenty sons and thirty daughters by twenty wives and rules sixty years. He sends his daughters to Silvius Alba in Italy, where they marry Trojan nobles whom the Latin and Sabine women refuse. His sons, led by Assaracus, sail to Germany and win a kingdom there with Silvius Alba's help.

Genuit autem viginti filios ex viginti conjugibus quas habebat, he-begot moreover twenty sons of twenty wives whom he-bad necnon et triginta filias: regnumque Britannix sexaginta nor-not also thirty daughters and-the-kingdom of-Britain for-sixty annis fortissime tractavit. Erant autem nomina filiorum ejus, years most-bravely he-handled were moreover the-names of-the-sons his

Brutus, Viride-scutum, Margadud, Sisillius, Regin, Moravid, Brutus Greenshield Margadud Sisillius Regin Moravid Bladud, Lagon, Bodloan, Kincar, Spaden, Gaul, Darden, Eldad, Bladud Lagon Bodloan Kincar Spaden Gaul Darden Eldad
 Juor, Gangu, Hector, Kerin, Rud, Assarach, Buel. Nomina Juor Gangu Hector Kerin Rud Assaracus Buel the-names autem filiarum, Gloigni, Ignogni, Oudas, Guenliam, Gaudid, moreover of-the-daughters Gloigni Ignogni Oudas Guenlian Gaudid Angarad, Guendoloe, Tangustel, Gorgon, Medlan, Methahel, Angarad Guendoloe Tangustel Gorgon Medlan Methabel Ourar, Malure, Kambreda, Ragan, Gael, Ecub, Nest, Cheun, Ourar Malure Kambreda Ragan Gael Ecub Nest Cheun
 Stadud, Gladud, Ebren, Blagan, Aballac, Angaes, Galaes
Stadud Gladud Ebren Blagan Aballac Angaes Galaes omnium pulcherrima quæ tunc in Britannia sive Gallia fuerant, of-all most-beautiful who then in Britain or Gaul had-been Edra, Anaor, Stadial, Egron. Has omnes direxit pater in Edra Anaor Stadial Egron these all sent the-father into Italiam ad Silvium Albam qui post Silvium Latinum regnabat.
Italy to Silvius Alba who after Silvius Latinus reigned Fuerunt ibi maritata nobilioribus Trojanis, quorum cubilia they-were there married to-the-more-noble Trojans whose beds et Latinæ et Sabinæ diffugiebant. At filii duce both the-Latin-women and the-Sabine-women shunned but the-sons as-leader Assaraco fratre direxerunt classem in Germaniam: et auxilio Assaracus the-brother directed a-fleet into Germany and with-the-help Silvii Albæ usi, subjugato populo adepti sunt regnum. of-Silvius Alba having-used subjugated the-people obtained they-have a-kingdom

Brutus, Leil, Hudibras, ordine reges fiunt

IX · BRUTUS GREENSHIELD, LEIL, AND HUDIBRAS

Brutus Greenshield reigns twelve years, and his son Leil founds Kaerleil in the north while Solomon builds the Temple. Leil's weak old age brings civil strife, which his son Hudibras ends. Hudibras founds Canterbury, Winchester, and Shaftesbury, where an eagle speaks while the wall is built.

Brutus autem cognomento Viride-scutum cum patre remansit, Brutus moreover by-surname Greenshield with the-father remained regnique gubernaculo potitus post patrem, duodecim and-of-the-kingdom of-the-helm having-gained after the-father for-twelve annis regnavit. Huic successit Leil ejus filius, pacis atque years reigned to-him succeeded Leil his son of-peace and æquitatis amator. Qui ut prosperitate regni usus est, of-justice a-lover who when the-prosperity of-the-kingdom enjoyed he-has in Aquilonari parte Britanniae civitatem ædificavit, de nomine in the-northern part of-Britain a-city built from the-name ejus vocatam Kaerleil. Tunc Salomon cœpit ædificare templum his called Kaerleil then Solomon began to-build the-temple Domini in Hierusalem: et regina Saba venit audire sapientiam of-the-Lord in Jerusalem and the-queen of-Sheba came to-hear the-wisdom ejus: et tunc Silvius Epitus patri Albæ in regnum successit his and then Silvius Epitus to-the-father Alba in the-kingdom succeeded apud Latinos. Vixit deinde Leil post sumtum regnum viginti among the-Latins lived then Leil after taken the-kingdom for-twenty quinque annis, sed regnum tepide in fine rexit. Quocirca five years but the-kingdom feebly at the-end he-ruled wherefore segnitia insistente, civilis discordia subito in regno orta sloth pressing civil discord suddenly in the-kingdom arisen est. Post hunc regnavit filius ejus Hudibras triginta novem has after this-one reigned the-son his Hudibras for-thirty nine annis: qui populum ex civili dissidio in concordiam reducens years who the-people from civil dissension into concord leading-back condidit Kaerlem, hoc est Kantuariam. Condidit etiam Kaerguen founded Kaerlem that is Canterbury he-founded also Kaerguen hoc est Guintoniam, atque oppidum montis Paladur, quod that is Winchester and the-town of-the-mount Paladur which nunc Sefovia dicitur. Ibi tunc aquila locuta est, dum murus now Shaftesbury is-called there then an-eagle spoken has while the-wall ædificaretur: cujus sermones si veros esse arbitrarer sicut was-being-built whose speeches if true to-be I-thought as cetera, memoriæ tradere non diffugerem. Tunc Capys filius the-other-things to-memory to-hand-down not I-would-shun then Capys son Epiti regnabat: et Aggeus, Amos, Joel, Azarias prophetabant. of-Epitus reigned and Haggai Amos Joel Azariah prophesied

Bladud artem magicam exercet

X · BLADUD PRACTICES MAGIC

Bladud founds Bath, with hot baths under the care of Minerva, whose temple keeps undying fires that turn to stony balls. In his time Elijah prays that it not rain, and it does not rain for three and a half years. Bladud teaches necromancy throughout Britain, makes himself wings, tries to fly, and is dashed to pieces on the temple of Apollo in Trinovantum.

Successit deinde Bladud filius, tractavitque regnum viginti succeeded then Bladud the-son and-handled the-kingdom for-twenty annis. Hic ædificavit urbem Kaerbadum, quæ nunc Badus years this-one built a-city Kaerbadum which now Bath nuncupatur, fecitque in illa calida balnea ad usus mortalium is-called and-made in it hot baths for the-uses of-mortals apta. Quibus præfecit numen Minervæ: in cujus æde fit over-which he-set the-deity of-Minerva in whose temple inextinguibiles posuit ignes, qui nunquam deficiebant in inextinguishable he-placed fires which never failed into favillas, sed ex quo tabescere incipiebant, in saxeos globos ashes but from when to-waste-away they-began into stony balls vertebantur. (Tunc Elias oravit ne plueret super terram, were-turned then Elijah prayed lest it-should-rain upon the-earth et non pluit annos tres et menses sex.) Hic admodum and not it-rained years three and months six this-one very ingeniosus homo fuit, docuitque necromantiam per regnum ingenious a-man was and-taught necromancy through the-kingdom Britanniae: nec præstigia facere quievit, donec paratis sibi alis of-Britain nor illusions to-make ceased until prepared for-himself wings ire per summitatem aëris tentavit, ceciditque super templum to-go through the-top of-the-air he-tried and-fell upon the-temple Apollinis intra urbem Trinovantum, in multa frustra contritus. of-Apollo within the-city Trinovantum into many bits crushed

Leir, cui filius deerat, regnum inter filias dividit

XI • LEIR DIVIDES THE KINGDOM AMONG HIS DAUGHTERS

Leir, founder of Leicester, has three daughters and in old age tests which loves him most. Goneril and Regau flatter him and are promised a third of Britain each, but Cordelia says that as much as he has, so much he is worth, and so much she loves him. Angry, he gives her no share, but Aganippus, king of the Franks, takes her as his wife without a dowry.

Dato igitur fatis Bladud, erigitur Leir filius ejusdem in given therefore to-the-fates Bladud is-raised Leir son of-the-same into regem, qui sexaginta annis patriam viriliter rexit. Ædificavit king who for-sixty years the-country manfully ruled he-built autem super fluvium Soram civitatem quæ Britannice Kaerleir, moreover upon the-river Soar a-city which in-British Kaerleir Saxonice vero Leir-Cestre nuncupatur. Cui negata masculini in-Saxon indeed Leicester is-called to-whom denied of-the-male sexus prole, natæ sunt ei tantummodo tres filiæ, vocatæ, sex offspring born were to-him only three daughters called Gonorilla, Regau, Cordeilla. Qui eas miro amore, sed Goneril Regau Cordelia who them with-wonderful love but magis natu minimam, videlicet Cordeillam, diligebat. Cumque more by-birth the-least namely Cordelia loved and-when in senectutem vergere cœpisset: cogitavit regnum suum into old-age to-decline he-had-begun he-thought the-kingdom his-own ipsis dividere: easque talibus maritis copulare qui easdem to-them to-divide and-them to-such husbands to-join who the-same cum regno haberent. Sed ut sciret quæ illarum with the-kingdom should-have but so-that he-might-know which of-them majori regni parte dignior esset, adivit singulas ut of-the-greater of-the-kingdom part more-worthy might-be he-went to-each-one to interrogaret quæ ipsum magis diligeret. Interrogante ergo ask which him more loved asking therefore illo, Gonorilla prius numina cæli testata est, patrem him Goneril first the-deities of-heaven called-to-witness has the-father sibi plus cordi esse quam animam quæ in corpore suo to-her more at-heart to-be than the-soul which in body her-own degebat. Cui pater: “Quoniam senectutem meam vitæ tuæ dwelt to-whom the-father since old-age my to-life your præposuisti, te, carissima filia, maritabo juveni quemcunque you-have-preferred you O-dearest daughter I-shall-marry to-a-youth whomever elegeris, cum tertia parte Britannix.” Deinde Regau, you-will-have-chosen with the-third part of-Britain then Regau quæ secunda erat, exemplo sororis suæ, benivolentiam who second was by-the-example of-sister her-own the-goodwill patris allicere volens, jurejurando respondit se nullatenus of-the-father to-entice wishing by-oath answered herself by-no-means conceptum exprimere aliter posse, nisi quod ipsum super the-thought to-express otherwise to-be-able except that him above omnes creaturas diligeret. Credulus ergo pater, eadem all creatures she-loved credulous therefore the-father with-the-same dignitate quam primogenitæ promiserat, cum alia tertia dignity which to-the-first-born he-had-promised with another third parte regni eam maritavit. At Cordeilla ultima, cum part of-the-kingdom her married but Cordelia the-last when intellexisset eum prædictarum adulationibus acquievisse, she-had-understood him of-the-aforsaid-ones to-the-flatteries to-have-assented tentare illum cupiens, aliter respondere perrexit: "Est uspiam, to-test him desiring otherwise to-answer proceeded is anywhere mi pater, filia quæ patrem suum plusquam patrem my father a-daughter who father her-own more-than a-father diligere præsumat? non reor equidem ullam esse quæ hoc to-love would-presume not I-think indeed any to-be who this fateri audeat: nisi jocosis verbis veritatem celare nitatur. to-confess would-dare unless with-jesting words the-truth to-bide she-strives Nempe ego dilexi te semper ut patrem: et adhuc a indeed I have-loved you always as a-father and still from proposito meo non divertor. Etsi a me magis extorquere purpose my not I-turn-aside even-if from me more to-wring insistas, audi certitudinem amoris, quem adversus te habeo: you-insist hear the-certainty of-the-love which towards you I-have et interrogationibus tuis finem impone. Etenim quantum and to-questions your an-end impose for as-much-as habes, tantum vales, tantumque te diligo." Porro pater you-have so-much you-are-worth and-so-much you I-love further the-father ratus eam ex abundantia cordis dixisse, vehementer having-thought her from the-abundance of-the-heart to-have-spoken vehemently indignans, quod responsurus erat manifestare non distulit: indignant what about-to-answer he-was to-make-plain not delayed “Quia in tantum senectutem patris tui sprevisi, ut because to such-a-degree the-old-age of-father your you-have-spurned that vel eo amore quo me sorores tuæ diligunt dedignata even with-that love with-which me sisters your love disdained es diligere, et ego dedignabor te, nec usquam in regno you-have to-love also I shall-disdain you nor anywhere in kingdom meo cum tuis sororibus partem habebis. Non dico tamen, my with your sisters a-part will-you-have not I-say yet cum filia mea sis, quin te externo alicui (si illum since daughter my you-are but-that you to-a-foreign someone if him fortuna obtulerit) utcunque maritem. Illud autem affirmo, fortune will-have-offered somehow I-may-marry that moreover I-affirm quod nunquam eo honore quo sorores tuas te that never with-that honor with-which sisters your you maritare laborabo. Quippe cum te hucusque plusquam ceteras to-marry shall-I-labor indeed since you hitherto more-than the-others dilexerim: tu vero me minus quam ceteræ diligas. Nec I-have-loved you indeed me less than the-others love nor mora: consilio procerum regni dedit prædictas puellas delay by-the-counsel of-the-nobles of-the-kingdom he-gave the-aforsaid girls duas duobus ducibus, Cornubiæ videlicet et Albaniæ, cum two to-two dukes of-Cornwall namely and of-Albany with medietate tantum insulæ: dum ipse viveret. Post obitum half only of-the-island while he-himself should-live after the-death autem ejus, totam monarchiam Britanniæ concessit habendam. moreover his the-whole monarchy of-Britain he-granted to-be-had Contigit deinde quod Aganippus rex Francorum audita fama it-happened then that Aganippus king of-the-Franks heard the-fame pulchritudinis Cordeillæ, continuo nuncios suos ad regem of-the-beauty of-Cordelia at-once messengers his-own to the-king direxerit, rogans ut Cordeilla sibi conjugali teda copulanda directed asking that Cordelia to-him by-the-conjugal torch to-be-joined traderetur. At pater in prædicta adhuc ira perseverans should-be-handed-over but the-father in the-aforesaid still anger persisting respondit, se illam libenter daturum, sed sine terra et answered himself her gladly about-to-give but without land and pecunia. Regnum namque suum cum omni auro et argento money the-kingdom for his-own with all gold and silver Gonorillæ et Regau, sororibus Cordeillæ distribuerat. Cumque to-Goneril and to-Regau the-sisters of-Cordelia he-had-distributed and-when id Aganippo nunciatum fuisset, amore virginis inflammatus, this to-Aganippus announced had-been by-love of-the-maiden inflamed misit iterum ad Leirum regem, dicens se satis auri he-sent again to Leir the-king saying himself enough of-gold et argenti, aliarumque possessionum habere: quia tertiam and of-silver and-of-other possessions to-have because the-third partem Galliæ possidebat: se vero tantummodo puellam part of-Gaul he-possessed himself indeed only the-girl captare, ut ex illa hæredes haberet. Denique confirmato to-seek so-that from her heirs he-might-have finally confirmed fœdere mittitur Cordeilla ad Galliam, et Aganippo maritatur. the-pact is-sent Cordelia to Gaul and to-Aganippus is-married Leir, a filiabus regia potestate privatus, Galliam petit

XII · LEIR, DEPRIVED OF POWER, GOES TO GAUL

The dukes of Albany and Cornwall, Leir's sons-in-law, seize his kingdom. Goneril cuts his sixty knights to thirty, Regau to five, and Goneril again to one, and he crosses to Gaul lamenting that friends loved his gifts and not him. At Karitia, Cordelia secretly provides money, clothes, and forty knights so that he may come to her court as a king.

Post multum vero temporis, ut Leir torpere cœpit after much indeed of-time when Leir to-grow-torpid began senio, insurrexerunt in eum prædicti duces, quibus with-old-age rose-up against him the-aforesaid dukes to-whom Britanniam cum duabus filiabus diviserat, abstuleruntque Britain with two daughters he-had-divided and-they-took-away ei regnum regiamque potestatem, quam usque ad illud from-him the-kingdom and-the-royal power which all-the-way to that tempus viriliter et gloriose tenuerat. Concordia tamen habita time manfully and gloriously he-had-held with-concord yet had retinuit eum alter generorum Maglaunus dux Albanix cum kept him one of-the-sons-in-law Maglaunus duke of-Albany with sexaginta militibus, ne secum inglorius maneret. Elapso sixty knights lest with-him inglorious he-should-remain having-elapsed deinde biennio, moram ipso apud generum faciente, indignata then two-years a-stay he with the-son-in-law making indignant est Gonorilla filia ob multitudinem militum ejus, was Goneril the-daughter on-account-of the-multitude of-knights his qui convicia ministris inferebant, quia eis profusior who insults on-the-servants heaped because to-them more-lavish epinomia non præbebatur. Proinde maritum suum affata, provision not was-offered accordingly husband her-own having-addressed jussit patrem obsequio triginta militum contentum esse, she-ordered the-father with-the-service of-thirty knights content to-be relictis ceteris triginta quos habebat. Unde rex iratus, relicto left the-other thirty whom he-had whence the-king angry left Maglauno, petivit Hernuinum ducem Cornubiæ cui alteram Maglaunus sought Hernuinus duke of-Cornwall to-whom the-other natam Regau maritaverat. Et cum a duce honorifice receptus daughter Regau he-had-married and when by the-duke honorably received fuisset, non præteriit annus quin inter eorum familias he-had-been not passed a-year but-that between their households discordia orta fuerit: quamobrem Regau in indignationem discord arisen had wherefore Regau into indignation versa, præcepit patri cunctos milites suos deserere præter turned ordered to-the-father all knights his-own to-desert except quinque qui ei obsequium præstarent. Porro pater ultra five who to-him service should-offer further the-father beyond modum anxius, reversus est iterum ad primogenitam, sperans measure anxious returned has again to the-first-born hoping se posse eam in pietatem commovere, ut cum familia himself to-be-able her to pity to-move that with household sua retineretur. At illa a coepta indignatione nequaquam his-own he-might-be-kept but she from begun indignation by-no-means reversa est, sed per numina cæli juravit, quod nullatenus returned has but by the-deities of-heaven swore that by-no-means secum remaneret, nisi postpositis ceteris, solo milite with-herself he-should-remain unless set-aside the-others with-a-single knight contentus esset. Increpabat etiam eum senem, et nulla content he-were she-rebuked also him an-old-man and in-no re abundantem, velle cum tanta militia incedere. Cumque thing abounding to-wish with so-great knight-hood to-go-about and-when illa assensum voluntati ejus nullatenus præbuisset: paruit she assent to-will his by-no-means had-offered obeyed ille, et relictis cæteris cum solo milite contentus remansit.

he and left the-others with a-single knight content remained

At cum in memoriam pristinæ dignitatis reductus fuisset, but when into memory of-former dignity led-back he-had-been suam detestando miseriam in quam redactus erat: cogitare his-own cursing misery into which reduced he-was to-think cœpit minimam filiam trans Oceanum adire. Sed dubitabat he-began the-youngest daughter across the-Ocean to-approach but he-feared nihil ipsam sibi velle facere, quoniam tam ingloriose, ut nothing her for-him to-wish to-do since so ingloriously as prædictum est, eam habuisset. Indignans tamen miseriam said-before it-has-been her he-had-held indignant yet misery suam diutius ferre, in Gallias transfretavit. Sed transfretando his-own longer to-bear into the-Gauls he-crossed but in-crossing cum se vidisset tertium inter principes qui aderant: in when himself he-had-seen third among the-princes who were-present into hæc verba cum fletu et singultu prorupit: "O irrevocabilia these words with weeping and sobbing burst-out O irrevocable factorum decreta, quæ solito cursu iter fixum tenditis!

of-deeds decrees which by-the-accustomed course a-path fixed you-hold

Cur unquam me ad instabilem felicitatem promovere voluistis:

why ever me to unstable happiness to-advance did-you-wish cum major pœna sit ipsam amissam recolere, quam sequentis since greater penalty it-is it lost to-recall than of-following infelicitatis præsentia urgeri. Magis enim aggravat me illius unhappiness by-the-presence to-be-pressed more for weighs-down me of-that temporis memoria, quo tot centenis milibus militum time the-memory in-which so-many hundreds thousands of-knights stipatus et mœnia urbium diruere, et provincias hostium surrounded both the-walls of-cities to-pull-down and the-provinces of-enemies vastare solebam: quam calamitas miseræ meæ, quæ ipsos, to-lay-waste I-was-accustomed than the-calamity of-misery my which them qui jam sub pedibus meis jacebant, debilitatem meam who already under feet my lay weakness my deridere coegit. O irata fortuna! venietne dies unquam to-mock has-forced O angry fortune will-come-whether a-day ever qua ipsis vicem reddere potero: qui sic tempora mea in-which to-them a-return to-render I-shall-be-able who thus times my sicut paupertatem meam diffugerunt! O Cordeilla filia, quam as poverty my have-fled O Cordelia daughter how vera sunt dicta illa quæ mihi respondisti, quando quæsivi true are words those which to-me you-answered when I-asked a te, quem amorem adversus me haberes: dixisti enim, from you what love towards me you-had you-said for Quantum habes, tantum vales, tantumque te diligo: dum as-much-as you-have so-much you-are-worth and-so-much you I-love while igitur habui quod dare potui, visus fui valere eis qui therefore I-had what to-give I-could seemed I-was to-be-worth to-those who non mihi sed donis meis amici fuerant. Interim dilexerunt not to-me but to-gifts my friends had-been meanwhile they-loved me, sed magis munera mea. Nam abeuntibus muneribus, me but more gifts my for going-away the-gifts et ipsi abierunt. Sed qua fronte, carissima filia, te also they went-away but with-what face O-dearest daughter you audebo adire, qui ob prædicta verba iratus putavi shall-I-dare to-approach who on-account-of the-aforesaid words angry I-thought te deterius maritare quam sorores tuas, quæ post tot you worse to-marry than sisters your who after so-many beneficia quæ eis impendi, me exulem et pauperem esse benefits which on-them I-bestowed me an-exile and poor to-be patiuntur.” Ut tandem hæc et his similia dicendo allow when at-last these-things and to-these similar-things saying applicuit, venit Karitiam, ubi filia sua erat. Expectans be-landed he-came to-Karitia where daughter his-own was waiting autem extra urbem, misit ei nuncium suum qui indicaret moreover outside the-city he-sent to-her messenger his-own who should-show ipsum in tantam miseriam collapsum, et quia non habebat him into so-great misery fallen and because not he-had quod comederet aut indueret, misericordiam illius petebat. what he-might-eat or might-put-on the-mercy of-her he-sought Quo indicato, commota est Cordeilla, et flevit amare, which shown moved was Cordelia and wept bitterly quæsitque quot milites secum haberet: qui respondit, and-asked how-many knights with-himself he-had who answered ipsum neminem habere, excepto quodam armigero qui foris him no-one to-have excepted a-certain squire who outside cum eo expectabat. Tunc illa cepit quantum opus erat auri with him was-waiting then she took as-much-as need was of-gold et argenti, deditque nuncio, præcipiens ut patrem ad and of-silver and-gave to-the-messenger ordering that the-father to aliam civitatem duceret, ibique ipsum infirmum fingeret another city he-should-lead and-there him sick he-should-pretend et balnearet, indueret et foveret. Jussit etiam ut and should-bathe should-clothe and should-cherish she-ordered also that quadraginta milites bene indutos et paratos retineret, et forty knights well clothed and ready he-should-keep and tunc demum mandaret regi Aganippo et filiæ suæ then at-last should-send-word to-the-king Aganippus and to-daughter his-own sese advenisse. Nuncius illico reversus, direxit Leirem himself to-have-arrived the-messenger on-the-spot having-retained directed Leir regem ad aliam civitatem, absconditque eum ibi, donec the-king to another city and-bid him there until omnia quæ Cordeilla jusserat perfecisset. all-things which Cordelia had-ordered he-had-completed

Cordeilla patrem benigniter accipit

XIII · CORDELIA RECEIVES HER FATHER KINDLY

Richly equipped, Leir sends word to Aganippus and Cordelia that his sons-in-law have driven him from Britain and he has come for their help. Aganippus and Cordelia come out with the consuls and nobles to receive him with honor, and they give him command of all Gaul until he is restored to his former dignity.

Mox ut regio apparatu et ornamentis et familia soon when with-royal equipment and with-ornaments and with-household insignitus fuit, mandavit Aganippo et filiæ suæ, sese a marked-out he-was he-sent-word to-Aganippus and to-daughter his-own himself by generis suis expulsum esse e regno Britannia, et ad sons-in-law his-own driven-out to-be from the-kingdom of-Britain and to ipsos venisse ut auxilio eorum patriam suam recuperare them to-have-come that with-the-help of-them country his-own to-recover valeret. At illi cum consulibus et proceribus obviam he-might-be-able but they with consuls and nobles to-meet venientes honorifice susceperunt illum, dederuntque ei coming honorably received him and-gave to-him potestatem totius Gallia, donec eum in pristinam dignitatem the-power of-all Gaul until him into former dignity restaurassent.
they-had-restored

Leir regnum recuperat

XIV · LEIR RECOVERS HIS KINGDOM

Aganippus gathers every armed knight in Gaul, and Leir leads him, Cordelia, and the host to Britain, where they defeat the sons-in-law. Leir dies in the third year, and Aganippus dies too. Cordelia takes the throne and buries her father in a chamber she had made under the Soar at Leicester, built in honor of two-faced Janus.

Interea misit Aganippus legatos per universam Galliam ad meanwhile sent Aganippus envoys through all Gaul for colligendum in ea omnem armatum militem, ut auxilio suo gathering in it every armed knight so-that with-help his-own regnum Britanniae Leiro socero reddere laboraret. Quo facto, the-kingdom of-Britain to-Leir father-in-law to-restore he-might-labor which done duxit secum Leir Aganippum filiamque suam et collectam led with-himself Leir Aganippus and-daughter his-own and the-gathered multitudinem in Britanniam, pugnavitque cum generis, multitude into Britain and-fought with the-sons-in-law et triumpho potitus est. Deinde cum omnes in potestatem and of-the-triumph gained has then when all into power suam redegisset: tertio post anno mortuus est. Mortuus his-own he-had-brought in-the-third after year died he-has dead est etiam Aganippus. Cordeilla vero regni gubernaculum is also Aganippus Cordelia but of-the-kingdom the-helm adepta, sepelivit patrem in quodam subterraneo quod having-obtained buried the-father in a-certain underground-chamber which sub Sora fluvio intra Legecestriam fieri praeceperat. Erat under the-Soar river within Leicester to-be-made she-had-ordered was autem subterraneum illud conditum in honorem bifrontis moreover underground-chamber that founded in honor of-two-faced Jani. Ibi omnes operarii urbis adveniente solemnitate Janus there all the-workmen of-the-city arriving the-festival diei, opera quæ per annum acturi erant, incipiebant. of-the-day the-works which through the-year about-to-do they-were began

Cordeilla se ipsa interficit: Margan novarum rerum cupidum Cunedagius vita privat

XV · THE DEATHS OF CORDELIA AND MARGANUS

After five years of peace, Cordelia's nephews Marganus and Cunedagius rise against her, unwilling that Britain be ruled by a woman, and imprison her, where she kills herself in grief. They divide the island at the Humber, but Marganus invades Cunedagius' land and is defeated and killed in Kambria, in a district still called Margan. Cunedagius reigns thirty-three years, and Rome is founded.

Quum igitur Cordeilla per quinquennium pacifice regnum when therefore Cordelia for five-years peacefully the-kingdom tractasset, cœperunt eam inquietare duo filii sororum suarum, had-handled began her to-harass two sons of-sisters her-own Marganus videlicet et Cunedagius, quæ Maglauno et Henuino Marganus namely and Cunedagius who to-Maglaunus and to-Henuinus ducibus conjugatæ fuerant. Ambo juvenes præclaræ probitatis the-dukes married had-been both youths of-famous prowess formam habebant: quorum alterum videlicet Marganum the-form had of-whom one namely Marganus Maglaunus generaverat: Cunedagium vero Henuinus. Hi itaque Maglaunus had-begotten Cunedagius but Henuinus these and-so cum post obitum patrum in ducatus eisdem successissent, when after the-death of-the-fathers in the-dukedom to-the-same they-had-succeeded indignati sunt Britanniam fœminæ potestati subditam esse. indignant were Britain of-a-woman to-the-power subject to-be Collectis ergo exercitibus in reginam insurrexerunt, nec gathered therefore armies against the-queen they-rose nor a sævitia sua desistere voluerunt, donec quibuscumque from savagery their-own to-desist they-wished until with-whatever provinciis vastatis, prælia cum ipsa commiserunt, eamque provinces laid-waste battles with her they-joined and-her ad ultimum captam in carcerem posuerunt: ubi, ob at the-last taken into prison they-put where on-account-of amissionem regni dolore obducto, sese interfecit. Exin the-loss of-the-kingdom with-grief overcome herself she-killed thence partiti sunt juvenes insulam, cujus pars illa quæ trans divided have the-youths the-island of-which part that which beyond Humbrum extenditur versus Cathenesiam Margano cessit. the-Humber stretches towards Caithness to-Marganus fell Alia vero quæ ab altera parte fluvii ad occasum vergit, the-other indeed which from the-other side of-the-river to the-west slopes Cunedagio committitur. Emenso deinde biennio, accesserunt to-Cunedagius is-committed elapsed then two-years approached quibus turbatio regni placebat, ad Marganum, those-to-whom disturbance of-the-kingdom was-pleasing to Marganus animumque illius subducebant, dicentes turpe dedecus esse and-the-mind his drew-aside saying shameful disgrace to-be ipsum, cum primogenitus esset, toti insulæ non him since the-first-born he-was over-the-whole island not dominari. Cumque his et pluribus aliis modis incitatus to-be-lord and-when by-these and by-many other ways roused fuisset: duxit exercitum per provincias Cunedagii, ignemque he-had-been he-led an-army through the-provinces of-Cunedagius and-fire accumulare incepit. Orta igitur discordia, obviavit ei to-beap he-began having-arisen therefore discord met him Cunedagius cum omni multitudine sua, factoque congressu, Cunedagius with all multitude his-own and-made an-engagement cædem intulit non minimam, et Marganum in fugam slaughter he-inflicted not least and Marganus into flight propulit: deinde secutus est eum fugientem a provincia in drove then followed he-has him fleeing from province into provinciam, et tandem interceptit eum in pago Kambriæ, qui province and at-last intercepted him in a-district of-Kambria which post interfectionem Margani, ejus nomine, videlicet Margan, after the-killing of-Marganus his by-name namely Margan hucusque a pagensibus appellatus est. Potitus itaque bitberto by the-countrymen called was having-gained and-so victoria Cunedagius, monarchiam totius insulæ adeptus est, the-victory Cunedagius the-monarchy of-the-whole island obtained has eamque triginta tribus annis gloriose tractavit. Tunc Esaias and-it for-thirty three years gloriously handled then Isaiah et Osee prophetabant: et Roma condita est undecimo and Hosea prophesied and Rome founded was on-the-eleventh Calendas Maii, a geminis fratribus Remo et Romulo.

Kalends of-May by the-twin brothers Remus and Romulus Porrex et Ferrex fratres bellum inter se conserunt. Ferrex moritur

XVI • THE BROTHERS PORREX AND FERREX AT WAR

In the reign of Rivallo it rains blood for three days, and after a line of kings Gorbogudo's sons Ferrex and Porrex quarrel over the succession. Ferrex escapes Porrex's ambush, returns with help from Subard of the Franks, and is killed in battle with his whole following. Their mother Widen, who loved him more, tears Porrex to pieces in his sleep, and five kings divide the kingdom in civil war.

Postremo, defuncto Cunedagio successit ei Rivallo filius finally having-died Cunedagius succeeded to-him Rivallo son ipsius, juvenis pacificus et fortunatus, qui regnum cum his a-youth peaceful and fortunate who the-kingdom with diligentia gubernavit. In tempore ejus tribus diebus cecidit diligence governed in the-time his for-three days fell pluvia sanguinea, et muscarum affluentia: quibus homines rain bloody and of-flies an-abundance by-which men moriebantur. Post hunc vero successit Gurgustius filius ejus: died after him indeed succeeded Gurgustius son his cui Sisillius; cui Lago Gurgustii nepos; cui Kinmarcus to-whom Sisillius to-whom Lago of-Gurgustius nephew to-whom Kinmarcus Sisillii filius: post hunc Gorbogudo. Huic nati fuerunt duo of-Sisillius son after him Gorbogudo to-this-one born were two filii: quorum unus Ferrex, alter Porrex nuncupabatur. Cum sons of-whom one Ferrex the-other Porrex was-called when autem in senium vergeret pater, orta est contentio inter eos, moreover into old-age was-declining the-father arisen has strife between them uter eorum in regno succederet. At Porrex majori cupiditate which of-them in the-kingdom should-succeed but Porrex by-greater greed subductus, paratis insidiis Ferrecem fratrem interficere parat. drawn-on prepared ambushes Ferrex the-brother to-kill prepares Quod cum illi compertum fuisset, vitato fratre, in Gallias which when to-him discovered had-been avoided the-brother into the-Gauls transfretavit. Sed Suardi regis Francorum auxilio usus, he-crossed but of-Subard king of-the-Franks the-help having-used reversus est et cum fratre dimicavit. Pugnantibus autem returned he-has and with the-brother fought fighting moreover illis, Ferrex est interfectus, et tota multitudo quæ eum them Ferrex was killed and the-whole multitude which him comitabatur. Porro eorum mater, cui nomen Widen, cum accompanied further their mother to-whom the-name Widen when de filii nece certitudinem habuisset, ultra modum about of-the-son the-death certainty she-had-had beyond measure commota, in alterius odium versa est. Diligebat namque illum moved into of-the-other hatred turned has she-loved for him magis altero. Unde tanta ira ob ipsius mortem more than-the-other whence with-so-great anger on-account-of his death ignescebat, ut ipsum in fratrem vindicare affectaret. Nacta she-blazed that him on the-brother to-avenge she-desired having-got ergo tempus quo ille sopitus fuerat, aggreditur eum cum therefore a-time in-which he asleep had-been she-attacks him with ancillis suis, et in plurimas sectiones dilaceravit. Exinde civilis handmaids her-own and into very-many sections tore-apart thence civil discordia multo tempore populum afflixit, et regnum quinque discord for-much time the-people afflicted and the-kingdom to-five regibus submissum est, qui sese mutuis cladibus infestabant. kings submitted was who themselves with-mutual disasters harassed

Dunwallo Molmutius regno potitur; a quo leges Molmutinæ

XVII · DUNWALLO MOLMUTIUS AND HIS LAWS

Dunwallo Molmutius, son of the king of Cornwall, kills the king of Loegria and faces the kings of Kambria and Albany. Dressing six hundred youths in the arms of the dead, he gets among the enemy and kills both kings, then unites the island and makes himself a golden crown. His Molmutine laws give sanctuary to temples and cities and protect roads and plows, and he is buried at Trinovantum by the temple of Concord.

Succedente tandem tempore suscitavit probitas quendam following at-last time raised-up prowess a-certain juvenem qui Dunwallo Molmutius vocabatur: erat enim filius youth who Dunwallo Molmutius was-called he-was for the-son Clotenis regis Cornubiæ, pulchritudine et audacia omnes reges of-Cloten king of-Cornwall in-beauty and in-boldness all kings Britanniæ excellens. Qui ut regimen patriæ post patris of-Britain excelling who when the-rule of-the-country after of-the-father obitum suscepit, surrexit in Ymnerem regem Loegriæ, et the-death he-undertook rose-up against Ymner king of-Loegria and facto congressu eum interfecit. Deinde convenerunt Rudaucus made an-engagement him he-killed then came-together Rudaucus rex Kambriæ atque Staterius rex Albanyæ, confirmatoque king of-Kambria and Staterius king of-Albany and-confirmed inter se foedere duxerunt exercitus suos in provincias among themselves a-pact they-led armies their-own into the-provinces Dunwallonis, ædificia et colonos depopulaturi. Quibus of-Dunwallo the-buildings and the-farmers about-to-ravage whom obviavit ipse Dunwallo cum triginta milibus virorum, met he-himself Dunwallo with thirty thousand of-men præliumque commisit: cumque multum diei, dum pugnarent, and-battle joined and-when much of-the-day while they-fought præterisset, nec ipsi victoria provenisset, sevocavit sexcentos had-passed nor to-him victory had-come he-called-aside six-hundred audacissimos juvenes, et cunctos arma defunctorum hostium most-bold youths and all the-arms of-the-dead enemies sumere præcepit et indui. Ipse etiam projectis illis. to-take ordered and to-be-clothed he-himself also thrown-away those quibus armatus erat, similiter fecit. Deinde duxit illos inter with-which armed he-was likewise did then he-led them among concurrentes hostium catervas incedendo quasi ex ipsis the-running-together of-the-enemies bands by-advancing as-if of them essent: nactus quoque locum quo Rudaucus et Staterius they-were having-got also the-place where Rudaucus and Staterius erant, commilitonibus indixit, ut in ipsos irruerent. Facto were to-the-comrades he-ordered that upon them they-should-rush made igitur impetu, perimuntur duo prædicti reges, et plures therefore the-attack are-destroyed the-two aforesaid kings and many alii cum ipsis. At Dunwallo Molmutius, timens ne a suis others with them but Dunwallo Molmutius fearing lest by his-own opprimeretur, revertitur cum sociis suis, et sese exarmavit. he-might-be-crushed returns with comrades his-own and himself disarmed Resumptis deinde armis quæ projecerat, socios hortatur resumed then the-arms which he-had-thrown-away the-comrades he-urges in hostes irruere: ipsosque acriter invasit. Nec mora, potitus upon the-enemies to-rush and-them fiercely attacked nor delay gained est victoria, fugatis ac dispersis hostibus. Denique per he-has the-victory put-to-flight and scattered the-enemies finally through patrias supradictorum peremptorum vagando subvertit urbes the-countries of-the-above-said slain by-wandering he-overthrew cities et oppida: populumque potestati suæ submitit. Et cum and towns and-the-people to-power his-own submitted and when totam insulam omnino subjugasset, fecit sibi diadema ex the-whole island altogether he-had-subjugated he-made for-himself a-diadem of auro: insulamque in pristinum statum reduxit. Hic leges gold and-the-island into former state led-back this-one the-laws quæ Molmutinæ dicebantur, inter Britones statuit, quæ usque which Molmutine were-called among the-Britons established which all-the-way ad hoc tempus inter Anglos celebrantur. Statuit siquidem to this time among the-English are-celebrated be-established indeed inter cetera quæ multo tempore post beatus Gildas scripsit: among other-things which much time after blessed Gildas wrote ut templa deorum et civitates talem dignitatem haberent, that the-temples of-the-gods and the-cities such dignity should-have ut quicumque fugitivus sive reus ad ea confugeret that whatever fugitive or accused-man to them should-flee cum venia ab inimico suo abiret. Statuit etiam ut with pardon from enemy his-own should-go-away be-established also that viæ quæ ad prædicta templa et ad civitates ducebant: the-roads which to the-aforesaid temples and to cities led nec non et aratra colonorum eadem lege confirmaretur. In nor not also the-plows of-the-farmers by-the-same law should-be-confirmed in diebus itaque ejus latronum mucrones cessabant: raptorum the-days and-so his of-robbers the-swords ceased of-plunderers sævitia obturabantur: nec erat usquam qui violentiam the-savageries were-stopped nor was anywhere who violence alicui ingereret. Denique ut inter talia quadraginta on-anyone might-inflict finally when among such-things forty annos post sumptum diadema explevisset, defunctus est, years after taken the-diadem he-bad-fulfilled died he-has et in urbe Trinovanto prope templum Concordiæ sepultus, and in the-city Trinovantum near the-temple of-Concord buried quod ipse ad confirmationem legum construxerat. which he-himself for the-confirmation of-the-laws had-built

BOOK III

Discordia inter fratres Brennius et Belinus

I • THE QUARREL OF BRENNIUS AND BELINUS

Dunwallo's sons Belinus and Brennius quarrel over the crown until their friends divide the kingdom. Belinus, the elder, takes the crown with Loegria, Kambria, and Cornwall, and Brennius rules Northumbria under him. After five years flatterers stir Brennius to break the pact, and he goes to Norway and marries the daughter of King Elsingius.

Exin duo filii eius, Belinus videlicet et Brennius, in regnum thence the-two sons his Belinus namely and Brennius into the-kingdom succedere volentes, maxima contriti sunt discordia. Contendebant to-succeed wishing by-greatest worn-down were discord they-contended enim uter eorum regni diademate insigniretur. Cum itaque for which of-them of-the-kingdom with-the-diadem should-be-marked when and-so plures decertationes inter se commiscuissent: interfuerunt many contests among themselves they-had-mixed intervened amici utrorumque qui ipsos in concordiam reducerunt: the-friends of-both who them into concord led-back censentes regnum inter eos ea conditione dividendum esse: judging the-kingdom between them on-that condition to-be-divided to-be ut Belinus diadema insulæ cum Loegria atque Kambria, that Belinus the-diadem of-the-island with Loegria and Kambria nec non et Cornubia possideret: erat enim primogenitus: nor not also Cornwall should-possess he-was for the-first-born petebatque Trojana consuetudo ut dignitas hereditatis ei and-required the-Trojan custom that the-dignity of-the-inheritance to-him proveniret: Brennius vero, quoniam junior fuerat, fratri should-come Brennius but since younger he-had-been to-the-brother subderetur, et Northumbriam ab Humbro usque ad should-be-subject and Northumbria from the-Humber all-the-way to Cathenesiam obtineret. Confirmato igitur super his pactionibus Caithness should-hold confirmed therefore upon these agreements foedere, tractaverunt patriam per quinquennium cum pace et the-pact they-governed the-country for five-years with peace and justitia. Verum quia discordia sese prosperis rebus semper justice but because discord itself with-prosperous things always miscere conatur: affuerunt quidam fabricatores mendacii, qui ad to-mix tries were-present certain fabricators of-falsehood who to Brennum accesserunt dicentes: Ut quid ignavia te tantum Brennius approached saying to what-end sloth you so-much occupavit, ut Belino subjectionem teneas: cum idem pater has-seized that to-Belinus subjection you-hold since the-same father et mater, eademque nobilitas te ei parificet? Adde quod in and mother and-the-same nobility you to-him makes-equal add that in pluribus debellationibus expertus es, qui totiens Cheulfo duci many warrings tested you-have who so-often to-Cheulfus duke Morinorum in provinciam nostram applicanti resistere potuisti: of-the-Morini into province our landing to-resist you-could ipsumque ex regno tuo fugare. Rumpe igitur foedus quod and-him from kingdom your to-put-to-flight break therefore the-pact which tibi dedecori est, et duc filiam Elsingii Norwegensium to-you for-a-disgrace is and marry the-daughter of-Elsingius of-the-Norwegians regis, ut ipsius auxilio amissam dignitatem recipias. king so-that his with-help the-lost dignity you-may-recover Postquam igitur his et pluribus aliis animum juvenis after therefore by-these and by-many other-things the-mind of-the-youth corruerunt: acquievit ipse, adivitque Norwegiam, duxitque they-corrupted assented he-himself and-went-to Norway and-married filiam regis, ut a prædictis adulatoribus edoctus fuerat. the-daughter of-the-king as by the-aforesaid flatterers taught he-had-been Brennii cum Guichthlaco naumachia: Guichthlacus cum Brennii uxore in Northumbriam applicat

II · BRENNIUS' SEA FIGHT WITH GUICHTHLACUS

Belinus seizes Northumbria in his brother's absence, and Brennius sails back with a Norwegian army. Guichthlacus, king of the Danes, who loves Brennius' bride, pursues the fleet and captures her ship. A storm scatters both fleets, and Guichthlacus is driven with the girl to Northumbria, where he is taken to Belinus.

Interea cum id fratri nunciatum esset, indignatus est, meanwhile when this to-the-brother announced had-been indignant he-was quia sic sine licentia sua contra ipsum egisset. Petivit because thus without leave his-own against him he-had-acted he-sought itaque Northumbriam, cepitque Comprovincialium civitates, and-so Northumbria and-took of-the-provincials the-cities et eas custodibus suis munivit. Porro Brennius, audito and them with-guards his-own fortified further Brennius heard rumore qui facta fratris notificaverat, adduxit secum the-rumor which the-deeds of-the-brother had-made-known brought with-himself magnam copiam Norwegensium, paratoque navigio rediit a-great host of-Norwegians and-prepared a-fleet returned in Britanniam. Cumque æquora securius et prospero into Britain and-when the-seas more-securely and with-favorable vento secaret, obviavit ei Guichthlacus Dacorum rex qui wind he-was-cutting met him Guichthlacus of-the-Danes king who ipsum insecutus fuerat: æstuaverat namque amore puellæ him pursued had he-had-burned for with-love of-the-girl quam Brennius duxerat: unde ultra modum dolens, classem whom Brennius had-married whence beyond measure grieving a-fleet paraverat et exercitum, ipsumque citissimis velis sequebatur. he-had-prepared and an-army and-him with-swiftest sails was-following Navali igitur congressu facto, cepit forte navem in qua naval therefore an-engagement made he-took by-chance the-ship in which erat prædicta puella, et illatis uncis illam inter consocios was the-aforesaid girl and brought-on hooks it among the-comrades attraxit. Illis autem hinc et inde intra profundum drew them moreover on-this-side and on-that within the-deep congregredientibus, irruunt ex improviso adversi venti, factoque engaging rush-in from unforeseen hostile winds and-made turbine naves dissipant: dissipatas vero in diversa littora a-whirlwind the-ships scatter the-scattered indeed onto different shores compellunt. Rex ergo Daciæ inimica vi ventorum drive the-king therefore of-Dacia by-hostile force of-the-winds compulsus, peracto quinque dierum cursu, cum timore driven completed of-five days a-course with fear applicuit cum puella in Northumbriam: nescius quam terram landed with the-girl in Northumbria unknowing which land inopinabilis eventus obtulisset. Cumque id a Pagensibus the-unthinkable event had-offered and-when this by the-countrymen compertum esset, ceperunt illos, duxeruntque ad Belinum qui discovered had-been they-took them and-led to Belinus who super maritima adventum fratris expectabat. Erant ibi on the-seacoast the-arrival of-the-brother was-awaiting there-were there cum nave Guichthlaci tres aliæ naves: quarum una fuerat with the-ship of-Guichthlacus three other ships of-which one had-been ex Brenniî navigio. Postquam autem qui essent regi from of-Brennius the-fleet after moreover who they-were to-the-king indicaverunt, gaudens, admodum gavisus est id sibi they-showed rejoicing very rejoiced he-has this to-himself contigisse, dum sese in fratrem suum vindicare captaret. to-have-happened while himself on brother his-own to-avenge he-was-seeking

Belinus Brennum pugnat: Brennius Galliam petit

III · BELINUS ROUTS BRENNIUS, WHO GOES TO GAUL

Brennius lands in Albany and demands his kingdom and his bride, threatening to lay the island waste. Belinus refuses, and they fight in the forest of Calaterium, where the wounded fall like crops before reapers. Fifteen thousand Norwegians are killed, and Brennius escapes with a single ship to Gaul.

Emensis deinde aliquot diebus, ecce Brennius resociatis having-passed then some days behold Brennius regathered navibus in Albaniam applicuit. Exin cum ei captio ships in Albany landed thence when to-him the-capture conjugis cæterorumque notificata fuisset: et quod frater of-the-wife and-of-the-others made-known had-been and that the-brother ei regnum Northumbriæ, dum aberat, subripuisset: from-him the-kingdom of-Northumbria while he-was-absent had-snatched misit nuncios suos ad eum, mandans ut regnum, et he-sent messengers his-own to him commanding that the-kingdom and sponsa redderentur. Sin autem, testatur se totam insulam the-bride should-be-returned if-not moreover he-testifies himself the-whole island a mari usque ad mare vastaturum: ipsum etiam fratrem from sea all-the-way to sea about-to-lay-waste him also the-brother interfecturum si copia congregandi ipsi præstaretur. about-to-kill if an-opportunity of-engaging to-him were-offered Quod cum Belinus scivisset, negavit plane quod petebat: which when Belinus had-known he-denied flatly what he-was-seeking collectoque omni milite insulæ, venit in Albaniam contra and-gathered every knight of-the-island came into Albany against illum pugnaturus. At Brennius ut scivit repulsam sese him about-to-fight but Brennius when he-knew a-refusal himself passum fuisse, germanumque hoc modo contra se venire, suffered to-have and-the-brother in-this manner against himself to-come ivit obviam illi in nemore quod vocatur Calaterium, ut cum went to-meet him in the-forest which is-called Calaterium so-that with eo congredieretur. Ut igitur eundem nacti sunt campum, him he-might-engage when therefore the-same reached they-have field diviserunt uterque socios suos in turmas, cominusque divided each comrades his-own into troops and-hand-to-hand aggredientes præliari cœperunt. Multum diei in præliando attacking to-fight began much of-the-day in fighting consumserunt, quia in utraque parte probatissimi viri dexteras they-spent because on each side most-proven men right-bands commiscebant. Multum cruoris hinc et inde fuderunt, mingled much of-gore on-this-side and on-that they-shed quia tela ipsorum viribus vibrata, lætifera vulnera ingerebant. because weapons their by-strength hurled deadly wounds heaped-on Concidebant inter corruentes cohortes vulnerati, quemadmodum fell among the-collapsing cohorts the-wounded just-as segetes cum a falcatoribus aggrediuntur. Denique prævalentibus crops when by the-reapers are-attacked finally prevailing Britonibus, diffugiunt Norwegenses laceratis agminibus, ad the-Britons flee the-Norwegians torn columns to naves: quos fugientes insequitur Belinus, cædem sine pietate the-ships whom fleeing pursues Belinus slaughter without pity faciens. Ceciderunt in illo prælio quindecim millia hominum: making fell in that battle fifteen thousand of-men nec ex residuis mille superfuerunt, qui illæsi abscederent. nor of the-remaining a-thousand survived who unhurt might-depart At Brennius vix unam navem nactus, ut fortuna conduxerat, but Brennius scarcely one ship having-got as fortune had-led Gallicana littora petivit. Cæteri vero qui cum illo advenerant, the-Gallic shores sought the-others but who with him had-come quo casus ducebat, latebras exigebant. whither chance led hiding-places sought-out

Rex Daciæ, cum Brennii uxore, ex carcere demittuntur

IV · THE KING OF DENMARK RELEASED

Belinus calls his nobles to York to decide the fate of the Danish king. Guichthlacus offers to submit himself and Denmark, to pay yearly tribute, and to give oaths and hostages if he may go free with his lady. The nobles agree, and he returns to Denmark with her.

Cum igitur Belino victoria cessisset, convocavit omnes when therefore to-Belinus victory had-fallen he-called-together all regni proceres intra Eboracum consilio ipsorum of-the-kingdom the-nobles within York by-the-counsel their tractaturus quid de rege Dacorum faceret. Mandaverat about-to-handle what about the-king of-the-Danes he-should-do he-had-sent-word namque ei ex carcere quod sese regnumque Daciæ for to-him from prison that himself and-the-kingdom of-Dacia ei submitteret, tributumque singulis annis donaret, si to-him he-would-submit and-tribute in-each years would-give if cum amica sua liber sineretur abire: mandavit etiam with mistress his-own free he-were-allowed to-go-away he-sent-word also quod pactum suum fœdere juramenti et obsidibus that pact his-own with-the-bond of-oath and with-hostages confirmaret. Convocatis ergo proceribus, cum id indicatum he-would-confirm called-together therefore the-nobles when this shown fuisset, assensum præbuerunt cuncti, ut Belinus petitioni it-had-been assent offered all that Belinus to-the-petition Guichthlaci cum prædicta conditione acquiesceret: acquievit of-Guichthlacus with the-aforesaid condition should-assent assented ergo ipse: et Guichthlacus ex carcere solutus cum therefore he-himself and Guichthlacus from prison loosed with amica sua in Daciam reversus est. mistress his-own into Dacia returned has Belinus, devictis adversariis, leges Molmutinas confirmat

V · BELINUS CONFIRMS THE MOLMUTINE LAWS

With no rival left, Belinus confirms his father's laws and the peace of cities and roads. To end disputes over the roads, he builds a road of stone and cement the length of the island from Cornwall to Caithness, another across it from Menevia to Hamo's port, and two more slantwise. Gildas put the laws into Latin and King Alfred into English.

Porro Belinus cum neminem sibi in regno Britanniae further Belinus when no-one to-him in the-kingdom of-Britain resistere animadvertisset: tota insula a mari usque to-resist he-had-noticed of-the-whole island from sea all-the-way ad mare potitus: leges quas pater invenerat confirmavit. to sea having-gained the-laws which the-father had-devised confirmed Stabilem quoque justitiam per regnum fieri præcepit. stable also justice through the-kingdom to-be-made he-ordered Maxime autem indixit, ut civitates et viæ quæ ad civitates most moreover be-ordained that the-cities and the-roads which to the-cities ducebant, eandem pacem quam Dunvallo statuerat, haberent: led the-same peace which Dunwallo had-established should-have sed de viis orta est discordia, quia nesciebatur quibus but about the-roads arisen has discord because it-was-not-known by-what terminis definitæ essent. Rex ergo omne ambiguum legi boundaries defined they-were the-king therefore every ambiguity from-law suæ auferre volens, convocavit omnes operarios totius his-own to-take-away wishing called-together all the-workmen of-the-whole insulæ: jussitque viam ex cœmento et lapidibus fabricari: island and-ordered a-road of cement and stones to-be-built quæ insulæ longitudinem a Cornubico mari usque ad which of-the-island the-length from the-Cornish sea all-the-way to Cathenesium littus secaret: et ad civitates quæ intra eam the-Caithness shore should-cut and to the-cities which within it erant, recto limite duceret. Jussit etiam aliam fieri were by-a-straight line should-lead he-ordered also another to-be-made in latitudinem regni quæ a Menevia urbe, quæ super across the-breadth of-the-kingdom which from Menevia the-city which on Demeticum mare sita est, usque ad portum Hamonis the-Demetian sea situated is all-the-way to the-port of-Hamo extensa ad urbes intra positas, ducatum ostenderet. Alias stretched to the-cities within placed guidance should-show others quoque duas ab obliquo insulæ: quæ ad cæteras civitates also two from slanting of-the-island which to the-other cities ducatum præstarent. Deinde sancivit eas omni honore, guidance should-offer then he-hallowed them with-all honor omnique dignitate, jurisque sui esse præcepit, quod de illata and-with-all dignity and-of-right his-own to-be he-ordered that for brought super eas violentia vindicta sumeretur. Si quis autem scire upon them violence vengeance should-be-taken if anyone moreover to-know voluerit omnia quæ de eis statuerit, legat Molmutinas will-have-wished all-things which about them he-established let-him-read the-Molmutine leges, quas Gildas historicus de Britannico in Latinum, rex laws which Gildas the-historian from British into Latin the-king vero Aluredus de Latino in Anglicum sermonem transtulit. indeed Alfred from Latin into the-English speech translated Brennius, dux Allobrogum factus, in Britanniam cum militibus redit

VI • BRENNIUS BECOMES DUKE OF THE ALLOBROGES

Exiled in Gaul with twelve knights, Brennius finds help from no prince until Seginus, duke of the Allobroges, receives him. His prowess, beauty, and skill in hunting win him the duke's fatherly love and his only daughter in marriage. When the duke dies within the year, Brennius binds the nobles to him with the ducal treasure and an open door.

Belino autem cum pace et tranquillitate regnante, frater Belinus moreover with peace and tranquility reigning the-brother ejus Brennius in Gallicanum littus (ut prædictum est) his Brennius onto the-Gallic shore as said-before it-has-been appulsus, internis anxietatibus cruciatur. Ferebat enim graviter driven by-inward anxieties is-tormented he-bore for heavily sese expulsum a patria esse, nec copiam revertendi himself driven from the-country to-be nor the-means of-returning habere, ut amissa dignitate frueretur. Nescius ergo to-have so-that of-the-lost dignity he-might-enjoy unknowing therefore quid faceret principes Galliæ adivit, duodecim solummodo what he-should-do the-princes of-Gaul he-went-to by-twelve only militibus comitatus. Cumque infortunium suum singulis knights accompanied and-when misfortune his-own to-each-one ostenderet: nec auxilium ab ullo impetrare quivisset, venit he-showed nor help from any-one to-obtain he-had-been-able he-came tandem ad Seginum ducem Allobrogum, et ab eo honorifice at-last to Seginus duke of-the-Allobroges and by him honorably susceptus est. Morans autem apud ipsum, accessit in tantam received he-was staying moreover with him he-came into so-great familiaritatem ducis, ita ut non esset alter in curia intimacy of-the-duke so that not there-was another in the-court qui ei præferretur, in omnibus namque negociis, tam who to-him might-be-preferred in all for business as-well in pace, quam in bello probitatem suam monstrabat: adeo in peace as in war prowess his-own he-showed so ut dux illum amore paterno diligeret. Erat etiam pulcher that the-duke him with-love paternal loved he-was also handsome aspectu, procera et gracilia membra habens, venationem in-appearance tall and slender limbs having in-hunting atque aucupatum ut decebat edoctus. Cum ergo in tantam and fowling as was-fitting taught when therefore into so-great amicitiam ducis incidisset, statuit dux ut unicam quam friendship of-the-duke he-had-fallen decided the-duke that the-only which habebat filiam ipsi maritali lege copularet. Et si masculino he-had daughter to-him by-marital law he-would-join and if of-the-male sexu deinceps careret, concedebat ei regnum Allobrogum sex hereafter he-lacked he-granted to-him the-kingdom of-the-Allobroges post obitum suum cum filia possidendum. Si autem filius after the-death his-own with the-daughter to-be-possessed if moreover a-son ei superveniret, promittebat auxilium, ut in regem Britanniae to-him should-come-after he-promised help that into king of-Britain promoveretur, et non solum id a duce, sed etiam ab omnibus he-might-be-advanced and not only this by the-duke but also by all duci subditis heroibus appetebatur: quia in tantam eorum to-the-duke subject heroes was-desired because into so-great their amicitiam pervenerat. Nec mora, maritatur puella Brennio, friendship he-had-come nor delay is-married the-girl to-Brennius principesque patriæ ei subduntur, soliumque regni and-the-princes of-the-country to-him are-subjected and-the-throne of-the-kingdom donatur. Nec annus quo hæc facta sunt integre emensus is-given nor the-year in-which these-things done were wholly passed est, cum suprema dies ducis adveniens, ipsum ex hac vita has when the-last day of-the-duke arriving him from this life eripuit. Tunc Brennius principes patriæ, quos prius amicitia snatched then Brennius the-princes of-the-country whom before by-friendship illexerat, obnoxios sibi facere non diffugit, largiendo he-had-enticed bound to-himself to-make not shunned by-lavishing eis thesaurum ducis, qui a tempore atavorum ipsius on-them the-treasure of-the-duke which from the-time of-forefathers his reservatus fuerat. Et quod Allobroges pro maximo habebant, reserved had-been and what the-Allobroges for greatest held profusus erat in dandis cibis, januam suam nulli prohibens. lavish he-was in giving foods door his-own to-no-one forbidding Pax per matrem conciliatur inter fratres, qui Galliam submittendi consilium capiunt

VII · THEIR MOTHER RECONCILES THE BROTHERS

Brennius sails from Normandy with an army against Belinus. As the lines close, their mother Conwenna walks between them, bares her breasts to Brennius, and pleads that his exile has made him a king. Moved, he lays down his helmet, the brothers embrace, and together they resolve to conquer Gaul.

Attractis ergo quibusque in dilectionem suam, deliberavit drawn therefore all-ones into affection his-own he-deliberated apud se, qualiter se in Belinum fratrem suum vindicaret. with himself how himself on Belinus brother his-own he-might-avenge quod cum populo sibi subdito indicasset, assensum fecerunt which when to-the-people to-him subject he-had-shown assent made cuncti, ut cum illo irent ad quodcunque regnum ipsos all that with him they-would-go to whatever kingdom them conducere affectasset. Nec mora, grandi collecto exercitu, foedus to-lead he-had-desired nor delay a-great gathered army a-pact cum Gallis inivit, ut per provincias eorum Britanniam with the-Gauls he-entered that through the-provinces of-them Britain cum tranquillitate adire sineretur. Exin parato in littore with tranquility to-approach he-might-be-allowed thence prepared on the-shore Neustriensium navigio ingressus est mare: secundisque velis of-the-Neustrians a-fleet entered he-has the-sea and-with-favorable sails in insulam applicuit. Divulgato igitur adventu ipsius, Belinus on the-island landed spread-abroad therefore the-arrival his Belinus frater ascita totius regni juventute obviam perrexit, the-brother summoned of-the-whole kingdom the-youth to-meet proceeded prælium cum eo commissurus. Sed cum hinc et inde battle with him about-to-join but when on-this-side and on-that statutæ cohortes fere commisceri inceperant, acceleravit mater arranged the-cohorts almost to-be-mingled had-begun hastened the-mother amborum, quæ adhuc vivebat, per dispositas turmas incedens. of-both who still lived through the-arranged troops advancing Erat nomen illi Conwenna: æstuabatque filium videre, quem was the-name to-her Conwenna and-she-burned the-son to-see whom multo tempore non aspexerat. Ut igitur tremulis gradibus for-much time not she-had-seen when therefore with-trembling steps locum quo ipse stabat nacta fuit: brachia collo ejus iniecit, the-place where he-himself stood reached she-had her-arms on-neck his threw desiderata oscula ingeminans. Nudatis quoque uberibus illum longed-for kisses redoubling bared also the-breasts him in hunc modum affata est, sermonem impediante singultu: in this manner addressed she-has the-speech hindering a-sob “Memento, fili, memento uberum istorum quæ suxisti: remember O-son remember the-breasts these which you-sucked matrisque tuæ uteri quo te opifex rerum in hominem and-of-mother your of-the-womb in-which you the-maker of-things into a-man ex non homine creavit: unde te in mundum produxit, from not a-man created whence you into the-world he-brought-forth angustiis mea viscera cruciantibus. Anxietatum igitur quas pro with-pangs my vitals torturing of-the-anxieties therefore which for te passa sum reminiscens, petitioni meæ acquiesce: fratrique you suffered I-have remembering to-petition my assent and-to-brother tuo veniam concede: atque inceptam iram compesce: nullam your pardon grant and the-begun anger restrain none enim adversus eum habere debes iram, qui tibi nullam for against him to-have you-ought anger who to-you no contumeliam intulerit. Nam quod causaris te videlicet a insult has-brought for as-to-what you-complain you namely from natione tua per eum expulsum fuisse, si eventum rei nation your through him driven-out to-have-been if the-outcome of-the-matter diligentius intueri institeris, nullatenus reperiēs quod more-carefully to-view you-will-have-set by-no-means you-will-find what injustitiam vocabis. Non enim fugavit te ut deterius tibi injustice you-will-call not for he-put-to-flight you that worse to-you contingeret: sed coëgit deteriora postponeret ut ad potiora might-happen but he-forced worse-things you-should-set-aside that to better-things sublimareris. Subditus namque illi partem regni you-might-be-raised subject for to-him a-part of-the-kingdom possidebas, quam ut amisisti, par illi effectus es, you-possessed which when you-lost equal to-him made you-have-been Allobrogum regnum adeptus. Quid igitur fecit, nisi quod of-the-Allobroges the-kingdom having-obtained what therefore did-he except that ex paupere regulo te in sublimem regem promovit? Adde from a-poor princeling you into a-lofty king he-advanced add quod dissidium inter vos ortum non per ipsum sed per te that the-dissension between you arisen not through him but through you coëptum fuit, qui auxilio regis Norwegiæ fretus, id ipsum begun was who with-the-help of-the-king of-Norway relying this very-thing exurgere æstuaveras." Super his ergo, quæ ipsa cum fletu to-rise-up you-had-burned upon these therefore which she-herself with weeping expresserat, motus, sedato animo obedivit: et ultro had-expressed moved calmed mind he-obeyed and of-his-ownaccord deposita galea, cum illa ad fratrem perrexit. Belinus ergo laid-down the-helmet with her to the-brother he-proceeded Belinus therefore ut illum cum vultu pacis ad se venire conspexit, when him with a-face of-peace to himself to-come he-saw abjectis armis in amplexus ejusdem cum osculo cucurrit. thrown-away the-arms into the-embraces of-the-same with a-kiss ran Nec mora, facti sunt amici, et cohortibus exarmatis urbem nor delay made they-were friends and the-cohorts disarmed the-city Trinovantum adiverunt, ibi consilio capto quid facerent, Trinovantum they-went-to there counsel taken what they-should-do paraverunt exercitum communem in Galliarum partes ducere, they-prepared an-army common into of-the-Gauls the-parts to-lead cunctasque provincias suæ potestati submittere. and-all provinces to-their-own power to-submit

Post Galliam subactam, Romam petunt

VIII • HAVING SUBDUED GAUL, THEY MARCH ON ROME

A year later the brothers cross to Gaul and defeat the Frankish princes in battle. Within a year they take the kings, overthrow the fortified cities, and subject the whole kingdom. They then march on Rome, ravaging Italy as they go.

Emenso deinde anno transfretaverunt in Gallias, patriamque having-passed then a-year they-crossed into the-Gauls and-the-country vastare cœperunt. Quod cum per nationes divulgatum to-lay-waste began which when through the-nations spread-abroad fuisset, convenerunt omnes reguli Francorum, obviamque had-been came-together all the-princelings of-the-Franks and-to-meet venientes contra eos dimicaverunt. At Belino et Brennio coming against them fought but to-Belinus and to-Brennius victoria proveniente; Franci vulneratis catervis diffugerunt. victory coming the-Franks wounded bands fled Mox Britones et Allobroges ut triumpho potiti sunt, soon the-Britons and the-Allobroges when of-the-triumph gained have fugientes Gallos insequi non cessaverunt, donec captis regibus the-fleeing Gauls to-pursue not they-ceased until taken the-kings ipsos ad deditionem coëgerunt. Munitis etiam urbibus them to surrender they-forced fortified also the-cities eversis, totum regnum intra unum annum submisserunt overturned the-whole kingdom within one year they-subjected Postremo, cum omnes provincias ad deditionem compulissent, finally when all provinces to surrender they-had-driven petiere Romam cum tota multitudine sua, urbesque they-sought Rome with the-whole multitude their-own and-the-cities et colonos per Italiam depopulantur. and the-farmers through Italy they-ravage

Romani fœdus vitiant: urbs Romana capitur

IX · THE ROMANS BREAK THE TREATY, AND ROME IS TAKEN

The consuls Gabius and Porsena buy peace with tribute and hostages, but when the brothers move against Germany, the Romans break the pact and help the Germans. Belinus ambushes the Roman army in a valley, and the brothers besiege Rome, hanging twenty-four hostages before the walls. The consuls attack with a relieving force, but the brothers prevail, kill Gabius, capture Porsena, and take the city.

Erant tunc Romæ duo consules, Gabius et Porsena, there-were then at-Rome two consuls Gabius and Porsena quorum regimini patria commissa fuerat: qui cum vidissent whose to-rule the-country committed had-been who when they-had-seen nullam gentem sævitiae Belini atque Brennii resistere no people to-the-savagery of-Belinus and of-Brennius to-resist valere, assensu senatorum venerunt ad illos concordiam to-be-able with-the-assent of-the-senators came to them concord et amicitiam petentes. Obtulerunt etiam plurima donaria and friendship seeking they-offered also very-many gifts auri et argenti, singulisque annis tributum, ut sua of-gold and of-silver and-in-single years tribute so-that their-own-things cum pace possidere sinerentur. Sumptis itaque obsidibus, with peace to-possess they-might-be-allowed taken and-so hostages veniam donaverunt reges, cohortesque suas in Germaniam pardon granted the-kings and-the-coborts their-own into Germany duxerunt, cumque populum infestare institissent, piguit led and-when the-people to-harass they-had-set it-irked Romanos prædicti fœderis: et revocata audacia, Germanis in the-Romans of-the-aforesaid pact and recalled boldness to-the-Germans to auxilium processerunt. Quod cum regibus compertum esset, help they-advanced which when to-the-kings found-out had-been ultra modum id graviter ferentes, consilium inierunt, quomodo beyond measure it heavily bearing counsel they-entered how utrumque populum oppugnarent. Tanta namque multitudo both peoples they-might-assault so-great for a-multitude Italorum supervenerat, ita, ut illis terrori essent. Consilio of-Italians had-come-up so that to-them for-terror they-were counsel ergo habito, remansit Belinus cum Britonibus in Germania therefore had remained Belinus with the-Britons in Germany prælia hostibus illaturus. Brennius vero cum exercitibus battles on-the-enemies about-to-bring Brennius but with armies suis Romam adivit, ut ruptum fœdus in Romanos his-own Rome went-to so-that the-broken pact on the-Romans vindicaret. Id autem Itali scientes, deseruerunt Germanos, he-might-avenge this moreover the-Italians knowing deserted the-Germans et Romam reverti captantes iter Brennii præcedere and to-Rome to-return seeking the-march of-Brennius to-go-ahead-of festinaverunt. Belinus itaque ut illud ipsi nunciatum fuerat, hurried Belinus and-so when that to-him announced had-been revocato exercitu, præterita nocte acceleravit, quandamque recalled the-army in-the-past night hastened and-a-certain vallem nactus, qua hostes præterituri erant, intra illam valley having-got through-which the-enemies about-to-pass were within it delituit, et adventum illorum expectavit. Sequenti die instante, lay-bid and the-arrival of-them awaited the-following day pressing venerunt Itali ad eundem locum, cœptum iter facientes: came the-Italians to the-same place the-begun march making et cum vallem armis hostium fulgere prospexissent, and when the-valley with-arms of-enemies to-gleam they-had-seen-ahead confestim stupefacti, arbitrati sunt Brennum, Senonesque forthwith stunned thought they-have Brennius and-the-Senonian Gallos adesse. Belinus ergo compertis hostibus, subito Gauls to-be-present Belinus therefore discovered the-enemies with-sudden impetu irruptionem fecit in illos, atque acriter invasit. Nec attack an-inroad made upon them and fiercely attacked nor mora, Romani ex improvise occupati, quia inermes et sine delay the-Romans from unforeseen seized because unarmed and without ordine incedebant, cum fuga campum deseruerunt: quos order they-were-advancing with flight the-field deserted whom Belinus sine pietate, sequens trucidare non cessavit, donec Belinus without pity following to-slaughter not ceased until superveniente nocte inceptam stragem perficere nequivit. Cum coming-on night the-begun slaughter to-complete he-could-not with victoria deinde Brennum petivit: qui jam tribus diebus victory then Brennius he-sought who already for-three days Romam obsidebat. Ut ergo communem exercitum fecerunt, Rome was-besieging when therefore a-common army they-made invadentes undique urbem, mœnia prosternere insistent: attacking from-all-sides the-city the-walls to-lay-low they-press-on et ut majorem cladem ingererent, erexerunt furcas ante and that a-greater disaster they-might-beap they-raised gallows before portas civitatis: obsessisque mandaverunt, quod obsides quos the-gates of-the-city and-to-the-besieged sent-word that the-hostages whom dederant in patibulo suspenderent, nisi sese suæ ditioni they-had-given on the-gibbet they-would-hang unless themselves to-their-own dominion submitterent. Verum Romani in proposito suo perseverantes, they-should-submit but the-Romans in purpose their-own persevering despecta natorum et nepotum pietate, sese defendere scorned of-the-children and of-the-grandsons the-love themselves to-defend intendunt. Nam quandoque machinationes eorum contrariis intend for sometimes the-contrivances of-them with-opposing vel consimilibus machinationibus conterebant, quandoque vero or similar contrivances they-crushed sometimes indeed multimodis telis ipsos a mœnibus repellebant. Cumque id with-manifold weapons them from the-walls they-repelled and-when this conspexissent fratres, confestim proterva excandescentes ira, had-seen the-brothers forthwith with-wanton blazing anger viginti quatuor nobilissimos obsidum in conspectu parentum twenty four most-noble of-the-hostages in the-sight of-the-parents suspendi præceperunt. Romani itaque proterviores insistentes, to-be-hanged ordered the-Romans and-so more-wanton pressing-on fretique legatione Gabii et Porsenæ consulum, qui and-relying on-the-embassy of-Gabius and of-Porsena the-consuls who ipsis mandaverant quod in auxilium eorum sequenti die to-them had-sent-word that to help their on-the-following day venirent: urbem egredi statuerunt, et cum hostibus prælia they-would-come the-city to-go-out decided and with the-enemies battles committere. Dumque turmas suas sapienter distribuerunt: to-join and-while the-troops their-own wisely they-distributed ecce prædicti consules resociatis sociis qui dispersi fuerant: behold the-aforesaid consuls regathered comrades who scattered had-been præliaturi advenerunt. Densis autem agminibus incedentes, ex about-to-fight arrived in-dense moreover columns advancing from improvise invaserunt Allobroges et Britones. Egressis quoque unforeseen attacked the-Allobroges and the-Britons having-gone-out also civibus consociatis, stragem non minimam primo fecerunt. the-citizens joined slaughter not least at-first made Porro fratres cum cladem commilitonum tam subito illatam further the-brothers when the-disaster of-the-comrades so suddenly brought-on inspexissent, admodum anxii socios hortari cœperunt, they-had-seen very troubled the-comrades to-exhort began atque in turmas resociare: crebrasque irruptiones facientes, and into troops to-regather and-frequent inroads making hostes retrocedere coegerunt. Postremo peremptis in utraque the-enemies to-fall-back forced finally destroyed on each parte ad multa milia pugnantibus, victoria fratribus provenit. side to many thousands fighting victory to-the-brothers came Interfecto etiam Gabio, et capto Porsena, urbem ceperunt, killed also Gabius and taken Porsena the-city they-took et absconditas civium opes commilitonibus dederunt. and the-bidden of-the-citizens wealth to-the-comrades they-gave Brennius Italiam crudeliter opprimit:

Belinus domum revertitur

X · BRENNIUS IN ITALY, BELINUS AT HOME

Brennius stays in Italy and rules with unheard-of tyranny, which Geoffrey leaves to the Roman histories. Belinus returns to Britain, builds Kaeresc on the Usk, later the City of the Legions, and a gate on the Thames now called Billingsgate. In his days the people are richer than ever, and his ashes are placed in a golden urn on top of his tower.

Habita ergo victoria remansit Brennius in Italia, populum had therefore the-victory remained Brennius in Italy the-people inaudita tyrannide afficiens, cujus cæteros actus et exitum, with-unheard-of tyranny afflicting whose other acts and end quia Romanæ historiæ declarant, nequaquam tractare curavi: because the-Roman histories declare by-no-means to-treat I-have-cared cum et nimiam prolixitatem huic operi ingessissem, et since both excessive length on-this work I-would-have-heaped and id quod alii tractaverunt peragrans a proposito meo that which others have-treated going-through from purpose my divertissem. Belinus vero in Britanniam reversus est: et I-would-have-turned-aside Belinus but into Britain returned has and cum tranquillitate reliquis vitæ suæ diebus patriam tractavit. with tranquility for-the-rest of-life his-own days the-country handled Renovavit etiam ædificatas urbes ubicumque collapsæ fuerant: he-renewed also the-built cities wherever collapsed they-had et multas novas ædificavit. Inter cæteras composuit unam super and many new built among the-others he-built one upon Oscam flumen prope Sabrinum mare, quæ multis temporibus the-Usk river near the-Severn sea which for-many times Kaeresc appellata est. Metropolis Demetiæ fuerat. Postquam Kaeresc called was metropolis of-Demetia it-had-been after autem Romani venerunt, præfato nomine deleto, vocata est moreover the-Romans came the-aforsaid name destroyed called was urbs Legionum: vocabulum trahens a Romanis legionibus the-City of-the-Legions the-name drawing from the-Roman legions quæ ibidem hiemare solebant. Fecit etiam in urbe which in-the-same-place to-winter were-accustomed he-made also in the-city Trinovanto januam miræ fabricæ super ripam Tamesis, Trinovantum a-gate of-wonderful workmanship upon the-bank of-the-Thames quam de nomine suo cives temporibus istis Belinesgata which from the-name his-own the-citizens in-times these Billingsgate vocant. Desuper vero ædificavit turrim miræ magnitudinis: call above indeed he-built a-tower of-wonderful size portumque subtus ad pedem applicantibus navibus idoneum. and-a-port below at the-foot for-landing ships suitable Leges patris ubique per regnum renovavit. constanti the-laws of-the-father everywhere through the-kingdom he-renewed to-constant justitiæ indulgens. In diebus igitur ejus tanta copia divitiarum justice devoted in the-days therefore his so-great abundance of-riches populum refecit, quantam nec retro ætas nec subsequens the-people refreshed as-great-as neither the-former age nor the-following consecuta habuisse perhibetur. Postremo cum suprema dies attained to-have-had is-beld finally when the-last day ipsum ex hac vita rapuisset, combustum est ejus corpus, et him from this life had-snatched burned was his body and pulvis in aureo cado reconditus: quem in urbe Trinovanto the-dust in a-golden urn stored which in the-city Trinovantum in summitate prædictæ turris mira arte locaverunt. on the-top of-the-aforsaid tower with-wonderful art they-placed Gurgiunt Brabtruc Dacos rebellantes subigit

XI · GURGIUNT BRABTRUC SUBDUES THE DANES

Belinus' son Gurgiunt Brabtruc follows his father's peace and justice. When the Danish king refuses the tribute paid to his father, Gurgiunt sails to Denmark, kills the king in fierce battles, and returns the country to its former yoke.

Post hæc successit ei Gurgiunt Brabtruc filius ejusdem, after these-things succeeded to-him Gurgiunt Brabtruc son of-the-same vir modestus et prudens: qui per omnia paternos actus a-man modest and prudent who in all-things the-paternal acts imitans, pacem et justitiam amabat: et cum vicini adversus imitating peace and justice loved and when the-neighbors against eum rebellabant, audaciam genitoris revocans, dira prælia him rebelled the-boldness of-the-father recalling dire battles committebat, et hostes ad debitam subjectionem reducebat. he-joined and the-enemies to due subjection led-back Inter plura alia contigit quod rex Dacorum, qui diebus among many others it-happened that the-king of-the-Danes who in-the-days patris tributum eidem reddebat, huic reddere diffugeret, of-the-father tribute to-the-same rendered to-this-one to-render shunned et ei debitam subjectionem denegaret: quod ipse graviter and to-him due subjection denied which he-himself heavily ferens, duxit navigium in Daciam, afflictoque dirissimis præliis bearing led a-fleet into Dacia and-afflicted with-most-dire battles populo, interfecit regem, patriamque pristino jugo supposuit. the-people killed the-king and-the-country to-the-former yoke put-under Hibernia Barclensibus incolenda datur

XII • IRELAND IS GIVEN TO THE BARCLENSES

Returning by the Orkneys, Gurgiunt meets thirty ships of men and women led by Partholoim, exiles from Spain who have wandered the seas for a year and a half. They ask for land, and he sends them to Ireland, then empty, where they settle and multiply. Gurgiunt is buried in the City of the Legions, which he adorned.

Ea tempestate cum post istam victoriam domum per at-that time when after this victory home through insulas Orcades rediret, invenit triginta naves viris the-islands Orkneys he-was-returning he-found thirty ships with-men et mulieribus plenas: et cum causam adventus eorum and with-women full and when the-cause of-the-coming of-them inquisivisset, accessit ad eum dux ipsorum Partholoim he-had-inquired approached to him the-leader their Partholoim nomine, et adorato eo veniam et pacem rogavit. Dicebat by-name and worshiped him pardon and peace asked he-said autem se ex partibus Hispaniarum expulsum fuisse, et moreover himself from the-parts of-the-Spains driven-out to-have-been and maria illa circuire ut locum mansionis haberet. Petebat the-seas those to-sail-round that a-place of-dwelling he-might-have he-sought etiam ab eo portiunculam Britanniae ad inhabitandum, ne also from him a-little-portion of-Britain for inhabiting lest odiosum iter maris diutius pererraret: Annus enim cum the-hateful journey of-the-sea longer he-might-wander a-year for with dimidio jam elapsus fuerat, ex quo a patria sua pulsus a-half already elapsed had from which from country his-own driven per Oceanum cum sociis navigaverat. Ut igitur Gurgiunt through the-Ocean with the-comrades he-had-sailed when therefore Gurgiunt Brabtruc ipsos ex Hispania venisse et Barclenses esse Brabtruc them from Spain to-have-come and Barclenses to-be vocatos, petitionemque eorum edoctus fuit, misit homines called and-the-petition of-them taught was he-sent men cum eis ad insulam Hiberniæ quæ tunc vasta ab omni with them to the-island of-Ireland which then empty of every incola erat: eamque eis concessit. Deinde creverunt illic et inhabitant was and-it to-them granted then they-grew there and multiplicati sunt: insulamque usque in hodiernum diem multiplied they-were and-the-island all-the-way into the-present day tenuerunt. Gurgiunt vero Brabtruc cum dies vitæ suæ cum they-have-held Gurgiunt but Brabtruc when the-days of-life his-own with pace explevisset, sepultus fuit in urbe Legionum, quam post peace he-had-fulfilled buried was in the-City of-the-Legions which after obitum patris, ædificiis et muris decorare studuerat. the-death of-the-father with-buildings and with-walls to-adorn he-had-been-eager Guithelinus regnat: lex Martia instituitur

XIII • GUTHELINUS AND THE MARTIAN LAW

Guithelinus reigns kindly and modestly. His learned wife Marcia devises the law the Britons call Martian, which King Alfred translated as the Mercian law. When he dies, the kingdom falls to Marcia and their son Sisillius, who is only seven.

Post illum autem Guithelinus diadema regni suscepit, quod after him moreover Guithelinus the-diadem of-the-kingdom took-up which omni vitæ suæ tempore benigne et modeste tractavit. Erat in-all of-life his-own time kindly and modestly he-handled there-was ei nobilis mulier Marcia nomine, omnibus artibus erudita, to-him a-noble woman Marcia by-name in-all arts learned hæc inter multa et inaudita, quæ proprio ingenio repererat, she among many and unheard-of-things which by-her-own wit she-had-found invenit legem quam Britones Martianam appellaverunt. Hanc devised a-law which the-Britons Martian called this etiam rex Aluredus inter cæteras transtulit, et Saxonica lingua also the-king Alfred among the-others translated and in-the-Saxon tongue Pa marchitie lage vocavit. At ut Guithelinus obiit, remansit the Mercian law called but when Guithelinus died remained regni gubernaculum prædictæ reginæ et filio ipsius, of-the-kingdom the-helm to-the-aforesaid queen and to-the-son her qui Sisilius vocabatur. Erat tunc Sisilius septem annorum: nec who Sisillius was-called was then Sisillius of-seven years nor ætas ipsius expetebat, ut regnum moderationi ipsius cederet. the-age his demanded that the-kingdom to-the-government his should-fall

Reges post Guithelinum

XIV · THE KINGS AFTER GUTHELINUS

Marcia rules the island until her death, and Sisillius, Kimarus, and Danius follow. Danius' son by a concubine, Morvidus, would have been famous for his prowess but for his cruelty. Handsome and generous, he has no equal in strength and kills anyone who angers him.

Qua de causa mater, quia consilio et sensu pollebat, which for reason the-mother because in-counsel and in-sense was-strong totius insulæ imperium obtinuit. Quæ cum ab hac luce of-the-whole island the-command held who when from this light migrasset, Sisillius sumto diademate regni gubernaculo she-had-departed Sisillius taken the-diadem of-the-kingdom of-the-helm potitus est. Post illum Kimarus ejus filius regimen obtinuit: gained has after him Kimarus his son the-rule held cui successit Danius ejusdem frater. Quo defuncto to-whom succeeded Danius of-the-same the-brother who having-died insignitus est Morvidus, quem ex Tangustela concubina invested was Morvidus whom of Tangustela a-concubine genuerat. Hic nimia probitate famosissimus esset, he-had-begotten this-one for-excessive prowess most-famous would-have-been nisi immoderatæ crudelitati indulgisset: nemini namque unless to-immoderate cruelty he-had-indulged no-one for parcebat iratus, quin eum interficeret, si telorum copiam he-spared angry but-that him he-killed if of-weapons a-supply reperisset. Erat namque pulcher aspectu, et in dandis he-had-found he-was for handsome in-appearance and in giving muneribus profusus: nec erat alter tantæ fortitudinis in gifts lavish nor was another of-so-great strength in regno, qui ejus congressum sustinere quivisset. the-kingdom who his engagement to-sustain could-have Morvidum fera devorat

XV · A BEAST DEVOURS MORVIDUS

A king of the Morini lands in Northumbria, and Morvidus defeats him, fighting harder than most of his army. He kills every captive himself and has the rest flayed alive and burned. When a monster from the Irish Sea begins devouring the coast dwellers, he fights it alone, spends his weapons in vain, and is swallowed like a little fish.

Temporibus ipsius applicuit quidam rex Moranorum cum in-the-times his landed a-certain king of-the-Morini with magna manu in Northumbriam: et patriam vastare cœpit. a-great band into Northumbria and the-country to-lay-waste began Cui Morvidus, collecta totius potestatis suæ juventute, to-whom Morvidus gathered of-the-whole power his-own the-youth obviam perrexit, et cum illo præliatus est. Plus ipse solus to-meet proceeded and with him fought he-has more he alone in præliando proficiebat quam maxima pars exercitus sui in fighting achieved than the-greatest part of-army his-own principatus et ut victoria potitus est, non evasit ullus of-the-principality and when of-the-victory gained he-has not escaped anyone vivus quin ipsum interficeret. Jubebat enim unum post alium alive but-that him he-killed he-ordered for one after another ante se adduci, ut quemque perimendo crudelitatem suam before himself to-be-led so-that each-one by-destroying cruelty his-own satiaret: et cum fatigatus cessisset paulisper, præcipiebat he-might-sate and when wearied he-had-yielded for-a-little he-ordered ipsos vivos excoriari et excoriatos comburi. Inter hæc et them alive to-be-flayed and the-flayed to-be-burned among these and alia sævitix ejus gesta, contigit ei infortunium quoddam other of-savagery his deeds happened to-him a-misfortune a-certain quod ejus nequitiam delevit. Advenerat namque ex partibus which his wickedness wiped-out had-come for from the-parts Hibernici maris inauditæ feritatis bellua, quæ incolas of-the-Irish sea of-unheard-of ferocity a-beast which the-inhabitants maritimos sine intermissione devorabat. Cumque fama of-the-coast without intermission devoured and-when the-report aures ejus attigisset: accessit ipse ad illam, et solus the-ears his had-reached approached he-himself to it and alone cum sola congressus est. At cum omnia tela sua in with it-alone engaged he-has but when all weapons his-own on illam in vanum consumpsisset, acceleravit monstrum illud, it in vain he-had-spent hastened monster that et apertis faucibus ipsum velut pisciculum devoravit. and opened jaws him like a-little-fish devoured

Gorbonius, rex justissimus, regnat

XVI · GORBONIANUS, THE MOST JUST OF KINGS

Morvidus' eldest son Gorbonianus is the most just of kings. He honors the gods, restores and builds temples, protects farmers from their lords, and enriches young warriors so that none needs to wrong another. The island overflows with riches, and he is buried at Trinovantum.

Genuerat ipse quinque filios, quorum primogenitus, had-begotten he-himself five sons of-whom the-first-born Gorbonianus nomine, solium regni suscepit. Nullus Gorbonianus by-name the-throne of-the-kingdom took-up none ea tempestate eo justior erat, aut amantior æqui, at-that time than-him more-just was or more-loving of-the-just nec qui populum maiore diligentia tractaret. Mos ejus nor who the-people with-greater diligence handled the-custom his continuus erat debitum honorem diis primum impendere: continual was due honor to-the-gods first to-pay et rectam plebi justitiam. Per cunctas regni and right to-the-commoners justice through all of-the-kingdom Britanniæ civitates templa deorum renovabat, et plura of-Britain the-cities the-temples of-the-gods he-renewed and many nova ædificabat. Omnibus diebus ejus tanta divitiarum new built in-all days his with-so-great of-riches copia insula affluebat, quantam nullæ collaterales provinciæ abundance the-island overflowed as-great-as no neighboring provinces habebant. Quippe colonos ad agriculturam admonebat, ipsos had indeed the-farmers to agriculture he-urged them ab injuriis dominorum defendens. Bellatores quoque juvenes from the-wrongs of-the-lords defending the-warrior also youths auro et argento ditabat, ita ut nulli opus esset injuriam with-gold and with-silver he-enriched so that for-none need was wrong alteri facere. Inter hæc et plura innatæ bonitatis ejus to-another to-do among these-things and many of-inborn goodness his gesta, debita naturæ solvens, ab hac luce migravit: et in deeds the-debts to-nature paying from this light departed and in urbe Trinovanto sepultus est. the-city Trinovantum buried he-was Arthgallo solio depellitur: Elidurus, post quinque annos, regnum Arthgalloni reddit

XVII · ARTHGALLO DEPOSED AND RESTORED

Arthgallo deposes the nobles and robs the rich until they depose him and make his brother Elidurus king. After five years Elidurus finds the exiled Arthgallo in the Calaterian forest, hides him, and summons the princes one by one, threatening each with death unless he submits to Arthgallo. At York he sets his own crown on his brother's head and is called the Dutiful, and Arthgallo reigns ten years reformed.

Post illum Arthgallo frater ejus, regio diademate after him Arthgallo brother his with-the-royal diadem insignitur, qui in omnibus suis actibus germano diversus is-marked who in all his-own acts from-the-brother different extitit. Nobiles namque ubique laborabat deponere, et was the-nobles for everywhere he-labored to-depose and ignobiles exaltare, divitibus quibusque sua auferre, the-ignoble to-exalt from-the-rich all their-own-things to-take-away infinitos thesauros accumulans. Quod heroes regni infinite treasures heaping which the-heroes of-the-kingdom diutius ferre recusantes, insurrexerunt in illum, et a longer to-bear refusing rose against him and from solio regio deposuerunt. Exinde crexerunt Elidurum fratrem the-throne royal deposed thence they-raised Elidurus brother ejus, qui postea propter misericordiam quam in fratrem his who afterward on-account-of the-mercy which towards the-brother fecit, Pius vocatus fuit: nam cum regnum emenso he-made the-Dutiful called was for when the-kingdom having-passed quinquennio possedisset, forte in Calatherio nemore venans, a-five-year-span he-had-possessed by-chance in the-Calaterian forest hunting obviavit fratri suo qui depositus fuerat. Ipse vero he-met brother his-own who deposed had-been he-himself but peragratis quibuscumque provincialibus regnis auxilium traveled-through all provincial kingdoms help quæsiverat, ut amissum honorem recuperare quivisset, had-sought so-that the-lost honor to-recover he-might-be-able nec usquam invenerat: et cum supervenientem paupertatem nor anywhere had-found and when the-coming-on poverty diutius ferre non potuisset, reversus est in Britanniam, longer to-bear not he-had-been-able returned he-has into Britain decem solummodo militibus sociatus. Petens ergo illos quos with-ten only knights accompanied seeking therefore those whom dudum habuerat amicos, prædictum nemus præteribat: quum formerly he-had-had as-friends the-aforesaid forest he-was-passing when Elidurus ipsius frater ipsum non speratum aspexit. Quo viso, Elidurus his brother him not hoped-for saw whom seen cucurrit Elidurus, et amplexatus est illum, infinita oscula ran Elidurus and embraced he-has him infinite kisses ingeminans. Et ut diu miseriam fratris deflevit, duxit redoubling and when long the-misery of-the-brother he-bewailed he-led illum secum in civitatem Alclud, et in thalamo suo him with-himself into the-city Alclud and in chamber his-own occuluit. Post hæc finxit se infirmum ibi, nunciosque hid after these-things he-pretended himself sick there and-messengers suos per totum regnum direxit, qui principibus sibi his-own through the-whole kingdom directed who to-the-princes to-him subditis suggestissent, ut ad se visitandum venirent.

subject should-suggest that to himself for-visiting they-should-come

Cumque cuncti in urbem qua jacebat convenissent: præcepit and-when all into the-city where he-lay had-come-together he-ordered ut unusquisque thalamum suum singillatim et sine tumultu that each-one chamber his-own one-by-one and without tumult ingrederetur. Asserebat enim sermonem plurium capiti should-enter he-asserted for the-talk of-many to-the-head suo nociturum, si catervatim supervenissent, Credulus his-own about-to-harm if in-crowds they-had-come-up credulous ergo quisque jussioni ejus paruit, et unusquisque post therefore each-one to-the-order his obeyed and each-one after alterum domum ingressus est. Singulos itaque ingredientes, another the-house entered has the-single-ones and-so entering præcipiebat Elidurus ministris, qui ad hoc parati erant, capere, ordered Elidurus the-servants who for this prepared were to-seize ipsisque capita amputare, nisi se iterum Arthgalloni and-from-them the-heads to-cut-off unless themselves again to-Arthgallo fratri suo remisissent. Sic faciebat separatim de cunctis, brother his-own they-had-submitted thus he-did separately about all et omnes Arthgalloni mediante timore pacificavit. Confirmato and all to-Arthgallo mediating fear he-pacified confirmed denique fœdere, duxit Elidurus Arthgallonem Eboracum:

finally the-pact led Elidurus Arthgallo to-York cepitque diadema de capite suo, et fratris capiti and-took the-diadem from head his-own and of-the-brother on-the-head imposuit. Unde sortitus est hoc nomen Pius: quia put whence got he-has this name the-Dutiful because prædictam pietatem in fratrem habuerat. Regnavit ergo the-aforsaid dutifulness towards the-brother he-had-had reigned therefore Arthgallo decem annis, et sese ab incepta nequitia correxit:

Arthgallo for-ten years and himself from the-begun wickedness corrected vice etenim versa cœpit ignobiles deponere, et generosos in-turn for reversed he-began the-ignoble to-depose and the-well-born exaltare. Quod suum erat unicuique permittere, rectamque to-exalt what his-own was to-each-one to-allow and-right justitiam exercere. Denique superveniente languore defecit, justice to-exercise finally coming-on sickness he-failed et in urbe Kaerleir sepultus est. and in the-city Kaerleir buried he-was Elidurus secundum, et post Peredurum mortuum tertium regnat

XVIII • ELIDURUS REIGNS AGAIN

Elidurus is king again, but his brothers Vigenius and Peredurus defeat him, shut him in the tower at Trinovantum, and divide the kingdom. Vigenius dies after seven years, and Peredurus rules the whole kingdom well. When Peredurus dies suddenly, Elidurus is brought from prison and crowned a third time.

Erigitur Elidurus iterum in regem, et pristinæ dignitati is-raised Elidurus again into king and to-former dignity restituitur. Sed dum Gorbonianum primogenitum fratrem suum is-restored but while Gorbonianus the-first-born brother his-own in omni bonitate sequeretur: duo residui fratres ejus Vigenius in all goodness he-followed the-two remaining brothers his Vigenius et Peredurus collectis undique armatis cum illo præliari and Peredurus gathered from-everywhere armed-men with him to-fight aggrediuntur. Potiti vero victoria, ceperunt illum, et intra undertake having-gained indeed the-victory they-took him and within turrim urbis Trinovantinæ incluserunt, imponentes custodes. the-tower of-the-city Trinovantine shut putting-on guards Post ea partiti sunt regnum in duo: cujus pars quæ ab after that divided they-have the-kingdom into two of-which the-part which from Humbro flumine occidentem versus vergit, in sortem cecidit the-Humber river the-west towards slopes into the-lot fell Vigenio. Altera vero cum tota Albania Pereduro. Emensis to-Vigenius the-other indeed with the-whole Albany to-Peredurus having-passed demum septem annis obiit Vigenius, et totum regnum at-last seven years died Vigenius and the-whole kingdom cessit Pereduro. Insignitus itaque sceptro, postmodum illud fell to-Peredurus marked and-so with-the-scepter afterward it benigne et modeste gubernavit, ita ut antecessores fratres kindly and modestly he-governed so that the-preceding brothers excellere diceretur, nec de Eliduro mentio fieret. Sed cum to-excel he-was-said nor about Elidurus mention was-made but since nemini mors parcere sciat: supervenit illa repentino cursu, to-no-one death to-spare knows came-upon it with-sudden course ipsumque vitæ subripuit. Educitur continuo Elidurus carcere, and-him from-life snatched is-led-out at-once Elidurus from-prison et tertio in solium regni sublimatur: qui cum and for-the-third-time onto the-throne of-the-kingdom is-raised who when omne tempus suum in bonitate et justitia explevisset, ab hac all time his-own in goodness and justice he-had-fulfilled from this luce migrans exemplum pietatis successoribus suis dereliquit. light departing an-example of-dutifulness to-successors his-own left

Reges triginta tres post Elidurum

XIX · THIRTY-THREE KINGS AFTER ELIDURUS

Gorbonianus' son rules justly, and Arthgallo's son Marganus keeps the peace. His brother Enniaunus is deposed in his sixth year for tyranny, and a long line of kings follows. Among them Blegabred surpasses all singers and is called the god of minstrels, and Gligueillus is modest, prudent, and just.

Defuncto itaque Eliduro, suscepit Gorboniani filius regni having-died and-so Elidurus took-up of-Gorbonianus the-son of-the-kingdom diadema, et Avunculum in sensu et prudentia imitatus est. the-diadem and the-uncle in sense and prudence imitated he-has Postposita namque tyrannide justitiam atque misericordiam set-aside for tyranny justice and mercy in populum exercebat, nec unquam a tramite rectitudinis towards the-people he-exercised nor ever from the-path of-rectitude deviavit. Post illum regnavit Marganus Arthgallonis filius, qui strayed after him reigned Marganus of-Arthgallo son who etiam exemplo parentum serenatus gentem Britonum cum also by-the-example of-the-parents made-serene the-people of-the-Britons with tranquillitate tractavit. Huic successit Enniaunus frater, tranquillity handled to-this-one succeeded Enniaunus the-brother qui longe ab illo distans in tractando populum, sexto who far from him differing in handling the-people in-the-sixth anno regni sui a regia sede depositus est. Postposita year of-the-reign his-own from the-royal seat deposed he-was set-aside namque justitia tyrannidem prælegerat, quæ ipsum a solio for justice tyranny he-had-preferred which him from the-throne regni deposuit. In loco ejus fuit positus cognatus ejus of-the-kingdom deposed in place his was put kinsman his Idvallo Vigenii filius, qui eventu Enniauni correctus, jus atque Idvallo of-Vigenius son who by-the-fate of-Enniaunus corrected right and rectitudinem colebat. Huic successit Runno Pereduri filius: rectitude cultivated to-this-one succeeded Runno of-Peredurus son cui Geruntius Eliduri filius. Post illum Catellus filius ejus. to-whom Geruntius of-Elidurus son after him Catellus son his Post Catellum, Coillus. Post Coillum, Porrex. Post Porrecem, after Catellus Coillus after Coillus Porrex after Porrex Cherin. Huic nati fuerunt tres filii, Fulgenius videlicet atque Cherin to-this-one born were three sons Fulgenius namely and Eldadus, necnon et Andragius: qui omnes alter post alterum Eldadus nor-not also Andragius who all one after another regnaverunt. Exin successit Urianus Andragii filius: cui reigned thence succeeded Urianus of-Andragius son to-whom Eliud: cui Cledancus: cui Cletonus: cui Gurgintius: Eliud to-whom Cledancus to-whom Cletonus to-whom Gurgintius cui Merianus: cui Bleduno, cui Cap: cui Oenus: to-whom Merianus to-whom Bleduno to-whom Cap to-whom Oenus cui Sisillius: cui Blegabred. Hic omnes cantores quos to-whom Sisillius to-whom Blegabred this-one all singers whom præcedens ætas habuerat, et in modulis, et in omnibus musicis the-preceding age had-had both in melodies and in all musical instrumentis excedebat: ita ut deus jocularum diceretur. Post instruments surpassed so that the-god of-the-minstrels he-was-called after illum regnavit Arthmail frater suus. Post Arthmail, Eldol: cui him reigned Arthmail brother his-own after Arthmail Eldol to-whom successit Redion: cui Rederchius: cui Samuilpenissel: succeeded Redion to-whom Rederchius to-whom Samuilpenissel cui Pir: cui Capoir: deinde successit Gligueillus Capoiri to-whom Pir to-whom Capoir then succeeded Gligueillus of-Capoir filius, vir in omnibus actibus modestus et prudens, et son a-man in all acts modest and prudent and qui super omnes rectam justitiam inter populos exercebat. who above all right justice among the-peoples exercised

Tres Heli filii, Lud, Nennius, Cassibellaunus

XX · LUD, NENNIUS, AND CASSIBELLAUNUS

Heli reigns forty years and has three sons. Lud rebuilds Trinovantum with walls and towers, and it is named Kaerlud, later London; he is buried by the gate called Ludgate. His sons are too young to rule, so their uncle Cassibellaunus is made king, though he gives Androgeus Trinovantum and Kent and Tenuantius Cornwall.

Post illum successit Heli filius ejus, regnumque quadraginta after him succeeded Heli son his and-the-kingdom for-forty annis tractavit. Hic tres generavit filios, Lud, Cassibellaunum, years handled this-one three begot sons Lud Cassibellaunus Nennium: quorum primogenitus, videlicet Lud, regnum Nennius of-whom the-first-born namely Lud the-kingdom post obitum patris suscepit. Exin gloriosus ædificator after the-death of-the-father took-up thence a-glorious builder urbium existens, renovavit muros urbis Trinovanti, et of-cities being be-renewed the-walls of-the-city Trinovantum and innumerabilibus turribus eam circumcinxit. Præcepit etiam with-innumerable towers it girded-round be-ordered also civibus, ut domus et ædificia sua in eadem construerent, the-citizens that houses and buildings their-own in the-same they-should-construct ita ut non esset in longe positis regnis civitas quæ so that not there-was in far placed kingdoms a-city which pulciora palatia contineret. Fuit ipse bellicosus homo et more-beautiful palaces might-contain was he-himself a-warlike man and in dandis epulis profusus. Et cum plures civitates possideret, in giving feasts lavish and though many cities be-possessed hanc præ omnibus amabat: et in illa majori parte totius this before all be-loved and in it for-the-greater part of-the-whole anni commanebat: unde nominata fuit postmodum Kaerlud: year be-dwelt whence named was afterward Kaerlud et deinde per corruptionem nominis Kaerlondon. Succedente and then through corruption of-the-name Kaerlondon following vero tempore per commutationem linguarum, dicta fuit indeed time through the-change of-tongues called was Londoniæ: et postea Londres applicantibus alienigenis, qui London and afterward Londres landing foreigners who patriam sibi submittebant. Defuncto tandem illo, corpus the-country to-themselves subjected having-died at-last him the-body ejus reconditum fuit in prædicta civitate, juxta portam illam his stored was in the-aforsaid city beside gate that quæ adhuc de nomine ejus Parthlud Britannice, Saxonice which still from the-name his Parthlud in-British in-Saxon Ludesgata nuncupatur. Nati fuerunt ei duo filii, Androgeus Ludgate is-called born were to-him two sons Androgeus et Tenuantius: qui cum propter ætatem regnum tractare and Tenuantius who when on-account-of age the-kingdom to-handle nequissent, Cassibellaunus eorum patruus loco illorum in they-had-been-unable Cassibellaunus their uncle in-place of-them into regem sublimatur. Mox ut diademate insignitus fuit, cœpit king is-raised soon when with-the-diadem marked he-was he-began ita largitate atque probitate vigere, ut fama illius per remota so in-largess and in-prowess to-flourish that the-fame his through distant regna divulgaretur. Unde contigit ut totius regni monarchia kingdoms was-spread-abroad whence it-happened that of-the-whole kingdom the-monarchy sibi, et non suis nepotibus cederet. Cassibellaunus tamen, to-him and not to-his-own nephews fell Cassibellaunus yet pietati indulgens, noluit juvenes regni esse expertes, to-dutifulness devoted was-unwilling the-youths of-the-kingdom to-be without-a-share sed ejus magnam partem eis distribuit. Urbem enim but of-it a-great part to-them distributed the-city for Trinovantum cum ducatu Cantia largitus est Androgeo: Trinovantum with the-dukedom of-Kent bestowed he-has on-Androgeus ducatum vero Cornubiæ Tenuantio. Ipse etiam diademate the-dukedom indeed of-Cornwall on-Tenuantius he-himself also by-the-diadem præclarus, illis et totius insulæ principibus imperabat. distinguished over-them and of-the-whole island over-the-princes ruled

BOOK IV

Julius Cæsar in Britanniam venit

I · JULIUS CAESAR COMES TO BRITAIN

Having subdued Gaul, Julius Caesar looks across at Britain from the shore of the Ruteni. He declares that Romans and Britons share Trojan descent but that the Britons, living outside the world, know nothing of knighthood. He writes to King Cassibellaunus demanding tribute and subjection to the Senate.

Interea contigit (ut in Romanis reperitur historiis) Julium meanwhile it-happened as in Roman is-found histories Julius Cæsarem subjugata Gallia ad littus Rutenorum venisse.
Caesar subjugated Gaul to the-shore of-the-Ruteni to-have-come Et cum illinc Britanniam insulam aspexisset: quæsit a and when from-there Britain the-island he-had-seen he-asked from circumstantibus, quæ patria et quæ gens inhabitasset. Dum the-bystanders what country and what people had-inhabited-it while ad Oceanum intueretur, cumque nomen regni didicisset to the-Ocean he-was-gazing and-when the-name of-the-kingdom he-had-learned et populi, dixit: “Hercle ex eadem prosapia nos Romani and of-the-people he-said by-Hercules from the-same lineage we Romans et Britones orti sumus, quia ex Trojana gente processimus. and Britons sprung are because from the-Trojan race we-have-proceeded Nobis Æneas post destructionem Trojæ primus pater fuit: to-us Aeneas after the-destruction of-Troy the-first father was illis vero Brutus, quem Silvius Ascanii filii Æneæ filius to-them indeed Brutus whom Silvius of-Ascanius son of-Aeneas son progenuit. Sed, nisi fallor, valde degenerati sunt a begot but unless I-am-deceived greatly degenerated they-have-been from nobis, nec quid sit militia noverunt, cum intra Oceanum us nor what is knighthood they-know since within the-Ocean extra orbem commaneant. Leviter cogendi erunt tributum outside the-world they-dwell easily to-be-forced they-will-be tribute nobis dare, et continuum obsequium Romanæ dignitati to-us to-give and continual obedience to-the-Roman dignity præstare. Prius tamen mandandum est eis ut inaccessi to-offer first yet to-be-commanded it-is to-them that untouched a Populo Romano et intacti vectigal reddant, et by the-People Roman and unharmed tax they-should-render and ut cæteræ gentes, subjectionem Senatui faciant: ne as the-other peoples subjection to-the-Senate they-should-make lest nos ipsorum cognatorum sanguinem fundentes, antiquam we of-the-very kinsmen the-blood shedding the-ancient nobilitatem patris nostri Priami offendamus.” Quod cum nobility of-father our Priam we-may-offend which when literis suis regi Cassibellauno mandavisset: indignatus by-letters his-own to-the-king Cassibellaunus he-had-sent-word indignant est Cassibellaunus: ipsique epistolam in hæc verba direxit. was Cassibellaunus and-to-him a-letter in these words directed Cassibellaunus ad Cæsarem epistolam mittit

II • CASSIBELLAUNUS' LETTER TO CAESAR

Cassibellaunus answers that Roman greed for gold and silver cannot leave in peace even a people beyond the Ocean. Since Britons and Romans share Aeneas' blood, Caesar should seek friendship, not servitude. The Britons know nothing of slavery and will fight for their liberty and their kingdom if he invades.

Cassibellaunus Britonum rex Caio Julio Cæsari. Miranda Cassibellaunus of-the-Britons king to-Gaius Julius Caesar to-be-wondered-at est, Cæsar, populi Romani cupiditas: qui quicquid est auri is O-Caesar of-the-people Roman the-greed which whatever is of-gold vel argenti sitiens, nequit nos intra pericula Oceani extra or of-silver thirsting cannot us within the-dangers of-the-Ocean outside orbem positos pati: quin census nostros appetere præsumat, the-world placed to-suffer but-that wealth our to-seek it-presumes quos hactenus quiete possedimus. Nec hoc quidem sufficit, which hitherto quietly we-have-possessed nor this indeed suffices nisi postposita libertate subjectionem ei faciamus, perpetuam unless set-aside liberty subjection to-it we-make perpetual servitutum subituri. Opprobrium itaque petisti, Cæsar, servitude about-to-undergo a-disgrace and-so you-have-sought O-Caesar cum communis nobilitatis vena Britonibus et Romanis ab since of-common nobility the-vein to-the-Britons and to-the-Romans from Ænea defluat, et ejusdem cognationis una et eadem catena Aeneas flows-down and of-the-same kinship one and the-same chain præfulgeat: qua firma amicitia conjungi deberent. Illa igitur shines-forth by-which with-firm friendship to-be-joined they-ought that therefore a nobis petenda esset, non servitus. Quia eam potius largiri from us to-be-sought would-be not servitude because it rather to-bestow didicimus quam servitutis jugum ferre. Libertatem namque we-have-learned than of-servitude the-yoke to-bear liberty for in tantum consuevimus habere, quod prorsus ignoramus quid to so-far we-are-accustomed to-have that utterly we-are-ignorant what sit servituti obedire: quam si ipsi dii conarentur nobis is to-servitude to-obey which if themselves the-gods should-try from-us eripere, elaboraremus utique omni nisu resistere, ut eam to-snatch we-would-labor surely with-all effort to-resist so-that it retineremus. Liqueat igitur dispositioni tuæ, Cæsar, nos we-might-keep let-it-be-clear therefore to-disposition your O-Cæsar us pro illa et pro regno nostro pugnatueros, si, ut comminatus for it and for kingdom our about-to-fight if as threatened es, intra insulam Britanniaë supervenire inceperis. you-have within the-island of-Britain to-come-upon you-will-have-begun

Cassibellaunus Cæsarem pugna vincit

III • CASSIBELLAUNUS DEFEATS CAESAR

Caesar lands at the mouth of the Thames, and Cassibellaunus and his nobles resolve to attack before he can take a town. In the battle Nennius, the king's brother, meets Caesar hand to hand, and Caesar's sword sticks in his shield. Nennius fights on with it and kills the tribune Labienus, and by evening the Romans withdraw to their ships and sail back to Gaul.

His itaque visis, Caius Julius Cæsar navigium suum parat, these and-so seen Gaius Julius Caesar fleet his-own prepares prosperosque ventos exspectat: ut quod Cassibellauno and-favorable winds awaits so-that what to-Cassibellaunus mandaverat, effectibus prosequeretur. Optato ergo vento he-had-sent-word in-deeds he-might-follow-up the-desired therefore wind instante, erexit vela sua, et in ostium Tamensis fluminis pressing he-raised sails his-own and into the-mouth of-the-Thames river cum exercitu suo applicuit. Jamque rates ad tellurem with army his-own landed and-already the-rafts to land appulerant: ecce Cassibellaunus cum tota sua fortitudine had-driven behold Cassibellaunus with all his-own strength ei occurrit, et ad Dorobellum oppidum veniens, quæsivit him met and to Dorobellum the-town coming asked ibi a proceribus suis consilium, qualiter hostes longius there from nobles his-own counsel how the-enemies farther arceret. Aderat cum eo Belinus princeps militiæ he-might-keep-off was-present with him Belinus prince of-the-knightbood ejus, cujus consilio totum regnum tractabat. Aderant etiam his whose by-counsel the-whole kingdom he-handled were-present also duo nepotes ejus, Androgeus videlicet dux Trinovanti, et two nephews his Androgeus namely duke of-Trinovantum and Tenuancius dux Cornubiæ. Tres quoque reges subditi sibi, Tenuantius duke of-Cornwall three also kings subject to-him Cridious rex Albanix, et Guerthaeth Venedociæ, atque Britael Cridious king of-Albany and Guerthaeth of-Venedotia and Britael Demetix: qui ut ceteros in affectum pugnandi induxissent, of-Demetia who as the-others into the-desire of-fighting they-had-led consilium dederunt ut recenter castra Cæsaris adirent: counsel gave that freshly the-camp of-Cæsar they-should-approach et antequam civitatem aliquam sive oppidum cepisset, and before a-city any or town he-had-taken ipsum expellere insisterent: nam si sese intra munitiones him to-drive-out they-should-press for if himself within the-fortifications patriæ immisisset, dicebant eum difficilius expellendum, of-the-country he-had-thrust they-said him harder to-be-driven-out cum sciret quo se et commilitones suos reciperet. since he-would-know where himself and comrades his-own he-might-withdraw Assensum ergo præbentes cuncti, petierunt littora, in quibus assent therefore offering all sought the-shores on which Julius castra et tentoria sua erexerat: ibi dispositis in Julius camp and tents his-own had-raised there arranged on utraque parte catervis dextras cum hostibus conserunt: pila each side the-bands right-hands with the-enemies they-join javelins pilis et ictus ictibus objicientes. Nec mora, hinc et to-javelins and blows to-blows opposing nor delay on-this-side and inde corruerunt vulnerati telis intra vitalia receptis: on-that fell the-wounded with-weapons within the-vitals received madet tellus cruore morientium, ac si repentinus auster is-wet the-earth with-the-gore of-the-dying as if a-sudden south-wind absorptum mare revomisset. Concurrentibus ergo adversis the-swallowed sea had-vomited-back running-together therefore the-opposing catervis, obtulit casus Nennium et Androgeum cum Cantuaritis bands offered chance Nennius and Androgeus with the-men-of-Kent et civibus urbis Trinovantinæ quibus præsidebant, agmini and the-citizens of-the-city Trinovantine over-whom they-presided to-the-column quo Imperator aderat. Ut ergo convenerunt, pene dissipata in-which the-Emperor was-present when therefore they-came-together almost scattered fuit imperatoria cohors, Britonibus densa acie invadentibus: was the-imperial cohort the-Britons with-dense line attacking et cum mixtim ictus ingeminarent, dedit casus aditum and when mingled blows they-redoubled gave chance access Nennio congressum cum Julio faciendi. Irruens ergo in to-Nennius of-an-engagement with Julius of-making rushing therefore upon illum Nennius ultra modum lætatur se posse vel solum him Nennius beyond measure rejoices himself to-be-able even a-single ictum tanto viro ingerere. Quem Cæsar ut impetum in blow on-so-great a-man to-beap whom Caesar when an-attack upon se facientem aspexit: prætenso clypeo excepit, et quantum himself making he-saw held-out shield caught and as-much-as vires permiserunt, cum nudato ense ipsum super cassidem strength permitted with naked sword him upon the-helmet percussit. Erecto igitur gladio voluit exequi primum struck raised therefore the-sword he-wished to-follow-up the-first ictum, ut letiferum vulnus imprimeret: quod cum Nennius blow so-that a-deadly wound he-might-impress which when Nennius calluisset, interposuit clypeum suum, in quo mucro Julii a had-perceived he-interposed shield his-own in which the-blade of-Julius from casside maximis labens viribus inhæsit: ita ut, cum irruentibus the-helmet with-greatest gliding strength stuck so that when rushing-in turmis diutius congredi nequirent, ipsum Imperator extrahere troops longer to-engage they-could-not it the-Emperor to-draw-out non potuerit. Nennius ergo gladium Cæsaris prædicto not was-able Nennius therefore the-sword of-Caesar in-the-aforesaid modo adeptus, abjecit suum quem tenebat, et abstracto manner having-gained threw-away his-own which he-was-holding and drawn altero in hostes irruere festinat. Quemcunque cum ipso the-other upon the-enemies to-rush hurries whomever with it percutiebat vel ei caput amputabat, vel eum sauciatum he-struck either from-him the-head he-cut-off or him wounded præteribat: ita ut nulla spes vivendi in eo maneret. Illi he-passed so that no hope of-living in him remained him tandem in hunc modum sævienti obviavit Labienus tribunus, at-last in this manner raging met Labienus the-tribune sed in primo congressu a Nennio peremptus est. Denique but in the-first engagement by Nennius destroyed was finally plurima parte diei emensa, irruentibus Britonibus densis the-greatest part of-the-day having-passed rushing-on the-Britons in-dense turmis, et audaces impetus facientibus, victoria Deo favente troops and bold attacks making the-victory God favoring provenit: et Cæsar sese intra castra et naves laceratis came and Caesar himself within the-camp and the-ships torn Romanis recepit. Denique nocte illa resociatis ceteris, naves Romans withdrew finally on-night that regathered the-others ships suas intravit, et Neptunum pro castris habere lætatur. bis-own he-entered and Neptune for camp to-have he-rejoices

Cumque ipsi dissuasissent socii prælia diutius ingerere:

and-when to-him had-dissuaded the-comrades battles longer to-wage acquiescens eorum monitionibus, in Galliam reversus est.

assenting their to-admonitions into Gaul returned he-has Nennius, a Cæsare ictus, moritur

IV · NENNIUS DIES OF CAESAR'S BLOW

Cassibellaunus rewards his men for the victory but grieves for his brother Nennius, whom Caesar has wounded beyond healing. Nennius dies within fifteen days and is buried at Trinovantum by the north gate. Caesar's sword, called Yellow Death because no one it wounded lived, is laid in his coffin.

Cassibellaunus ergo ob receptum triumphum lætus, Cassibellaunus therefore on-account-of the-received triumph joyful grates deo solvens, socios victoriæ suæ convocavit:

thanks to-the-god paying the-comrades of-victory his-own called-together et unum quemque juxta meritum probitatis maximis and every one according-to the-merit of-prowess with-greatest muneribus donavit. Angebatur tamen ex alia parte dolore, gifts presented he-was-tormented yet on the-other side with-grief quia frater suus Nennius letaliter vulneratus in dubio vitæ because brother his-own Nennius mortally wounded in doubt of-life jacebat. Vulneraverat enim eum Julius in supradicto congressu lay had-wounded for him Julius in the-above-said engagement et plagam immedicabilem intulerat: unde intra quindecim and a-blow incurable had-dealt whence within fifteen dies post prælium irrepente morte ab hac luce migravit, days after the-battle creeping-up death from this light departed et in urbe Trinovanto juxta Aquilonarem portam sepultus and in the-city Trinovantum beside the-northern gate buried est. Exequias autem regias facientes, posuerunt cum eo he-was the-funeral-rites moreover royal making they-put with him gladium Cæsaris in sarcophago, quem intra clypeum suum the-sword of-Caesar in the-coffin which within shield his-own pugnans retinuerat. Erat nomen gladii, Crocea mors, quia fighting he-had-kept was the-name of-the-sword Yellow Death because nullus evadebat vivus qui eo vulnerabatur. no-one escaped alive who by-it was-wounded

Cæsar sine gloria Galliam repetit

V · CAESAR RETURNS TO GAUL WITHOUT GLORY

Hearing of Caesar's flight, the Gauls plan to throw off his rule, believing the sea is full of British ships in pursuit. Unwilling to risk a doubtful war, Caesar opens his treasures and wins the nobles with gifts and the commons with promises of liberty. Once a roaring lion, he now bleats like a lamb, until he recovers his power.

Terga igitur vertente Julio, et in Gallicanum littus appulso, the-back therefore turning Julius and on the-Gallic shore landed rebellionem moliuntur Galli, dominium Iulii abjicientes. a-rebellion attempt the-Gauls the-lordship of-Julius throwing-off Arbitrabantur namque ipsum esse debilitatum, ut nullatenus they-thought for him to-be weakened so-that by-no-means ejus vires amplius timori essent. Fama etiam apud omnes his strength any-more for-fear should-be the-rumor also among all una et eadem erat totum mare jam navibus Cassibellauni one and the-same was the-whole sea already with-the-ships of-Cassibellaunus fervere, fugam ipsius Iulii insecuturi. Unde audaciores Galli to-boil the-flight of-Julius himself about-to-pursue whence bolder the-Gauls insistentes cogitabant quomodo Cæsarem a finibus suis pressing-on considered how Caesar from borders their-own expellerent. Quod Julius subolens, noluit anceps bellum they-might-drive-out which Julius scenting was-unwilling a-doubtful war cum feroci populo committere: sed apertis thesauris quosque with a-fierce people to-wage but opened the-treasures all nobiliores adire: ut singulos munificatos in concordiam the-more-noble to-approach so-that the-single-ones enriched-with-gifts into concord reduceret. Plebi libertatem pollicetur, exheredatis he-might-lead-back to-the-commoners liberty he-promises to-the-disinherited amissas possessiones, servis etiam libertatem, qui prius the-lost possessions to-the-slaves also liberty who before leonina feritate fulminans ipsis omnia abstulerat: nunc with-lion's ferocity thundering from-them all-things had-taken-away now mitis agnus humili balans voce, omnia posse reddere a-gentle lamb with-humble bleating voice all-things to-be-able to-give-back lætatur, nec ab his blandiciis quievit, donec pacificatis rejoices nor from these flatteries rested until pacified cunctis, amissam potestatem recuperavit. Nullus interim dies all the-lost power he-recovered no meanwhile day præteribat, quin fugam suam Britonumque victoriam recoleret. passed but-that flight his-own and-of-the-Britons the-victory he-recalled Cassibellaunus palos ferratos in fluvio contra Cæsaris naves figendos parat

VI · IRON STAKES IN THE THAMES

Two years later Caesar prepares to cross again for revenge. Cassibellaunus fortifies the cities, repairs the walls, and sets knights in every port. In the Thames channel by which Caesar must sail to Trinovantum he fixes stakes of iron and lead, thick as a thigh, under the water, and he gathers the island's youth on the coast.

Emenso itaque biennio, parat iterum Oceanum transfretare, having-passed and-so two-years he-prepares again the-Ocean to-cross et sese in Cassibellaunum vindicare. Quod cum Cassibellaunus and himself on Cassibellaunus to-avenge which when Cassibellaunus comperisset: urbes ubique munivit, diruta mœnia renovavit, had-discovered the-cities everywhere he-fortified the-ruined walls he-renewed armatos milites in singulis portibus statuit: præterea alveo armed knights in single ports he-set besides in-the-channel Tamensis fluminis, quo ad urbem Trinovantum Cæsar of-the-Thames river by-which to the-city Trinovantum Caesar navigaturus erat, palis ferreis atque plumbatis instar femoris about-to-sail was with-stakes iron and leaded like a-thigh grossis, subter amnem infixit, ut naves Julii superventuræ thick under the-stream he-fixed so-that the-ships of-Julius about-to-come-up illiderentur. Collecta etiam tota juventute insulæ, mansionem might-be-dashed gathered also the-whole youth of-the-island a-station juxta maritima fecit, adventum hostium expectans. beside the-seacoast he-made the-arrival of-the-enemies awaiting Cassibellaunus Cæsarem iterum fugat

VII • CASSIBELLAUNUS ROUTS CAESAR AGAIN

Caesar's fleet sails up the Thames and is pierced by the hidden stakes, and thousands drown. The survivors fight on shore, but the Britons, three times their number, defeat them. Caesar flees to the Morini and to a tower he has built at Odnea, fearing the Gauls will rise again.

Julius autem cum omnia quæ sibi necessaria erant paravisset, Julius moreover when all-things which for-him necessary were he-had-prepared cum innumerabili multitudine militum mare ingressus est, with an-innumerable multitude of-knights the-sea entered has optatam stragem populo qui eum devicerat inferre affectans. the-desired slaughter on-the-people which him had-defeated to-inflict desiring Quam proculdubio ingessisset, si illæsa classe tellure which without-doubt he-would-have-heaped if with-unhurt fleet of-the-land potiri potuisset: quod ad effectum ducere nequivit. to-gain-possession he-had-been-able which to effect to-lead he-could-not Nam dum per Tamensem fluvium prædictam civitatem for while by the-Thames river the-aforesaid city peteret, naves ejus præfatis palis infixæ subitum passæ he-was-seeking the-ships his on-the-aforesaid stakes fixed sudden suffered sunt periculum. Unde ad multa milia submergebantur have danger whence to many thousands were-drowned milites, dum ipsas naves perforatas ingrediens fluvius the-knights while the-very the-ships pierced entering the-river absorberet. Cumque id Cæsari compertum esset, velis swallowed and-when this to-Caesar discovered had-been with-the-sails maxima vi retortis, ad terram reverti festinavit. Ipsi with-greatest force turned-back to land to-return he-hurried they-themselves quoque qui in tanto periculo superfuerant, vix elapsi, also who in so-great danger had-survived scarcely having-escaped cum illo tellurem scandunt. Hoc igitur Cassibellaunus ex with him the-land climb this therefore Cassibellaunus from ripa qua aderat aspiciens, gaudet propter periculum the-bank where he-was-present seeing rejoices on-account-of the-danger submersorum: sed tristatur ob ceterorum salutem. Dato of-the-drowned but is-saddened on-account-of of-the-rest the-safety given vero commilitonibus suis signo, impetum in Romanos indeed to-comrades his-own a-signal an-attack upon the-Romans facit. At Romani quanquam periculum in fluvio perpassi he-makes but the-Romans although danger in the-river suffered fuissent, ut terra potiti sunt, viriliter Britonum irruptioni had when of-the-land gained have manfully of-the-Britons to-the-inroad restiterunt. Audaciam quoque pro muro habentes stragem resisted boldness also for a-wall having slaughter non minimam fecerunt: sed tamen majorem patiebantur quam not least they-made but yet greater they-suffered than inferebant. Periclitati namque in fluvio, pauciores incedebant: they-inflicted imperiled for in the-river fewer they-advanced Britones vero omni hora affluentia suorum augmentati, the-Britons indeed every hour by-the-flowing-in of-their-own increased triplo majorem numerum habebant. Unde debilitatis ceteris a-threefold greater number had whence weakened the-others potiti sunt triumpho. Cæsar ergo cum sese devictum gained they-have the-triumph Caesar therefore when himself defeated inspexisset, cum paucis ad naves diffugit, et tutamen maris he-had-seen with a-few to the-ships fled and the-safety of-the-sea ex voto nactus est: tempestivis etiam ventis instantibus, according-to wish got has with-timely also winds pressing erexit vela sua, et Morinorum littus petivit. Ingressus est he-raised sails his-own and of-the-Morini the-shore sought entered he-has deinde quandam turrin, quam in loco qui Odnea vocatur then a-certain tower which in the-place which Odnea is-called construxerat, antequam Britanniam hac vice adivisset: be-had-built before Britain on-this occasion he-had-gone-to timebat namque Gallorum fidem et instabilitatem, ne be-feared for of-the-Gauls the-faith and instability lest secundo in ipsum irruerent: sicut supra dictum est a-second-time upon him they-should-rush as above said it-has-been ipsos fecisse, quando primo Britonibus terga testatus est them to-have-done when first to-the-Britons the-back attested he-has ostendisse. Ob hanc causam turrim sibi in refugium to-have-shown for this cause a-tower for-himself as a-refuge ædificaverat, ita ut rebelli populo resistere valeret, he-had-built so that to-the-rebellious people to-resist he-might-be-able si in illum (ut prædictum est,) insurrexisset. if against him as said-before it-has-been it-had-risen

Evelinus Hirelglam obtruncat, Androgeus Cæsarem petit

VIII · EVELINUS KILLS HIRELGLAS

At Trinovantum the Britons sacrifice thousands of beasts in thanksgiving and hold games. In a wrestling quarrel Evelinus, nephew of Androgeus, beheads the king's nephew Hirelglas. Androgeus refuses to give him up to the king's court, Cassibellaunus ravages his lands, and Androgeus writes to Caesar for help, claiming the death was an accident.

Cassibellaunus autem secundo triumpho adeptus, maximo Cassibellaunus moreover the-second triumph having-obtained with-greatest gaudio fluctuans, edictum fecit, ut omnes proceres Britanniae joy surging an-edict made that all the-nobles of-Britain in urbem Trinovantum cum uxoribus suis convenirent, into the-city Trinovantum with wives their-own should-come-together debitasque solemnitates patriis diis celebrarent, qui and-due solemnities to-the-ancestral gods should-celebrate who victoriam sibi de tanto Imperatore concesserant. Cumque victory to-them over so-great an-Emperor had-granted and-when omnes postposita mora advenissent, diversa sacrificia facientes, all set-aside delay had-come various sacrifices making occisioni pecudum indulserunt. Litaverunt ibi quadraginta to-the-slaughter of-cattle they-gave-themselves they-offered there forty millia vaccarum, et centum milia ovium: diversorumque thousand of-cows and a-hundred thousand of-sheep and-of-various generum volatilia, quæ leviter sub numero non cadebant. kinds birds which easily under number not fell Præterea triginta milia sylvestrium ferarum cujuscunque besides thirty thousand of-woodland wild-beasts of-every generis collectarum. Mox cum diis suis honores kind gathered soon when to-gods their-own the-honors perfecissent, refecerunt se residuis epulis: ut in they-had-completed they-refreshed themselves with-the-remaining feasts as in sacrificiis fieri solebat. Exin quod diei et noctis sacrifices to-be-done was-accustomed thence what of-the-day and of-the-night restabat, diversos ludos componentes transegerunt. Ludentibus remained various games arranging they-spent playing ergo ipsis, contigit inclytos juvenes, quorum alter erat therefore them it-happened renowned youths of-whom one was nepos regis, alter vero Androgei ducis, pariter in the-nephew of-the-king the-other but of-Androgeus of-the-duke together in palæstra contendere, et ob dubiam victoriam the-wrestling-ground to-contend and on-account-of the-doubtful victory litigare. Erat nomen nepotis regis Hirelglas: alterius vero to-quarrel was the-name of-the-nephew of-the-king Hirelglas of-the-other indeed Evelinus. Qui ut mutua convitia ad invicem intulissent, Evelinus who when mutual insults on each-other they-had-brought arripuit Evelinus gladium, nepotique regis caput snatched Evelinus a-sword and-from-the-nephew of-the-king the-head amputavit: quo interfecto perturbata curia, et rumor cut-off whom killed thrown-into-confusion the-court and the-rumor ad Cassibellaunum volavit. Commotus igitur super casu to Cassibellaunus flew moved therefore upon the-fate amici sui Cassibellaunus Androgeo præcepit ut Evelinum of-friend his-own Cassibellaunus to-Androgeus ordered that Evelinus in tertiam horam coram præsentia sua adduceret. Adductus at the-third hour before presence his-own he-should-bring brought quoque præsto esset sententiam quam proceres dictarent also at-hand be-should-be the-sentence which the-nobles should-dictate subire, ne Hirelglas inultus permaneret, si injuste interfectus to-undergo lest Hirelglas unavenged should-remain if unjustly killed fuisset. Cumque animum regis suspectum haberet be-had-been and-when the-mind of-the-king suspected be-held Androgeus, respondit sese suam curiam habere, et in illa Androgeus answered himself his-own court to-have and in it definiri debere quicquid aliquis in homines suos clamaret. to-be-settled ought whatever anyone against men his-own should-claim Si ergo rectitudinem de Evelino decrevisset appetere: ipsum if therefore justice about Evelinus he-had-decided to-see him in urbe Trinovanto ex veterum traditione recepisset. in the-city Trinovantum by of-the-elders tradition be-should-have-received Cassibellaunus itaque cum affectui suo satisfactionem Cassibellaunus and-so when to-desire his-own satisfaction nequivisset ingerere: comminatus est Androgeo, testans be-had-been-unable to-bring threatened has to-Androgeus testifying se ferro et flamma provinciam ejus populaturum, nisi himself with-sword and flame the-province his about-to-ravage unless petitioni suæ acquiesceret. Indignatus ergo Androgeus to-petition his-own he-assented indignant therefore Androgeus distulit petitioni ejus parere. Indignatus autem Cassibellaunus, put-off to-the-petition his to-obey indignant moreover Cassibellaunus acceleravit provincias ipsius vastare. At Androgeus quotidie hastened the-provinces his to-lay-waste but Androgeus daily per cognatos et notos regem adibat, petebatque ut through kinsmen and acquaintances the-king approached and-asked that desisteret a cœpta ira. Et cum furorem ejus nullatenus he-should-desist from begun anger and when the-fury his by-no-means mitigare quivisset, diversas meditationes inivit qualiter to-soothe he-had-been-able various plans he-entered how ipsi resistere valeret. Denique ab omni alia spe decicens, him to-resist he-might-be-able finally from every other hope falling auxilium Cæsaris petere decrevit, literasque suas ei in the-help of-Cæsar to-seek he-decided and-letters his-own to-him in hanc direxit sententiam: “Caio Julio Cæsari Androgeus this directed sense to-Gaius Julius Caesar Androgeus dux Trinovanti, post optatam mortem, optandam salutem. duke of-Trinovantum after desired death desirable health Pœnitet me adversus te egisse dum prælia cum rege meo it-repents me against you to-have-acted while battles with king my committeres. Si enim me a talibus ausis abstinuissem, you-were-joining if for I from such daring-deeds had-abstained devicisses Cassibellaunum: cui post triumphum you-would-have-defeated Cassibellaunus on-whom after triumph suum tanta irrepsit superbia, ut me, per quem triumphavit, his-own so-great crept pride that me through whom he-triumphed a finibus suis exterminare insistat. Hæccine ergo merita from borders his-own to-banish he-presses these-whether therefore merits rependenda essent? Ego illum hereditavi, ipse me exheredare to-be-repaid would-be I him made-heir he me to-disinherit conatur. Ego illum in regnum secundo restitui, ipse me tries I him into the-kingdom a-second-time restored he me destituere affectat. Me etenim contra te pugnante, omnia to-cast-down desires I for against you fighting all ista largitus sum. Numina cælorum testor me non those-things bestowed I-have the-deities of-the-heavens I-call-to-witness me not promeruisse iram ipsius, nisi promereri dicar, quia diffugio to-have-deserved the-anger his unless to-deserve I-am-said because I-shun nepotem meum tradere, quem injusta nece damnare exoptat. nephew my to-hand-over whom with-unjust death to-condemn he-longs Quod ut manifestius discretioni tuæ liqueat, causam which that more-plainly to-discernment your it-may-be-clear the-cause rei adverte. Contigerat nos ob lætitiā triumphī of-the-matter heed it-had-happened us on-account-of the-joy of-triumph nostri solemnitates patriis diis celebrare: in quibus our solemnities to-the-ancestral gods to-celebrate in which cum quæ agenda essent peregissemus sacrificia, juvenis when which to-be-done were we-had-completed sacrifices youth nostra ludos mutuos componebat. Inter ceteros inierunt duo our games mutual arranged among the-others entered two nepotes nostri palæstram, exemplo aliorum conducti. nephews our the-wrestling-ground by-the-example of-others led Cumque meus triumphasset, succensus est alter injusta ira, and-when mine had-triumped inflamed was the-other with-unjust anger festinavitque eum percutere. At ille, vitato ictu, cepit eum and-hurried him to-strike but he avoided the-blow took him per pugnum quo gladium tenebat, volens eum eripere. by the-fist with-which the-sword he-beld wishing it to-snatch Interea cecidit nepos regis super mucronem confossusque meanwhile fell the-nephew of-the-king upon the-blade and-pierced morti subiacuit. Illud itaque cum regi nunciatum esset, to-death lay-subject that and-so when to-the-king announced had-been præcepit mihi tradere puerum meum, ut pro homicidio be-ordered me to-hand-over boy my so-that for homicide supplicio plecteretur. Cui cum contradixissem, venit with-punishment he-might-be-struck to-whom when I-had-contradicted he-came cum omni multitudine sua in provincias meas, maximam with all multitude his-own into provinces my greatest inferens inquietudinem. Unde misericordiam tuam implorans, bringing disturbance whence mercy your imploring auxilium a te peto ut per te dignitati meæ restituar: help from you I-ask that through you to-dignity my I-may-be-restored et tu per me Britannia potiaris. De hoc autem and you through me of-Britain may-gain-possession about this moreover nihil in me hæsitaveris, quia omnis abest proditio. Ea nothing in me you-should-hesitate because all is-absent treachery by-that enim conditione moventur mortales, ut post inimicitias amici for condition are-moved mortals that after enmities friends fiant, et post fugam ad triumphum accedant.” they-become and after flight to triumph they-approach

Cassibellaunus circumsessus pacem implorat

IX · CASSIBELLAUNUS, BESIEGED, SUES FOR PEACE

Androgeus sends his son and thirty noble youths as hostages, and Caesar lands at Richborough. In a valley near Dorobernia Androgeus attacks Cassibellaunus from behind, and the king takes refuge on a rocky hill, where Caesar besieges him. On the second day, starving, Cassibellaunus asks Androgeus to reconcile him with Caesar, and Androgeus agrees, since the wrong is avenged.

His igitur inspectis, consilium habuit Julius Cæsar a these therefore viewed counsel had Julius Caesar from familiaribus suis, ne verbis solummodo ducis invitatus intimates his-own lest by-the-words only of-the-duke invited Britanniam adiret, nisi tales dirigerentur obsides, Britain he-should-approach unless such were-directed hostages quibus securius applicare quivisset. Nec mora, misit ei with-whom more-securely to-land he-might-be-able nor delay sent to-him

Androgeus Scævam filium suum et triginta nobiles juvenes Androgeus Scaeva son his-own and thirty noble youths ex cognatione sua propinquos. Datis ergo obsidibus from kindred his-own near-ones given therefore the-hostages securus factus est Cæsar, revocatisque catervis cum instante secure made was Caesar and-recalled the-bands with pressing vento in Rutupi portum applicuit. Interea obsidere incipiebat wind into of-Rutupi the-port landed meanwhile to-besiege was-beginning Cassibellaunus urbem Trinovantum et villas provinciales Cassibellaunus the-city Trinovantum and the-villas provincial vastare. Sed cum Julii adventum comperisset, deseruit to-lay-waste but when of-Julius the-arrival he-had-discovered he-deserted obsidionem, et imperatori obviare festinavit. Ut ergo vallem the-siege and the-emperor to-meet hurried when therefore a-valley prope Doroberniam intravit, aspexit in eadem Romanorum near Dorobernia he-entered he-saw in the-same of-the-Romans exercitum castra et tentoria ponentem. Adduxerat enim eos the-army camp and tents placing had-brought for them Androgeus ibidem ut illic occultum impetum urbi Androgeus in-the-same-place so-that there a-hidden attack on-the-city ingererent. Nec mora, advertentes Romani Britones supervenire, they-might-bring nor delay noticing the-Romans the-Britons to-come-up armaverunt sese ocius, militesque suos per catervas armed themselves more-swiftly and-knights their-own through bands statuerunt. Ex alia vero parte armis induuntur Britones, set from the-other indeed side with-arms are-clothed the-Britons et sese per turmas consociant. At Androgeus cum and themselves through troops join but Androgeus with quinque milibus armatorum in prope sito nemore delituit, five thousand of-armed-men in nearby situated forest lay-bid ut in auxilium Cæsari occurrens, furtivam et improvisam so-that to help to-Caesar running a-stealthy and unforeseen irruptionem Cassibellauno consociisque ejus faceret. Ut inroad on-Cassibellaunus and-on-the-comrades his he-might-make when itaque hinc et inde convenerunt, non distulerunt mortalia and-so on-this-side and on-that they-came-together not they-delayed mortal tela emittere, nec letiferos ictus ingeminare. Concurrent weapons to-send-out nor deadly blows to-redouble run-together adversæ catervæ: et multum cruoris diffundunt. Concidunt the-opposing bands and much of-gore they-pour-out fall in utraque parte vulnerati, quemadmodum in autumno on each side the-wounded just-as in autumn arborum folia. Ipsis igitur irruentibus egreditur Androgeus of-the-trees the-leaves them therefore rushing-on goes-out Androgeus ex nemore: et aciem Cassibellauni, ex qua totum bellum from the-forest and the-battle-line of-Cassibellaunus on which the-whole war pendebat, a tergo invadit. Mox illa in una parte irruptione hung from the-back attacks soon it in one part by-the-inroad Romanorum paulo ante vastata: in alia vero a concivibus of-the-Romans a-little before laid-waste in the-other indeed by fellow-citizens suis miro modo oppressa, nequivit stationem facere. its-own in-wonderful manner crushed could-not a-stand to-make Unde dissipatis sociis, arrepta fuga campum deserunt. whence scattered the-comrades seized flight the-field they-desert Astatat prope quidam mons in cacumine saxosus densum stood near a-certain mountain on the-top rocky dense habens coriletum: ad illum confugit Cassibellaunus cum suis, having a-hazel-thicket to it fled Cassibellaunus with his-own postquam in debiliorem partem ceciderat. Summitatem quoque after into the-weaker part he-had-fallen the-summit also ejus nactus sese viriliter defendebat, et insequentes hostes its having-got himself manfully he-defended and the-pursuing enemies nece afficiebat. Insecuti namque fuerant ipsum Romani et with-death he-afflicted pursued for had him the-Romans and Androgei catervæ, fugientes turmas ejus lacerantes: montem of-Androgeus the-bands the-fleeing troops his tearing the-mountain quoque ascendentes crebros ictus faciebant, nec prævalebant. also climbing frequent blows they-made nor they-prevailed Saxa etenim montis ejusdem et cacuminis arduitas the-rocks for of-mountain the-same and of-the-top the-steepness Britonibus erat defensio: ita ut a summo occurrentes to-the-Britons was a-defense so that from the-top running-against hostibus stragem darent. Obsedit itaque Cæsar montem to-the-enemies slaughter they-gave besieged and-so Caesar mountain illum tota nocte quæ jam supervenerat, omnes exitus that the-whole night which already had-come-on all exits præcludens. Affectabat namque fame regem cogere, quem closing he-desired for by-hunger the-king to-force whom armis nequiverat. O admirabile tunc genus Britonum, qui with-arms he-had-been-unable O wonderful then race of-the-Britons who ipsum bis in fugam pepulerunt, qui totum orbem sibi him twice into flight drove who the-whole world to-himself submiserat. Cui totus mundus nequivit resistere, illi etiam had-subjected to-whom the-whole world could-not to-resist him even fugati resistunt, parati mortem pro patria et libertate put-to-flight they-resist ready death for country and liberty subire. Hinc ad laudem illorum cecinit Lucanus de Cæsare: to-undergo hence to the-praise of-them sang Lucan about Caesar Territa quæsitis ostendit terga Britannis.

terrified to-the-sought he-showed his-back to-the-Britons Emenso jam die secundo, cum jam non haberet having-passed already the-day second when already not he-had Cassibellaunus quod comederet, timuit ne fame caperetur Cassibellaunus what he-might-eat he-feared lest by-hunger he-be-taken Cæsaris carcerem subiturus. Mandavit ergo Androgeo ut of-Cæsar the-prison about-to-undergo he-sent-word therefore to-Androgeus that sese cum Julio pacificaret, ne gentis dignitas ex qua himself with Julius he-should-reconcile lest of-the-people the-dignity from which natus fuerat capto ipso deleteretur. Mandavit etiam ei born he-had-been taken he should-be-destroyed he-sent-word also to-him se non promeruisse, ut ipsius mortem optaret: quamvis himself not to-have-deserved that his death he-should-desire although inquietudinem ipsi intulisset. Cumque hæc retulissent disturbance on-him he-had-brought and-when these-things had-reported nuncii, ait Androgeus: "Non est diligendus princeps, qui in the-messengers says Androgeus not is to-be-loved a-prince who in bello mitis est ut agnus: in pace ferox ut leo. Dii cœli war gentle is as a-lamb in peace fierce as a-lion O-gods of-heaven et terræ! orat me nunc dominus meus qui prius imperabat: and of-earth begs me now lord my who before commanded Pacificarine nunc, et Cæsari subjectionem facere desiderat, to-be-reconciled-whether now and to-Cæsar subjection to-make does-he-desire cujus pacem prius desideraverat Cæsar? Proinde advertere whose peace before had-desired Cæsar accordingly to-notice debuerat, illum, per quem tantum imperatorem ex regno he-ought-to-have him through whom so-great an-emperor from kingdom suo pepulit, posse ipsum iterum restituere. Non eram his-own he-drove to-be-able him again to-restore not I-was igitur inique tractandus, qui tunc illud obsequium, nunc therefore unjustly to-be-treated who then that service now istud inferre poteram. Insipientia obducitur, qui commilitones this to-bring was-able with-folly is-covered who the-comrades quibus triumphat, injuriis vel contumeliis infestat. Non with-whom he-triumphs with-wrongs or with-insults harasses not enim est ullius ducis victoria: sed illorum qui sanguinem for is of-any leader the-victory but of-those who blood suum pro eo pugnando diffundunt: tamen pacificabo illum their-own for him by-fighting pour-out yet I-shall-reconcile him si potero, quia injuria quam mihi intulit satis in illum if I-shall-be-able because the-wrong which on-me he-brought enough on him vindicata est, cum misericordiam meam imploret. avenged has-been since mercy my he-implores

Androgeus Cæsari ut pacem cum Cassibellauno faciat persuadit

X · ANDROGEUS PERSUADES CAESAR TO MAKE PEACE

Androgeus kneels before Caesar and says he promised only to subdue Cassibellaunus, which is done. He threatens to aid his lord if Caesar seeks more. Caesar accepts a yearly tribute of three thousand pounds of silver, the two become friends, and after wintering in Britain Caesar returns to Gaul and then to Rome against Pompey.

Post hæc festinavit Androgeus ad Julium, amplexusque after these-things hurried Androgeus to Julius and-having-embraced ejus genua, eum in hunc allocutus est sermonem: Ecce satis his knees him in this addressed he-has speech behold enough vindicasti te in Cassibellaunum. Misericordiam in you-have-avenged yourself on Cassibellaunus mercy towards illum habe: quid amplius agendum est, nisi ut subjectionem him have what more to-be-done is except that subjection faciens, vectigal Romanæ dignitati reddat?" Cumque nihil making tax to-the-Roman dignity he-should-render and-when nothing respondisset Cæsar, ait iterum Androgeus: "Hoc solum pactus had-answered Caesar says again Androgeus this alone pledged sum tibi, Cæsar, ut solummodo submisso Cassibellauno I-have to-you O-Caesar that only submitted Cassibellaunus Britanniam tibi subdere laborarem. Ecce victus est Britain to-you to-subject I-should-labor behold conquered has-been Cassibellaunus, et tibi Britannia meo subdita auxilio. Quid Cassibellaunus and to-you Britain by-my subjected help what ultra tibi debeo? nolit creator omnium, ut dominum further to-you do-I-owe may-not-wish the-creator of-all that lord meum misericordiam meam orantem, rectumque de illata my mercy my begging and-right for the-brought injuria mihi facientem, patiar unquam carcere vel vinculis wrong to-me making I-should-suffer ever by-prison or by-chains vinciri. Non leve est interficere Cassibellaunum me vivente, to-be-bound not light is to-kill Cassibellaunus me living cui auxilium meum reddere non erubescam, nisi consilio meo to-whom help my to-render not I-shall-blush unless to-counsel my parueris.” Timore ergo Androgei mitigatus Julius, capit a you-will-have-obeyed with-fear therefore of-Androgeus softened Julius takes from Cassibellauno concordiam, cum vectigali singulis annis reddendo.

Cassibellaunus concord with a-tax in-single years to-be-rendered Erat autem vectigal quod spopondit, tria milia librarum was moreover the-tax which he-promised three thousand of-pounds argenti. Exin amici facti adinvicem Julius et Cassibellaunus, of-silver thence friends made to-each-other Julius and Cassibellaunus mutuaque donaria alter alteri dederunt. Deinde hyemavit and-mutual gifts one to-the-other gave then wintered Cæsar in Britannia: et redeunte vere in Galliam transfretavit.
Caesar in Britain and returning spring into Gaul crossed Succedente postmodum tempore, collectis undique ex omni following afterward time gathered from-everywhere of every genere militibus, Romam contra Pompeium perrexit. kind knights to-Rome against Pompey proceeded Tenuantius rex factus est

XI · TENUANTIUS BECOMES KING

Seven years later Cassibellaunus dies and is buried at York. Tenuantius, duke of Cornwall, succeeds, since Androgeus has gone to Rome with Caesar. His son Kymbelinus, raised by Augustus, pays the tribute freely, and in his days the Lord Jesus Christ is born.

Cumque postmodum septem anni præteriissent, defunctus and-when afterward seven years had-passed died est Cassibellaunus, et in urbe Eboraco sepultus. Cui has Cassibellaunus and in the-city York buried to-whom successit Tenuantius dux Cornubiæ, frater Androgei. Nam succeeded Tenuantius duke of-Cornwall brother of-Androgeus for Androgeus Romam cum Cæsare profectus fuerat. Diadematē Androgeus to-Rome with Caesar set-out had with-the-diadem igitur insignitus Tenuantius regnum cum diligentia obtinuit. therefore marked Tenuantius the-kingdom with diligence held Erat ipse bellicosus vir: et qui vigorem justitiæ colebat. was he-himself a-warlike man and who the-vigor of-justice cultivated Post illum promotus est ad culmen regale Kymbelinus filius after him advanced was to the-peak royal Kymbelinus son suus, miles strenuus: quem Augustus Cæsar nutriverat. Hic bis-own a-knight vigorous whom Augustus Caesar had-reared this-one in tantam amicitiam Romanorum inciderat ut cum posset into so-great friendship of-the-Romans had-fallen that though he-could tributum eorum detinere, gratis impendebat. In diebus illis the-tribute their withhold freely he-paid in days those natus est dominus noster Jesus Christus, cujus precioso born was Lord our Jesus Christ whose by-precious sanguine redemptum est humanum genus: quod anteacto blood redeemed was the-human race which in-former tempore dæmonum catena obligabatur. time of-the-demons by-the-chain was-bound

Claudius Imperator Britanniam adit

XII · THE EMPEROR CLAUDIUS COMES TO BRITAIN

Kymbelinus reigns ten years and leaves the kingdom to his elder son Guiderius, who refuses the Romans their tribute. The emperor Claudius comes with his commander Levis Hamo. He lands at Porchester and begins to wall up its gates to starve the citizens.

Kymbelinus ergo cum Britanniam decem annis gubernasset, Kymbelinus therefore when Britain for-ten years he-had-governed genuit duos filios: quorum primogenito nomen Guiderius, begot two sons of-whom to-the-first-born name Guiderius alteri Arviragus. Deinde expletis vitæ suæ diebus, cessit to-the-other Arviragus then fulfilled of-life his-own the-days he-yielded regni gubernaculum Guiderio. Cum ergo tributum quod of-the-kingdom the-helm to-Guiderius when therefore the-tribute which appetebant Romani, ipsis denegaret: supervenit Claudius qui sought the-Romans to-them he-denied came-upon Claudius who in imperium subrogatus fuerat, Aderat cum eo princeps into the-empire substituted had-been was-present with him the-prince militiæ ipsius, qui Britannico vocabulo dicebatur Levis of-the-knighthood his who by-a-British word was-called Levis hamo, cujus consilio prælia quæ gerenda erant tractabantur. hamo whose by-counsel the-battles which to-be-waged were were-handled Hic itaque ut in civitatem Porcestriam applicuit, coëpit this-one and-so when at the-city Porchester he-landed began portas ejus muro præcludere, exitumque civibus abnegare.

the-gates its with-a-wall to-close and-the-exit to-the-citizens to-deny Cupiebat namque ipsos fame affectos, vel ad deditionem he-desired for them by-hunger afflicted either to surrender compellere, vel sine clementia interimere.

to-compel or without clemency to-destroy Hamo Guiderium interficit

XIII · HAMO KILLS GUIDERIUS

Guiderius attacks fiercely and the Romans almost break, but Hamo, who had learned the Britons' tongue and ways growing up in Rome among the British hostages, puts on British arms, comes near the king, and kills him. Guiderius' brother Arviragus takes the king's arms and leads the Britons on as if he were Guiderius. The Romans flee, and Arviragus overtakes Hamo on the shore and kills him at the place called Southampton.

Divulgato ergo Claudii Cæsaris adventu, collegit Guiderius spread-abroad therefore of-Claudius of-Caesar the-arrival gathered Guiderius omnem armatum regni militem: et Romanum exercitum every armed of-the-kingdom knight and the-Roman army petivit. Conserto deinde prælio acerrime cœpit hostes sought joined then battle most-fiercely he-began the-enemies invadere: plus solus gladio suo quam major pars exercitus to-attack more alone with-sword his-own than the-greater part of-the-army sui perimens. Jam Claudius naves petebat: Jam Romani his-own destroying already Claudius the-ships was-seeking already the-Romans pene dissipabantur: cum versutus Hamo projectis illis armis almost were-scattered when the-crafty Hamo thrown-away those arms quibus indutus fuerat, arma Britannica cepit: et quasi with-which clothed he-had-been the-arms British took and as-if Britannus contra suos pugnabat. Deinde hortabatur Britones a-Briton against his-own fought then he-exhorted the-Britons ad insequendum: festinatum triumphum promittens. Didicerat to pursuing a-bastened triumph promising he-had-learned enim linguam eorum et mores: qui inter Britannos obsides for the-tongue their and the-ways who among the-Britons hostages Romæ nutritus fuerat: exin accessit paulatim ipse juxta at-Rome reared had-been thence approached little-by-little he-himself beside regem, adituque invento ipsum nihil tale timentem mucrone the-king and-an-approach found him nothing such fearing with-the-blade suffocavit: elapsus deinde inter hostium cuneos, sese cum choked having-slipped then among of-the-enemies the-wedges himself with nefanda victoria inter suos recepit. At Arviragus ejusdem abominable victory among his-own withdrew but Arviragus of-the-same frater ut ipsum peremptum inspexit, confestim deposuit arma the-brother when him destroyed he-saw forthwith laid-down arms sua, armisque regis indutus hinc et inde Britones his-own and-with-the-arms of-the-king clothed on-this-side and on-that the-Britons ad perstandum animabat: quasi ipse Guiderius fuisset, qui to persevering encouraged as-if he-himself Guiderius had-been who nescientes regis casum, monitu ejus resistebant, pugnabant, not-knowing of-the-king the-fate by-the-warning his resisted fought stragemque non minimam inferebant. Ad ultimum dilabuntur and-slaughter not least inflicted at the-last scatter Romani in duas partes, campum turpiter deserentes. Cæsar the-Romans into two parts the-field shamefully deserting Caesar namque in una parte tutamina navium petebat: Hamo autem for in one part the-safety of-the-ships sought Hamo moreover nemora: quia non habebat spatium naves adeundi. Arviragus the-forests because not he-had space the-ships of-approaching Arviragus ergo arbitrans Claudium cum eo diffugere, festinavit eum therefore thinking Claudius with him to-flee hurried him sequi, nec cessavit de loco in locum sequi donec illos occupavit to-follow nor ceased from place into place to-follow until them he-overtook super litus maris, quod nunc de nomine ejusdem Hamonis upon the-shore of-the-sea which now from the-name of-the-same of-Hamo Hamtonia nuncupatur. Erat ibi portus applicantibus navibus Southampton is-called there-was there a-port for-landing ships congruus: navesque mercatorum appulsæ quiescebant. Eas fitting and-the-ships of-merchants landed lay-at-rest them ergo cum ingredi affectasset Hamo, supervenit ex improvise therefore when to-enter he-had-desired Hamo came-upon from unforeseen Arviragus, ipsumque subito interfecit. Portus autem ille ab illo Arviragus and-him suddenly killed the-port moreover that from that tempore usque in hodiernum diem portus Hamonis appellatur. time all-the-way into today's day the-port of-Hamo is-called Arviragus, rex factus, Claudio imperatori se submittit

XIV · ARVIRAGUS, MADE KING, SUBMITS TO CLAUDIUS

Claudius takes Porchester and besieges Arviragus in Winchester. Fearing the Britons' boldness, he offers his daughter in marriage if Arviragus will hold Britain under Rome. The nobles advise that there is no disgrace in submitting to the masters of the world, and Arviragus agrees, then helps Claudius subdue the Orkneys.

Interea Claudius resociatis sociis oppugnabat prædictam meanwhile Claudius regathered comrades assaulted the-aforsaid civitatem, quæ tunc Kaerperis, nunc autem Portcestria vocatur. city which then Kaerperis now moreover Porchester is-called Nec mora, mœnia ejus diruit: civibusque subactis insecutus nor delay the-walls its he-pulled-down and-the-citizens subdued pursued est Arviragum jam in Wintoniam ingressum. Postmodum he-has Arviragus already into Winchester having-entered afterward obsedit civitatem, diversisque machinationibus illam opprimere he-besieged the-city and-with-various contrivances it to-crush nitebatur. Arviragus vero ut sese obsessum inspexit, consociavit he-strove Arviragus but when himself besieged he-saw joined catervas suas, et apertis portis ad præliandum egressus est. bands his-own and opened the-gates for fighting gone-out has Cumque irruptionem facere affectasset, direxit Claudius nuncios and-when an-inroad to-make he-had-desired directed Claudius messengers ad ipsum mandans ut concordiam inirent. Quippe timebat to him commanding that concord they-should-enter indeed he-feared regis audaciam, Britonumque fortitudinem, præferebatque of-the-king the-boldness and-of-the-Britons the-strength and-he-preferred ipsos sensu et sapientia subjugare quam dubium certamen them by-sense and wisdom to-subjugate than a-doubtful contest inire. Mandabat ergo ei concordiam, daturumque se to-enter he-commanded therefore to-him concord and-about-to-give himself promittebat filiam suam, si tantummodo regnum Britanniae he-promised daughter his-own if only the-kingdom of-Britain sub Romana potestate recognosceret. Postpositis ergo under Roman power he-would-acknowledge set-aside therefore debellationibus, suaserunt majores natu Arvirago promissionibus the-warrings urged the-greater by-birth to-Arviragus to-the-promises Claudii acquiescere. Dicebant autem non esse ei dedecori of-Claudius to-assent they-said moreover not to-be to-him for-a-disgrace subditum esse Romanis, cum totius orbis imperio subject to-be to-the-Romans since of-the-whole world of-the-empire potirentur. His vero et pluribus aliis mitigatus, consiliis they-possessed by-these indeed and by-many other softened to-the-counsels eorum paruit: et subjectionem Cæsari fecit. Mox Claudius of-them he-obeyed and subjection to-Caesar made soon Claudius propter filiam suam Romam misit, et auxilio Arviragi for daughter his-own to-Rome sent and with-the-help of-Arviragus usus, Orcades et provinciales insulas potestati suæ submitit. having-used the-Orkneys and the-provincial islands to-power his-own subjected

Arviragus Claudii filiam Genuissam matrimonio ducit: Claudius Romam redit

XV · ARVIRAGUS MARRIES GENUISSA

Claudius' daughter Genuissa arrives, so beautiful that Arviragus loves her above all things. To mark the marriage, Claudius builds Gloucester on the Severn, which some say is named after his son Gloius. Claudius returns to Rome, and Peter the Apostle founds the church of Antioch and sends Mark to Egypt.

Emensa deinde hyeme, redierunt legati cum filia, eamque having-passed then the-winter returned the-envoys with the-daughter and-her patri tradiderunt. Erat autem nomen puellæ Genuissa, to-the-father handed-over was moreover the-name of-the-girl Genuissa eratque tanta ejus pulchritudo, ut aspicientes in admirationem and-was so-great her beauty that the-beholders into wonder duceret. Et ut maritali lege copulata fuit, tanto fervore she-led and when by-marital law joined she-was with-so-great fervor amoris succendit regem ita ut ipsam solam cunctis rebus of-love she-inflamed the-king so that her alone to-all things præferret. Unde locum quo ei primum nupserat celebrem he-preferred whence the-place where to-him first she-had-married famous esse volens, suggestit Claudio ut ædificaret in illo civitatem, to-be wishing he-suggested to-Claudius that he-should-build in it a-city quæ memoriam tantarum nuptiarum in futura tempora which the-memory of-so-great nuptials into future times præberet. Paruit ergo Claudius, præcepitque fieri urbem might-offer obeyed therefore Claudius and-ordered to-be-made a-city quæ de nomine ejus Kaerglou, id est Gloucesteria nuncupata which from the-name his Kaerglou that is Gloucester called usque in hodiernum diem, in confinio Demetiæ et Loegriæ all-the-way into today's day on the-border of-Demetia and of-Loegria super ripam Sabrinæ sita est. Quidam vero dicunt ipsam upon the-bank of-the-Severn situated is some indeed say it nomen traxisse a Gloio duce, quem Claudius in illa the-name to-have-drawn from Gloius the-duke whom Claudius in it generavit, cui post Arviragum gubernaculum Demetici begot to-whom after Arviragus the-helm of-the-Demetian ducatus cessit. Ædificata igitur urbe, ac pacificata insula, dukedom fell built therefore the-city and pacified the-island rediit Claudius Romam, regimenque provincialium insularum returned Claudius to-Rome and-the-rule of-the-provincial islands Arvirago permisit. Eodem tempore Petrus Apostolus to-Arviragus he-entrusted at-the-same time Peter the-Apostle Antiochenam ecclesiam fundavit: Romamque deinde veniens, the-Antiochene church founded and-to-Rome then coming tenuit ibidem episcopatum: misitque Marcum Evangelistam held there the-bishopric and-sent Mark the-Evangelist in Ægyptum prædicare Evangelium quod scripserat. into Egypt to-preach the-Gospel which he-had-written Arviragus bellum contra Romanos renovat: contra quem Vespasianus proficiscitur

XVI · ARVIRAGUS RENEWS THE WAR

Grown powerful, Arviragus spurns Roman rule, and Vespasian is sent against him. Barred from Richborough, Vespasian lands at Totnes and besieges Exeter, and after an indecisive battle Queen Genuissa makes peace between them. In old age Arviragus loves the Senate and rules justly, Juvenal names him in a poem, and he is buried at Gloucester.

At Arviragus, ut Claudius recessit, cœpit sensum et but Arviragus when Claudius withdrew began sense and probitatem habere: civitates et oppida reædificare: populumque prowess to-have the-cities and towns to-rebuild and-the-people regni tanta justitia coercere, ita ut longe positus of-the-kingdom with-so-great justice to-restrain so that far to-placed regibus timori esset. Hinc autem subsequente superbia, kings for-fear he-was hence moreover following pride despexit Romanam potestatem, neque senatui voluit diutius he-despised the-Roman power nor to-the-senate he-wished longer subjectionem tenere: sed sibimet omnia vendicavit. Quo audito, subjection to-hold but to-himself all-things he-claimed which heard missus est Vespasianus a Claudio, ut Arviragum vel sent was Vespasian by Claudio so-that Arviragus either pacificaret vel Romanæ subjectioni restitueret. Cum igitur he-might-reconcile or to-Roman subjection might-restore when therefore in Rutupi portum applicare incœpisset Vespasianus, obviavit into of-Rutupi the-port to-land had-begun Vespasian met ei Arviragus, prohibuitque ne portum ingrederetur. Tantam him Arviragus and-forbade lest the-port he-should-enter so-great namque multitudinem armatorum conduxerat, ut Romanis for a-multitude of-armed-men he-had-brought that to-the-Romans terrori esset, nec ob ejus irruptionem terram adire for-terror he-was nor on-account-of his inroad the-land to-approach auderent. Retraxit itaque se Vespasianus a portu illo, they-dared drew-back and-so himself Vespasian from port that retortisque velis in Totonesium littus applicuit. Nactus deinde and-turned-back sails on the-Totnes shore landed having-got then tellurem, Kaerpen-Huelgoit, quæ Exonia vocatur, obsessurus the-land Kaerpen-Huelgoit which Exeter is-called about-to-besiege eandem adivit. Cumque eam septem diebus obsedisset, the-same he-went-to and-when it for-seven days he-had-besieged supervenit Arviragus cum exercitu suo, præliumque commisit. came-upon Arviragus with army his-own and-battle joined Die illa valde laceratus fuit utrorumque exercitus, sed neuter on-day that greatly torn was of-both the-army but neither victoria potitus est. Mane autem facto, mediante Genuissa of-the-victory gained has morning moreover made mediating Genuissa regina concordēs effecti sunt duces, et commilitones suos the-queen in-concord made were the-leaders and comrades their-own in Hiberniam ablegaverunt. Hyeme vere emensa Vespasianus into Ireland they-sent-off the-winter truly having-passed Vespasian Romam rediit, et Arviragus in Britannia remansit. Deinde to-Rome returned and Arviragus in Britain remained then in senectutem vergens, cœpit senatum diligere, regnumque into old-age declining he-began the-senate to-love and-kingdom suum cum pace et tranquillitate tractare, leges etiam veteris his-own with peace and tranquillity to-handle the-laws also of-old traditionis confirmare, et novas invenire, maxima cuique tradition to-confirm and new to-devise greatest to-every probo donaria impertiens. Fama igitur ejus per totam good-man gifts imparting the-fame therefore his through the-whole Europam divulgata, diligebant eum Romani et timebant, ita Europe spread-abroad loved him the-Romans and feared so ut præ omnibus regibus sermo de eo Romæ fieret. Unde that before all kings talk about him at-Rome was-made whence Juvenalis cæcum quendam Neroni dixisse in libro suo Juvenal blind a-certain-man to-Nero to-have-said in book his-own commemorat, cum de capto rhumbo loqueretur, inquires, records when about the-caught turbot he-was-speaking saying Regem aliquem capies aut de temone Britanno a-king some you-will-capture or from the-pole British Decidet Arviragus.

will-fall Arviragus

Nullus eo in bello ferocior fuit, nullus pace mitior, nullus no-one than-him in war fiercer was no-one in-peace milder no-one jocosior, nullus in dandis muneribus profusior. At ut dies more-jesting no-one in giving gifts more-lavish but when the-days vitæ suæ explevit, sepultus est Claudio-cestriæ, in quodam of-life his-own he-fulfilled buried he-was at-Gloucester in a-certain templo quod in honorem Claudii dedicaverat et construxerat.

temple which in honor of-Claudius he-had-dedicated and had-built Rodric, dux Pictorum a Mario devincitur

XVII · MARIUS DEFEATS RODRIC, LEADER OF THE PICTS

Arviragus' son Marius, a wise king, defeats and kills Rodric, king of the Picts, who has landed from Scythia. He raises a stone in Westmorland to mark the victory and gives the defeated Picts Caithness to live in. Refused British wives, they take wives from Ireland, and Marius keeps the peace and pays the Romans their tribute.

Successit ei in regnum filius ejus Marius, vir miræ succeeded to-him in the-kingdom son his Marius a-man of-wonderful prudentiæ et sapientiæ. Regnante postmodum illo, quidam prudence and wisdom reigning afterward him a-certain rex Pictorum, nomine Rodric, de Scythia cum magna classe king of-the-Picts by-name Rodric from Scythia with a-great fleet veniens, applicuit in Aquilonarem partem Britannia, quæ coming landed in the-northern part of-Britain which Albania appellatur, cœpitque provinciam illam vastare. Collecto Albany is-called and-began province that to-lay-waste gathered igitur populo suo petivit eum Marius, illatisque præliis therefore people his-own sought him Marius and-brought-on battles ipsum interfecit, et victoria potitus est. Deinde erexit him killed and of-the-victory gained has then he-raised lapidem in signum triumphi sui, in provincia, quæ postea a-stone as a-sign of-triumph his-own in the-province which afterward de nomine ejus Westimaria dicta fuit: in quo inscriptus from the-name his Westmorland called was on which inscribed titulus memoriam ejus usque in hodiernum diem testatur. the-title the-memory his all-the-way into today's day testifies Perempto vero Rodric, dedit devicto populo, qui cum eo destroyed indeed Rodric he-gave to-the-defeated people which with him venerat, partem Albania ad inhabitandum, quæ Cathenesia had-come a-part of-Albany for inhabiting which Caithness vocatur. Erat autem deserta, nullo habitatore multis diebus is-called it-was moreover deserted with-no inhabitant for-many days inculta. Cumque uxores non habentes, filias et cognatas untilled and-when wives not having the-daughters and kinswomen Britonum ab illis peterent, dedignati sunt Britones hujusmodi of-the-Britons from them they-asked disdained have the-Britons of-this-kind populo natas suas maritare: at illi ut repulsam passi to-a-people daughters their-own to-marry but they when refusal suffered fuerunt, transfretaverunt in Hiberniam, duxeruntque ex patria had crossed into Ireland and-led from country illa mulieres, ex quibus coadunata sobole multitudinem suam that women from whom with-gathered offspring the-multitude their-own auxerunt. Sed hæc hactenus: cum non proposuerim tractare they-increased but these-things thus-far since not I-have-proposed to-treat historiam eorum, sive Scotorum, qui ex illis et Hibernensibus the-history of-them or of-the-Scots who from them and the-Irish originem duxerunt. At Marius, cum totam insulam in origin drew but Marius when the-whole island in summa pace composuisset, cœpit amorem cum Romano highest peace he-had-settled began love with the-Roman populo habere, tributa solvens, quæ ab ipso exigebantur: people to-have tributes paying which from him were-exacted exemplo etiam patris incitatus, justitiam, legem, et by-the-example also of-the-father roused justice law and pacem, et omnia honesta per regnum suum exercebat. peace and all honorable-things through kingdom his-own he-exercised Coillus regnum suscipit

XVIII · COILLUS TAKES THE KINGDOM

Marius' son Coillus, raised at Rome, is a friend of the Romans. Seeing the whole world subject to them, he pays the tribute and keeps the peace. No king shows the nobles greater reverence or more generous gifts.

Cum autem vitæ suæ cursum explevisset, filius ejus, nomine when moreover of-life his-own the-course he-had-fulfilled son his by-name Coillus, regni gubernaculum suscepit. Hic ab infantia Coillus of-the-kingdom the-helm took-up this-one from infancy Romæ nutritus fuerat, moresque Romanorum edoctus in at-Rome reared had-been and-the-ways of-the-Romans taught into maximam ipsorum amicitiam inciderat. Sed et ipse eis greatest their friendship had-fallen but also he-himself to-them tributum reddebat, adversari diffugiens: quippe videbat totum tribute rendered to-oppose shunning indeed he-saw the-whole orbem illis subditum, eorumque potestatem quosque pagos et world to-them subject and-their power all districts and quamque provinciam superare. Solvens ergo quod exigebatur, every province to-overcome paying therefore what was-exacted in pace quod possidebat obtinuit. Nullus in regibus majorem in peace what he-possessed he-beld no-one among kings greater reverentiam nobilibus regni præstabat: quia ipsos aut in reverence to-the-nobles of-the-kingdom offered because them either in pace manere permittebat, aut assiduis donariis munerabat. peace to-remain he-allowed or with-constant gifts he-presented

Lucius rex primus Christianus

XIX · LUCIUS, THE FIRST CHRISTIAN KING

Coillus' only son Lucius imitates his father's goodness so closely that all think him Coillus himself; and, wishing his end to surpass his beginning, writes to Pope Eleutherius asking for Christianity. The pope sends the teachers Faganus and Duvianus, who baptize the king, and the peoples follow. The twenty-eight flamens and three archflamens become bishops and archbishops, with metropolitan sees at London, York, and the City of the Legions.

Natus est autem Coillo filius unicus, cui nomen erat born was moreover to-Coillus a-son only to-whom name was Lucius: qui cum defuncto patre, regni diademate Lucius who when having-died the-father of-the-kingdom with-the-diadem insignitus fuisset, omnes actus bonitatis illius imitabatur, marked had-been all the-acts of-goodness his imitated ita ut ipse Coillus a cunctis censeretur. Exitum quoque so that he-himself Coillus by all was-thought the-end also suum præferre volens principio, epistolas suas Eleutherio his-own to-surpass wishing to-the-beginning letters his-own to-Eleutherius Papæ direxit, petens ut ab eo Christianismum reciperet. the-Pope directed asking that from him Christianity he-might-receive Serenaverant enim mentem ejus miracula, quæ tyrones had-made-serene for the-mind his the-miracles which the-recruits Christi per diversas nationes faciebant. Unde in amorem of-Christ through various nations did whence into love veræ fidei anhelans, piæ petitionis effectum consecutus of-the-true faith panting of-the-pious petition the-effect obtained est. Siquidem beatus pontifex comperta ejus devotione, duos he-has indeed blessed the-pontiff discovered his devotion two religiosissimos doctores, Faganum et Duvianum, ad illum most-religious teachers Faganus and Duvianus to him misit, qui verbi Dei incarnationem prædicantes, ipsum sent who of-the-Word of-God the-incarnation preaching him baptisate sacro abluerunt, et ad Christum converterunt. with-baptism holy washed and to Christ converted Nec mora, concurrentes undique nationum populi, regis nor delay running-together from-everywhere of-the-nations the-peoples of-the-king exemplum insequuntur, eodem lavacro mundati, cœlestique the-example follow by-the-same washing cleansed and-to-the-heavenly regno restituuntur. Beati ergo doctores cum per totam kingdom are-restored the-blessed therefore teachers when through the-whole fere insulam paganismum delevisent, templa quæ in almost island paganism they-had-wiped-out the-temples which in honore plurimorum deorum fundata fuerant, uni Deo honor of-very-many gods founded had-been to-the-one God ejusque sanctis dedicaverunt, diversisque ordinatorum cœtibus and-bis to-the-saints they-dedicated and-with-various of-ordained-men gatherings repleverunt. Fuerunt tunc in Britannia octo et viginti Flamines, filled there-were then in Britain eight and twenty Flamens nec non et tres Archiflamines, quorum potestati ceteri nor not also three Archflamens whose to-power the-other judices morum atque phanatici submittebantur. Hos etiam judges of-morals and temple-priests were-subjected these also ex præcepto Apostolici idololatriæ eripuerunt: et ubi erant by the-order of-the-Apostolic from-idolatry they-snatched and where there-were Flamines, Episcopos, ubi erant Archiflamines, Archiepiscopos Flamens Bishops where there-were Archflamens Archbishops posuerunt. Sedes autem Archiflaminum in tribus nobilioribus they-placed the-seats moreover of-the-Archflamens in three more-noble civitatibus fuerant, Londoniis videlicet, atque Eboraci, et in cities had-been at-London namely and at-York and in urbe Legionum, quam super Oscam fluvium in Glamorgantia the-City of-the-Legions which upon the-Usk river in Glamorgan veteres muri et ædificia sitam fuisse testantur. His the-old walls and buildings situated to-have-been testify in-these ergo tribus evacuata superstitione, octo et viginti Episcopi therefore three emptied the-superstition eight and twenty Bishops subduntur, diversis quoque parochiis, subjacuit Metropolitano are-subjected various also parishes lay-subject to-the-Metropolitan Eboracensi, Deira et Albania, quas magnum flumen Humbri of-York Deira and Albany which the-great river of-the-Humber a Loegria secernit. Londoniensi vero Metropolitano submissa from Loegria separates to-the-London indeed Metropolitan submitted est Loegria et Cornubia. Has duas provincias sejungit Sabrina was Loegria and Cornwall these two provinces separates the-Severn a Cambria, id est, Guallia, quæ urbi Legionum subjacuit. from Cambria that is Wales which to-the-City of-the-Legions lay-subject Episcopi duo, qui in Britanniam venerant, Romam redeunt

XX · THE TWO BISHOPS RETURN TO ROME

The two teachers return to Rome, have their work confirmed by the pope, and come back with many companions. Their teaching quickly strengthens the Britons in the faith. Their names and deeds are in Gildas' book on the victory of Aurelius Ambrosius, which Geoffrey will not retell in a lower style.

Denique restauratis omnibus, redierunt Antistites Romam: et finally restored all-things returned the-prelates to-Rome and quæ fecerant a beatissimo Papa confirmari impetraverunt. what they-had-done by the-most-blessed Pope to-be-confirmed obtained Confirmatione vero facta, reversi sunt in Britanniam the-confirmation indeed made returned they-have into Britain compluribus aliis comitati: quorum doctrina gens Britonum by-very-many others accompanied whose by-teaching the-people of-the-Britons in fide Christi in brevi corroborata fuit. Eorum nomina et in the-faith of-Christ in short-time strengthened was their names and actus in libro reperiuntur, quem Gildas de victoria Aurelii acts in the-book are-found which Gildas about the-victory of-Aurelius Ambrosii inscripsit. Quod autem ipse tam lucido tractatu Ambrosius inscribed what moreover he-himself so in-a-lucid treatise paraverat, nullatenus opus fuit ut inferiori stylo renovaretur. had-prepared by-no-means need was that in-a-lower style it-should-be-renewed

BOOK V

Lucius multas possessiones ecclesiis donat: sine natis moritur

I • LUCIUS ENDOWS THE CHURCHES

Rejoicing in the spread of the true faith, Lucius gives the churches the possessions and lands that belonged to the idols' temples, adds more fields and dwellings, and raises them with every liberty. He dies at Gloucester in the year 156 and is buried in the church of the first see. He leaves no heir, and the Britons fall into dissension while Roman power weakens.

Interea gloriosus ille rex Lucius, cum intra regnum suum meanwhile glorious that king Lucius when within kingdom his-own cultum veræ fidei magnificatum esse vidisset, maximo the-worship of-the-true faith magnified to-be he-had-seen with-greatest gaudio fluctuans, possessiones et territoria quæ prius templa joy surging the-possessiones and territories which before the-temples idolorum possidebant, in meliorem usum vertens, ecclesiis of-the-idols possessed into a-better use turning to-the-churches fidelium permanere concessit. Et quia maiorem honorem of-the-faithful to-remain be-granted and because greater honor ipsis impendere debuerat, augmentavit illas amplioribus agris on-them to-bestow be-ought he-increased them with-ampler fields et mansionibus, omnique libertate sublimavit. Inter hæc et and dwellings and-with-every liberty raised among these and ceteros propositi sui actus in urbe Claudiocestriæ ab hac vita the-other of-purpose his-own acts in the-city of-Gloucester from this life migravit, et in ecclesia primæ sedis honorifice sepultus est, he-departed and in the-church of-the-first see honorably buried he-was Anno ab incarnatione domini centesimo quinquagesimo sexto. in-the-year from the-incarnation of-the-Lord hundredth fiftieth sixth Caruit sobole quæ sibi succederet: unde defuncto illo dissidium he-lacked offspring which to-him might-succeed whence having-died him dissension inter Britones ortum fuit, et Romana potestas infirmata. among the-Britons arisen has and the-Roman power weakened Severus senator partem Britanniae sibi submittit: cum Fulgenio pugnat

II • SEVERUS AND FULGENIUS

The Senate sends the senator Severus with two legions; he subdues part of Britain, drives the rest beyond Deira into Albany under Fulgenius, and builds a rampart from sea to sea between them. Fulgenius returns from Scythia with the Picts and besieges York, where Severus is killed and Fulgenius mortally wounded. The Romans make Geta king, the Britons his brother Bassianus, born of a British mother, and in the brothers' fight Geta is killed.

Cumque id Romæ nunciatum fuisset, legavit Senatus Severum and-when this at-Rome announced had-been dispatched the-Senate Severus senatorem, duasque legiones cum illo, ut patria Romanæ the-senator and-two legions with him so-that the-country to-the-Roman potestati restitueretur. Mox ut appulsus fuit, prælium power might-be-restored soon when landed he-was battle commisit cum Britonibus, partemque sibi submittit: partem he-joined with the-Britons and-a-part to-himself subjected the-part vero illam quam subjugare nequibat, diris debellationibus indeed that which to-subjugate he-could-not with-dire warrings infestare laboravit; ita ut eam trans Deiram in Albaniam to-harass he-labored so that it beyond Deira into Albany fugaret. At illa duce Fulgenio omni nisu resistebat, he-put-to-flight but it as-leader Fulgenius with-all effort resisted sæpiusque stragem maximam et concivibus et Romanis and-more-often slaughter greatest both on-fellow-citizens and on-Romans inferebat. Conducebat autem in auxilium sibi quoscunque inflicted he-brought moreover to help to-himself whatever insulanos populos inveniebat: et sic multotiens cum victoria island peoples he-found and thus many-times with victory redibat. Irruptionem ergo ejus graviter ferens imperator, he-retained the-inroad therefore his heavily bearing the-emperor jussit construi vallum inter Deiram et Albaniam, ut ordered to-be-built a-rampart between Deira and Albany so-that impetum ejus propius accedere prohiberet. Communicato the-attack his nearer to-approach it-might-forbid shared ergo sumptu fecerunt illud a mari usque ad mare: therefore the-expense they-made it from sea all-the-way to sea quod multo tempore post hostium accessus detinuit. At which by-much time afterward of-the-enemies the-approach held-back but Fulgenius cum diutius resistere nequivisset, transfretavit Fulgenius when longer to-resist he-had-been-unable crossed in Scythiam, ut Pictorum auxilio dignitati restitueretur. into Scythia so-that of-the-Picts with-the-help to-dignity he-might-be-restored Cumque ibi omnem juventutem patriæ collegisset, reversus and-when there all the-youth of-the-country he-had-gathered returned est cum maximo navigio in Britanniam, atque Eboracum he-has with a-very-great fleet into Britain and York obsedit. Quod cum per ceteras nationes divulgatum fuisset, besieged which when through the-other nations spread-abroad had-been maxima pars Britonum Severum deseruit, et ad Fulgenium the-greatest part of-the-Britons Severus deserted and to Fulgenius ivit. Nec ob id ab incœptis suis destitit Severus. Sed went nor on-account-of this from undertakings his-own desisted Severus but convocatis Romanis, ceterisque Britonibus qui ipsi adhæserunt, called-together the-Romans and-the-other Britons who to-him clung obsidionem petivit, et cum Fulgenio dimicavit. Sed cum the-siege he-sought and with Fulgenius fought but when pugnam acrius confecisset, interfectus est Severus cum multis the-fight more-fiercely he-had-waged killed was Severus with many suorum, et Fulgenius letaliter vulneratus est. Exin Eboraci of-his-own and Fulgenius mortally wounded was thence at-York sepultus est: quam urbem legiones ejus obtinuerunt. Reliquit buried he-was which city legions his held left ipse duos filios, Bassianum et Getam: quorum Geta Romana he-himself two sons Bassianus and Geta of-whom Geta by-a-Roman matre genitus erat, Bassianus vero Britannica. Defuncto igitur mother born was Bassianus but by-a-British having-died therefore patre sublimaverunt Romani Getam in regem: faventes illi, the-father raised the-Romans Geta into king favoring him quia ex utraque parte Romanus fuerat. Quod abnegantes because from each side Roman he-had-been which denying Britones Bassianum elegerunt: quia ex materno sanguine ipsis the-Britons Bassianus chose because by maternal blood to-them conjunctus fuerat. Proinde commiserunt fratres pugnam. joined he-had-been accordingly joined the-brothers a-fight Unde Geta interficitur, Bassianus vero regno potitur. whence Geta is-killed Bassianus but of-the-kingdom gains-possession Carausius solium Britanniae usurpat

III · CARAUSIUS SEIZES THE THRONE OF BRITAIN

Carausius, a youth of the lowest birth, persuades the Senate to let him guard the British coast with a fleet. He ravages the shores and islands, gathers a host of men greedy for plunder, and asks the Britons to make him king. He bribes the Picts to turn on Bassianus in battle, kills him, takes the throne, and settles the Picts in Albany.

Eo tempore fuerat in Britannia juvenis quidam, nomine at-that time there-had-been in Britain a-youth certain by-name Caraüsius, ex infima gente creatus: qui cum probitatem Carausius from the-lowest race begotten who when prowess suam in multis debellationibus suis examinasset, profectus his-own in many warrings his-own he-had-tested set-out est Romam, petivitque licentiam a senatu ut maritima he-has to-Rome and-sought leave from the-senate that the-seacoast Britanniae ab incursione barbarica navigiis tueretur: quod of-Britain from incursion barbarian with-fleets he-might-guard but si sibi concederetur, promittebat se tot et tanta if to-him it-were-granted he-promised himself so-many and so-great-things adepturum, quibus Rempublicam magis augmentaret, quam about-to-gain by-which the-Republic more he-would-increase than si ipsi regnum Britanniae traderetur. Cumque senatum if to-him the-kingdom of-Britain were-handed-over and-when the-senate promissis suis illisisset, impetravit quod poposcerat, et with-promises his-own he-had-deceived he-obtained what he-had-demanded and cum sigillatis chartis in Britanniam rediit. Mox celere with sealed charters into Britain returned soon swiftly collectis navibus, ascivit magnam virtutem juventutis, et gathered ships he-summoned a-great force of-youth and mare ingressus est, et circuevit omnia littora regni, the-sea entered he-has and went-round all the-shores of-the-kingdom maximum tumultum per populum faciens. Interea in greatest tumult through the-people making meanwhile upon comprovinciales insulas appulsus, agros populando, et civitates the-neighboring islands landed the-fields by-ravaging and the-cities et urbes diruendo, incolis earum omnia sua and towns by-pulling-down from-the-inhabitants of-them all their-own-things eripiebat. Sic ergo ipso agente, confluebant ad illum he-snatched thus therefore him acting flowed-together to him quicumque in aliena anhelabant: ita ut in brevi tantum whoever for others'-goods panted so that in short-time so-great haberet exercitum, quanto nullus vicinus princeps resistere he-had an-army to-which no neighboring prince to-resist quivisset. Ob hoc itaque tumidum habens animum: could on-account-of this and-so swollen having mind dixit Britonibus, ut sese sibi facerent regem, et he-said to-the-Britons that him for-themselves they-should-make king and ipse interfectis atque exterminatis Romanis, totam insulam he-himself killed and driven-out the-Romans the-whole island a barbarica gente liberaret. Quod cum impetrasset, dimicavit from the-barbarian race would-free which when he-had-obtained he-fought confestim cum Bassiano, et eum interfecit, regnique forthwith with Bassianus and him killed and-of-the-kingdom gubernaculum suscepit. Prodiderant enim Bassianum Picti, the-helm took-up had-betrayed for Bassianus the-Picts quos dux Fulgenius matris suæ frater in Britanniam whom duke Fulgenius of-mother his-own the-brother into Britain conduxerat. Nam dum ei auxiliari debuissent, promissis et had-brought for while him to-help they-ought-to-have by-the-promises and donariis Carausii corrupti, in ipso prælio diverterunt se gifts of-Carausius corrupted in the-very battle turned-aside themselves a Bassiano, et in commilitones ejus irruerunt. Unde from Bassianus and upon the-comrades his rushed whence stupefacti ceteri, cum ignorarent qui socii essent, quis stunned the-others since they-did-not-know who comrades were who hostis, ocyus dilabuntur: et victoria cessit Carausio. Qui ut enemy more-swiftly scatter and the-victory fell to-Carausius who when triumphum habuit, dedit Pictis locum mansionis in Albania, triumph he-had he-gave to-the-Picts a-place of-dwelling in Albany ubi cum Britonibus mixti per sequens ævum manserunt. where with the-Britons mingled through the-following age they-remained Allectus trucidato Carausio, ipse ab Asclepiodoto trucidatur

IV · CARAUSIUS, ALLECTUS, AND ASCLEPIODOTUS

The Senate sends Allectus with three legions, and he kills Carausius and oppresses the Britons. They make Asclepiodotus, duke of Cornwall, king, and he defeats and kills Allectus at London. Allectus' colleague Livius Gallus holds the city until the Britons break the walls, and when Gallus surrenders, the Venedotians behead the Romans by a stream later called Nautgallim, or Gallemborne.

Cum igitur invasio Carausii Romæ nuntiata fuisset, when therefore the-invasion of-Carausius at-Rome announced had-been legatum senatus Allectum cum tribus legionibus misit ut as-envoy the-senate Allectus with three legions sent so-that tyrannum interficeret, regnumque Britanniae Romanæ potestati the-tyrant he-should-kill and-the-kingdom of-Britain to-Roman power restitueret. Nec mora, post quam appulsus fuit. præliatus should-restore nor delay after that landed he-was fought est cum Carausio: ipsoque interfecto solium regni he-has with Carausius and-him killed the-throne of-the-kingdom suscepit. Deinde maximam intulit Britonibus cladem, quia took-up then greatest he-brought on-the-Britons disaster because relictā Republica, societati Carausii adhæserant. Britones left the-Republic to-the-alliance of-Carausius they-had-clung the-Britons vero id graviter tolerantes, erexerunt in regem Asclepiodotum but this heavily bearing raised into king Asclepiodotus ducem Cornubiæ: communique assensu facto, persecuti sunt duke of-Cornwall and-common assent made pursued they-have Allectum, et ad prælium provocarunt. Erat ipse tunc Allectus and to battle challenged was he-himself then Londoniis, festumque patriis diis celebrabat. At dum at-London and-a-festival to-the-ancestral gods was-celebrating but when adventum Asclepiodoti comperisset, relicto sacrificio egressus the-arrival of-Asclepiodotus he-had-discovered left the-sacrifice gone-out est cum tota fortitudine sua contra ipsum, acerrimamque he-has with all strength his-own against him and-a-most-fierce pugnam ingressus. Prævaluit autem Asclepiodotus, dissipavitque fight heaped-on prevailed moreover Asclepiodotus and-scattered Allecti turmas, et in fugam coëgit. Et usque insequendo, of-Allectus the-troops and into flight forced and continually by-pursuing multa milia et regem Allectum interemit. Cumque ita ipsi many thousands and the-king Allectus he-destroyed and-when thus to-him cessisset victoria, Livius Gallus, Allecti collega, residuos had-fallen victory Livius Gallus of-Allectus colleague the-remaining Romanos convocavit in urbem clausisque januis tures et Romans called-together into the-city and-shut the-gates the-towers and ceteras munitiones munivit, cogitabatque sic Asclepiodoto other fortifications he-fortified and-he-thought thus Asclepiodotus resistere, vel imminentem necem vitare. Sed Asclepiodotus to-resist or the-impending death to-avoid but Asclepiodotus cum ita factum esse vidisset, obsedit ocyus civitatem, when thus done to-be he-had-seen besieged more-swiftly the-city mandavitque omnibus ducibus Britannię quod Allectum cum and-sent-word to-all the-dukes of-Britain that Allectus with multis militibus interfecerat, obsidebatque Gallum, et reliquias many knights he-had-killed and-was-besieging Gallus and the-remnants Romanorum intra Londonias: unde quosque supplici rogatu of-the-Romans within London whence all with-suppliant entreaty poscebat ut sibi in auxilium festinarent. Leviter enim he-asked that to-him to help they-should-hurry easily for exterminandum erat Romanorum genus ex Britannia, si to-be-exterminated was of-the-Romans the-race from Britain if communi virtute illos inclusos invaderent. Ad edictum itaque with-common valor them shut-in they-should-attack at the-edict and-so ipsius venerunt Demeti, Venedoti, Deiri, et Albani, his came the-Demetians the-Venedotians the-Deirans and the-Albans et quicumque ex genere Britonum erant. Cumque omnes and whoever from the-race of-the-Britons were and-when all ante conspectum ducis convenissent, jussit machinationes before the-sight of-the-duke had-come-together he-ordered contrivances innumeras fieri, et mœnia civitatis prosternere. Paruit innumerable to-be-made and the-walls of-the-city to-lay-low obeyed illico unusquisque fortis et audax, et urbem acerrime on-the-spot each-one brave and bold and the-city most-fiercely invadit. Nec mora, diruerunt muros atque introitum sibi attacks nor delay they-pulled-down the-walls and an-entry for-themselves fecerunt, stragemque Romanis dabant. At Romani cum they-made and-slaughter to-the-Romans they-gave but the-Romans when sese interfici sine intermissione vidissent, suaserunt Gallo themselves to-be-killed without intermission they-had-seen urged Gallus ut sese et ipsos deditioni traderet: et misericordiam that himself and them to-surrender he-should-hand-over and the-mercy Asclepiodoti rogaret, ut vivi abscedere sinerentur. of-Asclepiodotus should-ask that alive to-depart they-might-be-allowed Interfecti enim omnes fere præter unam solam legionem killed for all almost except one single legion fuerunt, quæ adhuc restabat. Assensum ergo præbens Gallus were which still remained assent therefore offering Gallus tradidit se atque suos Asclepiodoto: cumque ipse handed-over himself and his-own to-Asclepiodotus and-when he-himself misericordiam habere de illo tractaret, venerunt Venedoti, mercy to-have about him was-considering came the-Venedotians et facto agmine decollaverunt omnes una die; intra urbem and made a-column beheaded all on-one day within the-city super torrentem, qui postea de nomine ducis, Britannice upon the-torrent which afterward from the-name of-the-duke in-British Nautgallim, Saxonice vero Gallemborne nuncupatus fuit.

 Nautgallim in-Saxon indeed Gallemborne called was Asclepiodotus regnum adipiscitur, Dioclesianus Christianos persequitur

V · DIOCLETIAN'S PERSECUTION

Asclepiodotus is crowned and rules justly for ten years. In his days Diocletian's persecution, carried out by Maximianus Herculus, burns the scriptures, destroys the churches, and kills priests and faithful, almost wiping out Christianity in Britain. God kindles the martyrs as lamps, among them Alban of Verulam, who hides his confessor Amphibalus and gives himself up in his place, and Julius and Aaron of the City of the Legions.

Triumphatis itaque Romanis, cepit Asclepiodotus regni triumphed-over and-so the-Romans took Asclepiodotus of-the-kingdom diadema, et capiti suo, populo annuente, imposuit. Exin the-diadem and on-head his-own the-people nodding placed thence tractavit patriam recta justitia et pace decem annis: he-handled the-country with-right justice and peace for-ten years raptorumque sævitiam atque latronum mucrones coercuit. and-of-plunderers the-savagery and of-robbers the-swords restrained

In diebus ipsius orta est Diocletiani Imperatoris persecutio, in the-days his arisen has of-Diocletian the-Emperor the-persecution qua fere deleta fuit Christianitas in tota insula, quæ by-which almost wiped-out was Christianity in the-whole island which a tempore regis Lucii integra et intemerata permanserat. from the-time of-king Lucius whole and undefiled had-remained Superaverat Maximianus Herculus princeps militiæ had-come-over Maximianus Herculus prince of-the-knighthood prædicti tyranni, cujus imperio omnes subversæ fuerunt of-the-aforesaid tyrant whose by-command all overturned were ecclesiæ, et cunctæ sacræ scripturæ quæ inveniri poterant, the-churches and all sacred scriptures which to-be-found could in mediis foris exustæ. Atque electi sacerdotes cum fidelibus in the-middle forums burned and chosen priests with the-faithful eis subditis trucidati: ita ut agmine denso certatim ad to-them subject slaughtered so that in-a-column dense eagerly to amœna cœlorum regna, quasi ad propriam sedem, festinarent. the-pleasant of-the-heavens kingdoms as-if to their-own seat they-buried Magnificavit ergo misericordiam suam nobis Deus, qui gratuito magnified therefore mercy his-own to-us God who by-free munere persecutionis tempore, ne penitus crassa atræ gift of-persecution in-the-time lest utterly by-the-thick of-black noctis caligine populus Britonum offuscaretur, clarissimas night darkness the-people of-the-Britons should-be-darkened the-brightest lampades sanctorum martyrum accendit: quorum nunc lamps of-the-holy martyrs kindled whose now sepulturæ et passionum loca non minimum divinæ caritatis burials and of-the-passions the-places not the-least of-divine charity ardorem intuentium mentibus incuterent, si non lugubri ardor of-the-beholders into-the-minds would-strike if not by-the-mournful barbarorum divortio civibus adempta fuissent. Inter of-the-barbarians separation from-the-citizens taken-away they-had-been among ceteros utriusque sexus, summa magnanimitate in acie the-others of-each sex with-highest magnanimity in the-battle-line Christi perstantes, passus est Albanus Verolamius, Julius of-Christ persevering suffered has Alban of-Verulam Julius quoque et Aaron urbis Legionum cives: quorum Albanus also and Aaron of-the-City of-the-Legions citizens of-whom Alban caritatis gratia fervens, confessorem suum Amphibalum a of-charity by-the-grace burning confessor his-own Amphibalus by persecutoribus insectatum, et jam jamque comprehendendum the-persecutors hunted and now and-now about-to-be-seized primum in domo suo occuluit, et deinde se discrimini first in house his-own hid and then himself to-the-peril mortis obtulit, imitans in hoc Christum, animam suam pro of-death offered imitating in this Christ soul his-own for ovibus ponentem. Ceteri vero duo inaudita membrorum the-sheep laying-down the-other but two with-unheard-of of-the-limbs discriptione lacerati ad egregias portas Hierusalem absque tearing-apart torn to the-excellent gates of-Jerusalem without cunctamine cum martyrii trophæo convolaverunt. hesitation with of-martyrdom the-trophy flew-together

Coel Asclepiodotum in praelio obruncat, filiam suam Helenam Constantio donat

VI · COEL, HELENA, AND CONSTANTIUS

Coel, duke of Colchester, kills Asclepiodotus and takes the crown, and the Senate sends Constantius, conqueror of Spain. Coel submits on condition that he keep the kingdom; a month later he falls gravely ill and dies within eight days. Constantius takes the crown and marries Coel's daughter Helena, beautiful and learned, and their son Constantine succeeds him at York and rules with justice.

Interea insurrexit in regem Asclepiodotum Coel dux meanwhile rose against the-king Asclepiodotus Coel duke Kaercolvin, id est Colecestræ, et praelio conserto eum peremit, of-Kaercolvin that is of-Colchester and battle joined him destroyed regnique diademate sese insignivit. Cumque id senatui and-of-the-kingdom with-the-diadem himself marked and-when this to-the-senate nunciatum fuisset, gavisı sunt propter regis mortem, announced had-been rejoiced they-have on-account-of of-the-king the-death qui per omnia Romanam potestatem turbaverat. Recolentes who in all-things the-Roman power had-disturbed recalling quoque damnum, quod de amisso regno habuerant, legaverunt also the-loss which from the-lost kingdom they-had-had they-dispatched Constantium senatorem, qui Hispaniam ipsis subdiderat, Constantius the-senator who Spain to-them had-subjected virum sapientem et audacem, et præ ceteris Rempublicam a-man wise and bold and before the-others the-Republic augere laboraverat. Porro Coel Britonum dux, cum ipsius to-increase had-labored further Coel of-the-Britons duke when his adventum comperisset, timuit ei praelia ingerere: quia arrival he-had-discovered feared on-him battles to-beap because fama ipsius afferebat, nullum regem posse illi resistere. Ut the-fame his brought no king to-be-able him to-resist when igitur intra insulam Constantius applicuit, direxit Coel legatos therefore within the-island Constantius landed directed Coel envoys suos ad illum, petivitque pacem et subjectionem promisit his-own to him and-sought peace and subjection promised eo pacto, ut regnum Britanniae possideret, nihilque aliud on-that condition that the-kingdom of-Britain he-should-possess and-nothing else præter solitum tributum Romanæ dignitati solveret. Hoc besides the-customary tribute to-the-Roman dignity should-pay this igitur nunciato, acquievit ei Constantius, pacemque receptis therefore announced assented to-him Constantius and-peace received obsidibus confirmaverunt. Emenso deinde mense gravissima hostages they-confirmed having-passed then a-month a-most-grave infirmitas occupavit Coel, ipsumque intra octo dies morte sickness seized Coel and-him within eight days with-death affecit. Quo defuncto insignivit se Constantius regni afflicted who having-died marked himself Constantius of-the-kingdom diademate: duxitque filiam Coel, cui nomen erat with-the-diadem and-married the-daughter of-Coel to-whom name was Helena. Pulcritudo ejus provinciales puellas superabat, nec Helena the-beauty her the-provincial girls surpassed nor uspiam reperiebatur altera quæ in musicis instrumentis sive anywhere was-found another who in musical instruments or in liberalibus artibus doctior illa censeretur. Caruerat in the-liberal arts more-learned than-she might-be-thought had-lacked pater altera sobole quæ regni solio potiretur. the-father other offspring which of-the-kingdom of-the-throne might-gain-possession Unde eam ita docere laboraverat, ut regnum post patris whence her so to-teach he-had-labored that the-kingdom after of-the-father obitum facilius tractare quiret. Cum igitur illam in the-death more-easily to-handle she-might-be-able when therefore her into thori societatem accepisset Constantius, generavit ex ea of-the-bed the-partnership he-had-received Constantius begot of her filium, vocavitque eum Constantinum. Exin cum undecim a-son and-called him Constantine thence when eleven anni præteriissent, ipse apud Eboracum morti subjacuit, years had-passed he-himself at York to-death lay-subject regnumque filio donavit. Qui ut honoris solio potitus and-the-kingdom to-the-son gave who when of-honor of-the-throne gained est, cœpit infra paucos annos probitatem maximam habere, has began within few years prowess greatest to-have leoninam ferocitatem ostendere, justitiam inter populos lion-like ferocity to-show justice among the-peoples tenere. Latronum rapacitatem hebetabat, tyrannorum sævitiam to-hold of-robbers the-rapacity he-blunted of-tyrants the-savagery conculcabat, pacem ubique renovare studebat. he-trampled peace everywhere to-renew he-was-eager

Romani auxilium a Constantino contra Maxentium implorant

VII · THE ROMANS APPEAL TO CONSTANTINE

The tyrant Maxentius robs the noblest citizens of Rome, and many flee to Constantine in Britain. They stir him against Maxentius and plead that he alone of their race can restore them. They urge him to seek Rome with an army and give them back their possessions, wives, and children.

Ea tempestate erat quidam tyrannus Romæ, Maxentius at-that time was a-certain tyrant at-Rome Maxentius nomine, qui quoque nobiles quosque probissimos cives by-name who also the-nobles all the-most-upright citizens exhæredare conabatur, pessimaque tyrannide Rempubicam to-disinherit tried and-with-the-worst tyranny the-Republic opprimebat. Incumbente igitur ipsius sævitia, diffugiebant crushed pressing therefore his savagery fled exterminati ad Constantinum in Britanniam, et ab ipso banished to Constantine into Britain and by him honorifice excipiebantur. Denique cum multi tales ad eum honorably were-received finally when many such to him confluxissent, incitaverunt eum in odium adversus prædictum had-flowed-together they-roused him into hatred against the-aforesaid tyrannum, et talia ei sæpissime objiciebant; “Quousque tyrant and such-things to-him most-often they-put-forward how-long calamitatem et exilium nostrum patieris, Constantine? Ut the-calamity and exile our will-you-suffer O-Constantine to quid moraris nos in natale solum restituere? Tu solus what-end do-you-delay us into native soil to-restore you alone es ex generatione nostra, qui quod amisimus nobis reddere are of generation our who what we-have-lost to-us to-restore vales, expulso Maxentio. Quis etenim princeps regi are-able driven-out Maxentius what for prince to-the-king Britanniae conferri queat, sive in fortitudine robustorum of-Britain to-be-compared could whether in strength of-sturdy militum, sive in copia auri et argenti? Obsecramus te, knights or in abundance of-gold and of-silver we-beseech you redde nobis possessiones nostras, redde conjuges et liberos restore to-us possessions our restore wives and children nostros, Romam cum exercitu nobiscum petendo.” our Rome with an-army with-us by-seeking Constantinus imperium totius mundi Romani adipiscitur

VIII • CONSTANTINE WINS THE EMPIRE

Constantine takes Rome and rules the world, raising Helena's three uncles to the Senate. Octavius, duke of the Wisseans, kills the proconsuls and takes Britain, and Trahern, Helena's uncle, is sent against him. After battles near Winchester and in Westmorland, Octavius flees to Norway, his followers ambush and kill Trahern, and Octavius returns and rules Britain until the days of Gratian and Valentinian.

His igitur et aliis incitatus Constantinus, adivit Romam, by-these therefore and by-others roused Constantine went-to Rome illamque sibi subjugavit, et postmodum totius mundi and-it to-himself subjugated and afterward of-the-whole world monarchiam obtinuit. Conduxerat secum Helenæ tres the-monarchy held he-had-brought with-himself of-Helena three avunculos, Leolinum videlicet et Trahern, necnon et Marium: uncles Leolinus namely and Trahern nor-not also Marius ipsosque in senatorium ordinem promovit. Interea Octavius and-them into the-senatorial order advanced meanwhile Octavius dux Wisseorum insurrexit in proconsules Romanæ dignitatis, duke of-the-Wisseans rose against the-proconsuls of-the-Roman dignity quibus insulæ regimen permissum fuerat, et solio to-whom of-the-island the-rule entrusted had-been and of-the-throne regni, ipsis interfectis, potitus est. Cumque id Constantino of-the-kingdom them killed gained he-has and-when this to-Constantine nunciatum fuisset, direxit Trahern avunculum Helenæ, cum announced had-been he-directed Trahern uncle of-Helena with tribus legionibus, ut insulam Romanæ dignitati restitueret. three legions so-that the-island to-the-Roman dignity he-might-restore Appulus itaque Trahern in littus, juxta urbem quæ Britannice landed and-so Trahern on the-shore beside the-city which in-British Kaerperis nuncupatur, impetum fecit in ipsam, atque intra Kaerperis is-called an-attack made upon it and within duos dies cepit. Quo per universas nationes divulgato, rex two days took which through all nations spread-abroad the-king Octavius omnem armatam manum insulæ totius collegit, Octavius every armed band of-the-island whole gathered venitque ipsi obviam, haud longe a Guintonia, in campo and-came to-him to-meet not far from Winchester in the-field qui Britannice Maisuriam appellatur: cœpitque præliari, et which in-British Maisuriam is-called and-began to-fight and victoria potitus est. Trahern itaque naves laceratis militibus of-the-victory gained he-has Trahern and-so the-ships torn knights adivit, easque ingressus. Albaniam petivit æquoreo itinere, et went-to and-them having-entered Albany sought by-sea route and provincias vastare vacavit. Cumque id regi Octavio iterum the-provinces to-lay-waste was-busy and-when this to-the-king Octavius again nunciatum fuisset, resociatis turmis, secutus est eum, et in announced had-been regathered troops followed he-has him and in provincia quæ Westmarialanda vocata fuit, dimicavit: sed sine the-province which Westmorland called was fought but without victoria diffugit. At Trahern, ut sibi victoriam cedere victory fled but Trahern when to-himself victory to-fall prospexit: insecutus est Octavium, nec eum quietem habere he-foresaw pursued has Octavius nor him rest to-have permisit, donec illi urbes cum diademate eripuit. Octavius allowed until from-him the-cities with the-diadem he-snatched Octavius ergo propter amissum regnum anxius, navigio Norwegiam therefore on-account-of the-lost kingdom anxious by-ship Norway petivit, ut a rege Gomberto auxilium acquireret. sought so-that from the-king Gombert help he-might-acquire Interea familiaribus suis edictum fecerat, ut omni nisu meanwhile to-intimates his-own an-edict he-had-made that with-all effort elaborarent neci Trahern imminere. Comes ergo oppidi they-should-labor to-the-death of-Trahern to-press the-count therefore of-a-town municipii, qui ipsum præ ceteris diligebat, præceptis illius municipal who him before the-others loved to-the-orders his parere non distulit. Nam dum Trahern ex Londoniis to-obey not delayed for while Trahern from London quadam die recederet, delituit cum centum militibus in on-a-certain day was-withdrawing he-lay-bid with a-hundred knights in quadam convalle nemoris, qua ille transiturus erat, atque a-certain valley of-a-forest through-which he about-to-pass was and in ipsum prætereuntem impetum inopinum fecit, ac inter upon him passing-by an-attack unexpected made and among commilitones interfecit. Quod cum Octavio nunciatum esset, the-comrades killed which when to-Octavius announced had-been reversus est in Britanniam, et dissipatis Romanis solum returned he-has into Britain and scattered the-Romans the-throne regni recuperavit. Exin tantam probitatem tantamque of-the-kingdom recovered thence so-great prowess and-so-great auri et argenti copiam in brevi tempore nactus fuit, ita ut of-gold and of-silver abundance in short time got he-has so that neminem timeret. Regnum autem Britanniae ab illo tempore no-one he-feared the-kingdom moreover of-Britain from that time usque in dies Gratiani et Valentiniani feliciter obtinuit. all-the-way into the-days of-Gratian and of-Valentinian happily he-held Maximianus in regnum adoptatur

IX · MAXIMIANUS IS CHOSEN FOR THE KINGDOM

The aged Octavius, who has only a daughter, asks his counselors whom to make his heir. Some name his nephew Conan Meriadoc, but Caradocus, duke of Cornwall, proposes Maximianus, a senator of British and Roman blood, to marry the daughter. Caradocus sends his son Mauricius to Rome, where Maximianus, at odds with the emperors, is urged to take Britain and then return to seize the empire.

Denique senio confectus, disponere populum volens, finally with-old-age worn-out to-arrange the-people wishing quæsit a consiliariis suis, quem post ipsius fata in regem he-asked from counselors his-own whom after his fate into king de progenie sua erigere affectassent? Unicam tantum filiam from offspring his-own to-raise they-would-desire an-only only daughter habens, filio caruerat, cui regimen patriæ permitteret. having of-a-son he-had-lacked to-whom the-rule of-the-country he-might-entrust Fuerunt itaque qui laudabant ut filiam suam alicui nobilium there-were and-so who commended that daughter his-own to-one of-the-nobles Romanorum cum regno maritaret, ut pace fruerentur of-the-Romans with the-kingdom he-should-marry so-that peace they-might-enjoy firmiori. Alii vero censebant Conanum Meriadocum nepotem firmer others but judged Conan Meriadoc nephew ejus in solium regni initiandum: Filiam vero alicui his in the-throne of-the-kingdom to-be-installed the-daughter indeed to-some alterius regni principi cum auro et argento copulandam. of-another kingdom prince with gold and silver to-be-joined Dum hæc inter ipsos gererentur, accessit Caradocus while these-things among them were-being-done approached Caradocus Cornubiæ dux, consiliumque dedit, ut Maximianum senatorem of-Cornwall duke and-counsel gave that Maximianus the-senator invitarent, filiamque ei cum regno donarent, et sic they-should-invite and-the-daughter to-him with the-kingdom they-should-give and thus perpetua pace fruerentur. Erat autem ei pater Britannus: perpetual peace they-would-enjoy was moreover to-him the-father a-Briton quia Leoninus Constantini avunculus, de quo superius because Leoninus of-Constantine the-uncle about whom above mentionem feceram, ipsum genuerat. Matre vero et natione mention I-had-made him had-begotten by-mother indeed and by-nation Romanus, ex utroque sanguine regalem ferebat procreationem.

Roman from both blood a-royal he-bore begetting Idcirco pacis stabilitatem promittebat, quia sciebat illum, therefore of-peace the-stability he-promised because he-knew him et ex Imperatorum genere, et ex origine Britonum jus both from of-the-Emperors the-race and from the-origin of-the-Britons right in Britanniam habere. Cum itaque tale consilium dedisset to Britain to-have when and-so such counsel he-had-given Cornubiensium dux: indignatus est Conanus regis nepos, of-the-Cornish the-duke indignant was Conan of-the-king nephew qui omni nisu in regnum anhelabat, totamque curiam propter who with-all effort for the-kingdom panted and-the-whole court on-account-of talia turbavit. At Caradocus cœptis suis desistere such-things disturbed but Caradocus from-undertakings his-own to-desist nolens, misit Mauricium filium suum Romam, ut ea unwilling sent Mauricius son his-own to-Rome so-that these-things Maximiano indicaret. Erat ipse Mauricius magnæ et pulcræ to-Maximianus he-might-show was be-himself Mauricius of-great and handsome staturæ, magnæque probitatis atque audaciæ: et qui ea quæ stature and-of-great prowess and boldness and who those-things which indicabat, armis, si contradictio fieret, et duello probabat. Qui he-showed with-arms if contradiction were-made also by-duel proved who ut Maximiani præsentiam adivit, ab illo ut decebat receptus when of-Maximianus the-presence he-approached by him as was-fitting received est, et supra commilitones honoratus. Erat tunc maxima was and above the-comrades honored there-was then greatest inquietudo inter ipsum Maximianum, et duos Imperatores disturbance between himself Maximianus and the-two Emperors Gratianum, fratremque suum Valentinianum, quia passus fuerat Gratian and-brother his-own Valentinian because suffered he-had repulsam de tertia parte imperii quam petebat. Ut ergo refusal about the-third part of-the-empire which he-sought when therefore vidit Mauricius Maximianum ab Imperatoribus oppressum, saw Mauricius Maximianus by the-Emperors oppressed eum in hæc verba affatur: “Ut quid Gratianum times, him in these words he-addresses to what-end Gratian do-you-fear Maximiane, cum tibi pateat via qua ei imperium O-Maximianus since to-you lies-open a-way by-which from-him the-empire eripere poteris? Veni mecum in Britanniam insulam: et to-snatch you-will-be-able come with-me into Britain the-island and regni diadema possidebis. Octavius enim rex et senio of-the-kingdom the-diadem you-will-possess Octavius for the-king both by-old-age et languore gravatus, nihil aliud desiderat, nisi ut aliquem and by-sickness weighed-down nothing else desires except that someone talem inveniatur, cui regnum suum cum filia donet. such he-may-find to-whom kingdom his-own with the-daughter he-may-give Masculina namque prole caret, consiliumque a proceribus of-male for offspring he-lacks and-counsel from nobles suis quæsit, cui unicam filiam suam cum regno his-own he-has-sought to-whom only daughter his-own with the-kingdom copularet. Et ut affatui ejus parerent heroes, decreverunt he-should-join and that to-the-address his they-might-obey the-heroes decreed ut tibi concederetur regnum et puella, et direxerunt me that to-you should-be-granted the-kingdom and the-girl and directed me ad te, ut id tibi notificarem. Si igitur mecum veniens to you that this to-you I-might-make-known if therefore with-me coming incoëptum istud perfeceris, auri et argenti Britanniae beginning this you-will-have-completed of-gold and of-silver of-Britain copia, multitudine etiam bellicosorum militum with-the-abundance with-the-multitude also of-warlike knights ibidem manentium, Romam valebis redire, expulsisque there remaining to-Rome you-will-be-able to-return and-driven-out Imperatoribus eam subjugare. Sic enim egit Constantinus the-Emperors it to-subjugate thus for did Constantine cognatus tuus, pluresque reges nostri qui imperium ascenderunt. kinsman your and-many kings our who the-empire ascended Maximianus Britanniam petit: pugnam cum Conano fraude devitat

X · MAXIMIANUS COMES TO BRITAIN

Maximianus subdues Frankish cities on his way and lands at Hamo's port, and Conan meets him with the youth of the island. Outnumbered, Maximianus follows Mauricius' advice and goes to meet Conan with twelve white-haired nobles bearing olive branches. They claim to bring the emperors' commands and come in peace; Caradocus and the other nobles dissuade war, and Conan, though he would rather fight, grants peace and leads Maximianus to the king in London.

Acquiescens igitur verbis ejus Maximianus, Britanniam assenting therefore to-the-words his Maximianus Britain petivit, petendo Francorum urbes subjugavit: subjugando sought by-seeking of-the-Franks the-cities he-subjugated by-subjugating aurum et argentum coacervabat: milites undique sibi gold and silver he-heaped-up knights from-everywhere to-himself associabat. Postmodum Oceanum mare ingressus, in portum he-associated afterward the-Ocean sea having-entered into the-port Hamonis secundis velis applicuit. Cumque id regi of-Hamo with-favorable sails landed and-when this to-the-king nunciatum esset, expavit stupore vehementi, existimans announced it-had-been he-was-terrified with-stupor vehement thinking hostilem exercitum supervenisse. Vocato igitur Conano nepote a-hostile army to-have-come-upon called therefore Conan nephew suo, jussit eum omnem armatum militem insulæ colligere his-own he-ordered him every armed knight of-the-island to-gather atque hostibus obviam procedere. Collegit itaque Conan and to-the-enemies to-meet to-advance gathered and-so Conan omnem regni juventutem, venitque ad portum Hamonis, all of-the-kingdom the-youth and-came to the-port of-Hamo ubi tentoria sua Maximianus erexerat. Qui ut tantæ where tents his-own Maximianus had-raised who when of-so-great multitudinis adventum comperit, maximis angustiis cruciabatur, a-multitude the-arrival he-discovered with-greatest anguish was-tormented quia ignorabat quid faceret. Paucioribus namque catervis because he-did-not-know what he-should-do by-fewer for bands comitatus, dubitabat et virorum multitudinem et audaciam, accompanied he-doubted both of-the-men the-multitude and the-boldness quia de pace nullam spem habebat. Convocatis igitur because about peace no hope he-had called-together therefore majoribus natu et Mauricio, dicere præcepit, quid contra talem the-greater by-birth and Mauricius to-say he-ordered what against such adventum agendum foret? cui Mauricius: “Non est nobis arrival to-be-done might-be to-whom Mauricius not is for-us cum tot bellicosus militibus pugnandum, nec ea de causa with so-many warlike knights to-be-fought nor this for reason venimus, ut Britanniam prælio subjugaremus. Pax roganda we-have-come that Britain by-battle we-should-subjugate peace to-be-asked est et hospitandi licentia, donec animum regis sciamus. is and of-lodging leave until the-mind of-the-king we-may-know Dicamus nos missos esse ab Imperatoribus, eorumque mandata let-us-say we sent to-be by the-Emperors and-their commands Octavio deferre, et calidis verbis populum istum mulceamus.

to-Octavius to-bring and with-warm words people this let-us-soothe Cumque id omnibus placuisset, assumpsit secum duodecim and-when this to-all had-pleased he-took with-himself twelve canos proceres sapientiores ceteris, et olivæ ramos in white-haired nobles wiser than-the-others and of-olive branches in dextris habentes: venitque Conano obviam. Videntes igitur right-hands having and-came to-Conan to-meet seeing therefore Britones viros reverendæ ætatis, et olivam in pacis signum the-Britons men of-venerable age and the-olive as of-peace a-sign gestantes, eis honorifice assurgunt et viam patefaciunt, carrying to-them honorably they-rise and the-way they-open ut ducem liberius adeant.

Mox illi in præsentia Conani so-that the-leader more-freely they-may-approach soon they in the-presence of-Conan

Meriadoci stantes, eum ex parte Imperatorum et senatus Meriadoc standing him from the-side of-the-Emperors and of-the-senate salutaverunt, dixeruntque Maximianum missum ad regem greeted and-said Maximianus sent to the-king

Octavium, ut mandata Gratiani et Valentiniani eidem Octavius so-that the-commands of-Gratian and of-Valentinian to-the-same portaret.” Ad hæc Conanus, “Ut quid ergo eum tanta he-might-carry at these-things Conan to what-end therefore him so-great sequitur multitudo? non hæc legatorum facies esse solet, imo follows a-multitude not this of-envoys the-face to-be is-wont nay supervenientium hostium, qui injuriam inferre meditantur.” of-coming-on enemies who wrong to-bring intend Tunc Mauricius: “Non decebat tantum virum inglorium sine then Mauricius not it-was-fitting so-great a-man inglorious without commilitonibus incedere: præsertim cum propter Romanam comrades to-go-about especially since on-account-of the-Roman potentiam, et propter actus avorum suorum pluribus regibus power and on-account-of the-acts of-ancestors his-own to-many kings odiosus habeatur. Nam si raro comitatu incederet, hateful he-is-held for if with-scant retinue he-were-going-about fortassis ab inimicis Reipublicæ perimeretur. Pace venit, perhaps by the-enemies of-the-Republic he-would-be-destroyed in-peace he-has-come pacemque petit, quod ex actu ipsius credi decet. and-peace he-seeks which from the-conduct his to-be-believed it-is-fitting Ex quo namque applicuimus, sic nosmet ipsos habuimus, from which for we-landed thus us ourselves we-have-held ut nemini injuriam intulerimus. Expensam nostram ut gens that on-no-one wrong we-have-brought the-expense our as a-people pacis fecimus, quia necessaria ementes, nihil vi cuipiam of-peace we-have-made because necessary-things buying nothing by-force from-anyone subripiimus.” Cumque hæsitasset Conanus, an pacem we-have-snatched and-when had-hesitated Conan whether peace an prælium committeret: accessit Caradocus dux Cornubiæ: or battle he-should-join approached Caradocus duke of-Cornwall accesserunt ceteri proceres, et dissuaserunt Conano post hanc approached the-other nobles and dissuaded Conan after this petitionem bellum ingerere. Qui licet dimicare maluisset, petition war to-wage who although to-fight he-had-preferred depositis armis concessit eis pacem. Duxitque Maximianum laid-down arms granted to-them peace and-led Maximianus Londonias ad regem, et rem ordine manifestavit. to-London to the-king and the-matter in-order made-plain Maximianus filiam regis cum solio accipit

XI · MAXIMIANUS WINS THE KING'S DAUGHTER

Caradocus urges Octavius to give his daughter and kingdom to Maximianus, who is kin to Constantine and grandson of Coel. Octavius agrees, and the furious Conan withdraws to Albany, raises an army, and crosses the Humber, ravaging the provinces on both sides of it. Maximianus beats him once, but after further battles won and lost on both sides, friends make peace between them.

Tunc Caradocus Cornubiæ dux assumpto secum Mauricio then Caradocus of-Cornwall duke taken with-himself Mauricius filio suo, jussit astantes semoveri: regemque in hæc son his-own ordered the-bystanders to-be-removed and-the-king in these verba adivit: “Ecce quod longo tempore desiderabant qui words approached behold what for-long time desired those-who fidelitati tuæ veriori affectu obedientiam servant, disponente to-fidelity your with-truer affection obedience keep arranging Deo, successibus tuis accessit. Præceperas namque proceribus God to-successes your has-come you-had-ordered for nobles tuis consilium dare, quid de filia tua, quid de regno your counsel to-give what about daughter your what about kingdom tuo tibi agendum foret: cum tua ætas in tantum his your by-you to-be-done might-be since your age in so-far in-these diebus repugnet, ut populum tuum diutius gubernes. Alii days resists that people your longer you-should-govern some itaque censebant diadema Conano nepoti tuo tradendum, and-so thought the-diadem to-Conan nephew your to-be-banded-over filiamque tuam alicubi digne maritandam: timentes civium and-daughter your somewhere worthily to-be-married fearing of-the-citizens exterminationem, si alterius linguæ princeps superveniret. Alii the-extermination if of-another tongue a-prince should-come-upon others concedebant regnum filiæ, et alicui nostræ loquelæ granted the-kingdom to-the-daughter and to-some of-our speech nobili, qui tibi post obitum succederet. Major autem pars noble who to-you after death should-succeed the-greater moreover part laudabat, ut ex genere imperatorum mandaretur aliquis, cui commended that from the-race of-the-emperors should-be-sent someone to-whom nata cum diademate donaretur. Promittebant enim firmam the-daughter with the-diadem should-be-given they-promised for a-firm et stabilem pacem inde proventuram, si Romana potestas and stable peace thence about-to-come if the-Roman power ipsos protegeret. Ecce ergo tibi dignatus est Deus istum them should-protect behold therefore to-you deigned has God this subvectare juvenem: et ex Romanorum genere, regalique to-bring-up youth both from of-the-Romans the-race and-from-the-royal prosapia Britonum creatum, cui filiam tuam meo consilio lineage of-the-Britons created to-whom daughter your by-my counsel maritare non differes. Quanquam autem illud abnegares, to-marry not you-will-delay although moreover that you-should-deny quid juris tibi contra illum in regnum Britannix fieret? what of-right to-you against him to the-kingdom of-Britain would-be Constantini etenim consanguineus est, et nepos Coel nostri of-Constantine for kinsman he-is and grandson of-Coel our regis, cujus filiam Helenam nequimus abnegare hereditario king whose daughter Helena we-cannot deny by-hereditary jure regnum istud possidere." Cumque hæc retulisset right kingdom this to-possess and-when these-things had-reported Caradocus, acquievit ei Octavius, communique consensu Caradocus assented to-him Octavius and-by-common consent ilico regnum Britannix cum filia sua illi donavit. on-the-spot the-kingdom of-Britain with daughter his-own to-him gave Quod videns Conanus Meriadocus, indignatus est ultra quam which seeing Conan Meriadoc indignant was beyond what exprimi posset: secessitque in Albaniam, et exercitum to-be-expressed could and-withdrew into Albany and an-army colligere vacavit, ut Maximianum inquietaret. Multitudine to-gather was-busy so-that Maximianus he-might-harass a-multitude ergo consociata, præterivit Humbrum flumen, quasque therefore joined he-passed the-Humber river all provincias ultra et citra depopulans. Quod cum Maximiano provinces beyond and on-this-side ravaging which when to-Maximianus nunciaretur: collecta tota fortitudine sua, festinavit obviam was-announced gathered all strength his-own he-hurried to-meet ire: et cum illo præliatus est, et cum victoria rediit. Nec to-go and with him fought he-has and with victory returned nor tamen deficiebat Conanus, sed resociatis catervis, destructioni yet failed Conan but regathered bands on-the-destruction provinciarum imminebat. Redibat ergo Maximianus, et of-the-provinces he-pressed returned therefore Maximianus and commissis præliis quandoque cum triumpho, quandoque joined battles sometimes with triumph sometimes superatus revertebatur. Denique cum alter alteri maximum overcome he-came-back finally when one to-the-other greatest damnum intulisset, concordiam annuentibus amicis fecerunt. loss had-brought concord assenting friends they-made

Maximianus Armoricam invadit

XII • MAXIMIANUS INVADES ARMORICA

After five years, proud of his wealth, Maximianus gathers every armed knight of Britain to conquer Gaul. He defeats the Gauls of Armorica, killing their leader Inbaltus and fifteen thousand men. He promises Conan the kingdom of Armorica as another Britain, to be filled with Britons once the natives are driven out, and Conan swears loyalty.

Emenso deinde quinquennio, superbivit Maximianus propter having-passed then a-five-year-span grew-proud Maximianus on-account-of infinitam auri et argenti copiam quæ illi quotidie affluebat: the-infinite of-gold and of-silver abundance which to-him daily flowed paravitque navigium maximum, omnemque armatum militem and-prepared a-fleet greatest and-every armed knight Britanniæ collegit. Non sufficebat ei regnum Britanniæ, of-Britain gathered not sufficed for-him the-kingdom of-Britain quin affectaret Gallias subjugare. Ut ergo transfretavit, but-that he-desired the-Gauls to-subjugate when therefore he-crossed adivit primitus Armoricum regnum, quod nunc Britannia he-went-to first the-Armorican kingdom which now Brittany dicitur, et populum Gallicum qui inerat, debellare incœpit. At is-called and the-people Gallic which was-in-it to-subdue began but Galli, duce Inbalto, obviam venientes, pugnam fecerunt contra the-Gauls as-leader Inbaltus to-meet coming a-fight made against illum: sed in majori parte periclitati fugam inierunt, ceciderat him but in the-greater part imperiled flight entered bad-fallen namque dux Inbaltus, et quindecim milia armatorum, for the-leader Inbaltus and fifteen thousand of-armed-men qui ex omni regno convenerant. Ut ergo tantam cladem who from all the-kingdom had-come-together when therefore so-great disaster ingessit Maximianus, maximo fluctuavit gaudio, quia interitu heaped Maximianus with-greatest surged joy because by-the-death tot virorum sciebat patriam leviter deinde subdendam. of-so-many men he-knew the-country easily thereafter to-be-subjected Vocavit ergo Conanum ad se extra turmas, et paulisper he-called therefore Conan to himself outside the-troops and for-a-little subridens ait: "Ecce unum ex potioribus Galliæ regnis smiling says behold one of the-more-powerful of-Gaul kingdoms subjugavimus. Ecce spem ad cetera habere possumus. we-have-subjugated behold hope for the-other-things to-have we-can Festinemus urbes et oppida capere, antequam rumor hujus let-us-hurry the-cities and towns to-take before the-rumor of-this periculi in ulteriorem Galliam evolans, universos populos ad danger into farther Gaul flying all peoples to arma provocet. Nam si istud regnum habere poterimus, non arms may-call for if this kingdom to-have we-shall-be-able not hæsito quin totam Galliam potestati nostra subdemus. Ne I-doubt but-that the-whole Gaul to-power our we-shall-subject not pigeat te ergo, regnum Britanniaë insulaë mihi cessisse, licet let-it-irk you therefore the-kingdom of-Britain the-island to-me to-have-yielded though possidendi eam spem habuisses, quia quicquid in illa amisisti, of-possessing it hope you-had-had because whatever in it you-lost tibi in hac patria restaurabo, promovebo te etenim in regem to-you in this country I-shall-restore I-shall-advance you for into king hujus regni, et erit hæc altera Britannia, et eam ex genere of-this kingdom and will-be this another Britain and it from race nostro expulsis indigenis replebimus. Patria namque fertilis est our driven-out the-natives we-shall-fill the-country for fertile is segetibus: et flumina piscosa sunt, nemora perpulcra, et saltus with-crops and the-rivers fish-filled are the-forests most-beautiful and the-glades ubique amœni. Nec est uspiam, meo iudicio, gratior tellus." everywhere pleasant nor is anywhere in-my judgment a-more-pleasing land Ad hæc inclinato capite grates egit Conanus, promisitque at these-things bowed the-head thanks gave Conan and-promised se fidelem in obsequio ejus mansurum donec viveret. himself faithful in the-service his about-to-remain while he-should-live

Redonum urbs capitur

XIII · THE CITY OF RENNES IS TAKEN

The Britons take Rennes in a day, the citizens fleeing in terror, and they kill every male wherever they enter, sparing only women. Once the province is emptied, they garrison the cities and towns with British knights. Terror spreads through Gaul, and Maximianus enlarges his army with gifts to men eager for plunder.

Post hæc convocatis catervis iverunt Redonum, ipsamque after these-things called-together the-bands they-went to-Rennes and-it eodem die ceperunt. Audita namque Britonum sævitia, on-the-same day took heard for of-the-Britons the-savagery peremptorumque casu, diffugerant cives cum festinatione, and-of-the-slain the-fate had-fled the-citizens with haste mulieribus relictis atque infantibus. Exemplo ipsorum the-women left and infants by-the-example of-them fecerunt ceteri per urbes, et per cetera oppida, ita ut did the-others through the-cities and through the-other towns so that facilis aditus Britonibus pateret. Qui quocunque intrabant, an-easy approach to-the-Britons lay-open who wherever they-entered interficiebant quicquid erat masculini sexus, solis mulieribus killed whatever was of-the-male sex only to-the-women parcentes. Postremo cum universas provincias penitus ab sparing finally when all provinces utterly of omni incola delevisent, munierunt civitates et oppida every inhabitant they-had-emptied they-fortified the-cities and towns militibus Britanniae et promontoria in diversis locis statuta. with-knights of-Britain and strongholds in various places set-up Sævitia igitur Maximiani per ceteras Galliarum provincias the-savagery therefore of-Maximianus through the-other of-the-Gauls provinces divulgata, timor nimius quosque duces, et quosque principes spread-abroad fear excessive all dukes and all princes invadebat: ita ut nullam aliam spem nisi in votis diis invaded so that no other hope except in vows to-the-gods solvendis haberent. Diffugiebant itaque ab omni pago ad to-be-paid they-bad they-fled and-so from every district to civitates et oppida, et ad quæcunque loca quæ tutum the-cities and towns and to whatever places which safe præstabant refugium. Maximianus ergo sese timori esse offered refuge Maximianus therefore himself for-fear to-be comperiens, maiorem resumit audaciam: exercitumque suum finding greater he-resumes boldness and-army his-own profusis donariis augere festinat. Quosunque enim aliena with-lavish gifts to-increase he-hurries whomever for others'-goods captare callebat, sibi associabat, et nunc auro, nunc to-seize he-knew to-himself he-associated and now with-gold now argento, ceterisque muneribus illos ditare non cessabat. with-silver and-other gifts them to-enrich not he-ceased Maximianus, Gallia et Germania subactis, apud Treveros imperii sedem locat

XIV · MAXIMIANUS RULES FROM TRIER

Maximianus orders a hundred thousand commoners and thirty thousand knights from Britain to settle and guard Armorica, which becomes another Britain under Conan. He then conquers the rest of Gaul and Germany. Setting his throne at Trier, he kills one emperor and drives the other from Rome.

Exin tantam multitudinem collegit, quantam existimabat thence so-great a-multipitude be-gathered as-great-as he-thought sibi sufficere posse ad omnem Galliam subjugandam. for-himself to-suffice to-be-able for all Gaul to-be-subjugated Distulit tamen sævitiam suam paulisper ulterius ingerere, be-put-off yet savagery his-own for-a-little further to-heap donec sedato regno quod ceperat, ipsum Britannico populo until settled the-kingdom which he-had-taken it with-the-British people replevisset. Fecit itaque edictum suum, ut centum milia be-had-filled he-made and-so edict his-own that a-hundred thousand e plebe in Britannia insula colligerentur qui ad eum from the-commoners in Britain the-island should-be-gathered who to him venirent. Præterea triginta milia militum, qui ipsos intra should-come besides thirty thousand of-knights who them within patriam qua mansuri erant, ab hostili irruptione tuerentur. the-country where about-to-remain they-were from hostile inroad should-guard Cumque omnia perpetrasset: distribuit eos per universas and-when all-things he-had-accomplished he-distributed them through all Armorici regni nationes: fecitque alteram Britanniam, et of-the-Armorican kingdom the-nations and-made another Britain and eam Conano Meriadoco donavit. Ipse vero cum ceteris it to-Conan Meriadoc gave he-himself but with the-other commilitonibus suis, ulteriorem adivit Galliam, gravissimisque comrades his-own the-farther went-to Gaul and-with-most-grave præliis illatis eam subjugavit, nec non et totam Germaniam, battles brought-on it subjugated nor not also the-whole Germany in omni prælio victoria potitus. Thronum autem imperii in every battle of-the-victory having-gained the-throne moreover of-empire sui apud Treveros statuens, ita debacchatus est in his-own at Trier setting so raged he-has against duos Imperatores Gratianum et Valentinianum, quod uno the-two Emperors Gratian and Valentinian that one interempto, alterum ex Roma urbe fugavit. destroyed the-other from Rome the-city he-put-to-flight Aquitani rebellant: Conanus militibus suis conjuges e Britannia arcessit

XV · CONAN SENDS TO BRITAIN FOR WIVES

Conan defends Armorica against the Gauls and Aquitanians. Wanting heirs for his men without mixing with the Gauls, he sends to Dionotus, king of Cornwall, who rules Britain for Maximianus, asking for women to be their wives. Dionotus has a beautiful daughter, Ursula, whom Conan longs for above all things.

Interea inquietabant Conanum Armoricosque Britones, meanwhile harassed Conan and-the-Armorican Britons Galli atque Aquitani, crebrisque irruptionibus sæpissime the-Gauls and the-Aquitani and-with-frequent inroads most-often infestabant. Quibus ipse resistens, et mutuam cladem troubled whom he-himself resisting both mutual disaster reddebat, et commissam sibi patriam viriliter defendebat. returned and the-committed to-himself country manfully defended Cum autem ei cessisset victoria, voluit commilitonibus when moreover to-him had-fallen victory he-wished to-the-comrades suis conjuges dare, ut ex eis nascerentur heredes his-own wives to-give so-that from them should-be-born heirs qui terram illam perpetuo possiderent. Et ut nullam who land that perpetually might-possess and that no commixtionem cum Gallis facerent, decrevit ut ex mingling with the-Gauls they-might-make be-decreed that from Britannia insula mulieres venirent, quæ ipsis maritarentur.

Britain the-island women should-come who to-them should-be-married Direxit itaque nuncios in Britanniam insulam ad Dionotum be-directed and-so messengers into Britain the-island to Dionotus regem Cornubiæ, qui fratri suo Caradoco in regnum king of-Cornwall who to-brother his-own Caradocus in the-kingdom successerat, ut curam hujus rei susciperet. Erat ipse had-succeeded that the-care of-this matter he-should-undertake was he-himself nobilis et præpotens: et cui Maximianus insulæ noble and very-powerful and to-whom Maximianus of-the-island principatum commendaverat, dum ipse prædictis negotiis the-principality had-entrusted while he-himself to-the-aforesaid business intenderet. Habebat autem filiam miræ pulcritudinis, attended he-had moreover a-daughter of-wonderful beauty cui nomen Ursula, quam Conanus super omnia exoptaverat. to-whom name Ursula whom Conan above all-things had-longed-for Undecim millia virginum, e Britannia missæ, naufragium faciunt et omnes ad unam a Barbaris trucidantur

XVI • THE ELEVEN THOUSAND VIRGINS

Dionotus gathers eleven thousand noble daughters and sixty thousand women of humble birth at London, many of them unwilling. A storm scatters the fleet, many drown, and the rest land on barbarous islands, where Guanius and Melga, kings of the Huns and Picts, slaughter those who refuse them. The two then invade defenseless Britain, Gratian the Burgess drives them to Ireland, and Maximianus is killed at Rome.

Dionotus igitur viso Conani nuncio, volens mandatis ejus Dionotus therefore seen of-Conan the-message wishing to-the-commands his parere, collegit per diversas provincias nobilium filias, to-obey gathered through various provinces of-the-nobles daughters numero undecim milia: de ceteris ex infima gente creatis in-number eleven thousand of the-others from the-lowest race created sexaginta milia: et omnes intra urbem Londoniæ convenire sixty thousand and all within the-city of-London to-come-together præcepit, naves quoque ex diversis littoribus jussit adduci; he-ordered ships also from various shores he-ordered to-be-brought quibus ad prædictos conjuges transfretarent. Quod licet in-which to the-aforesaid husbands they-should-cross which although multis in tanto cœtu placuisset, tamen pluribus displicebat, to-many in so-great a-gathering it-had-pleased yet to-more it-displeased quæ majori affectu et parentes et patriam diligebant. Nec who with-greater affection both parents and country loved nor deerant forsitan aliquæ, quæ castitatem nuptiis præferentes, were-lacking perhaps some who chastity to-nuptials preferring maluissent in qualibet etiam natione vitam amittere, quam would-have-preferred in any even nation life to-lose than hoc modo divitias exigere. Quippe diversas diversa in-this manner riches to-seek indeed different-women different-things juvarent: si optatum suum ad effectum ducere quivissent. would-please if desire their-own to effect to-lead they-had-been-able Parato autem navigio, ingrediuntur mulieres naves, et per prepared moreover the-fleet enter the-women the-ships and by Tamensem fluvium maria petunt. Postremo cum vela the-Thames river the-seas they-seek finally when the-sails versus Armoricanos divertissent: contrarii venti in classem towards the-Armoricans they-had-turned contrary winds against the-fleet insurrexerunt, et in brevi totam societatem dissipant. rose and in short-time the-whole company scatter

Periclitabantur ergo naves intra maria, in majori parte were-imperiled therefore the-ships within the-seas in the-greater part submersæ: quæ vero totum periculum evaserunt, appulsæ drowned which indeed the-whole danger escaped landed sunt in barbaras insulas, et ab ignota gente sive were on barbarous islands and by an-unknown people either trucidatæ sive mancipatæ. Inciderant siquidem in nefandum slaughtered or enslaved they-had-fallen indeed into the-abominable exercitum Guanii et Melgæ, qui jussu Gratiani nationes army of-Guanius and of-Melga who by-the-order of-Gratian the-nations maritimorum et Germaniæ dira clade opprimebant. Erat of-the-coastlands and of-Germany with-dire disaster crushed was autem Guanius rex Hunnorum, Melga vero Pictorum, quos moreover Guanius king of-the-Huns Melga but of-the-Picts whom asciverat sibi Gratianus, miseratque in Germaniam, ut had-summoned to-himself Gratian and-had-sent into Germany so-that eos qui Maximiano faverent, inquietarent. Per maritima those who to-Maximianus favored they-might-harass along the-coasts ergo sævientes, obviarunt prædictis puellis in partes illas therefore raging they-met the-aforsaid girls on parts those appulsis. Inspicientes igitur earum pulchritudinem, lascivire landed beholding therefore their beauty to-wanton cum eis voluerunt: sed cum abnegavissent puellæ, in with them they-wished but when had-refused the-girls upon eas Ambrones irruerunt, maximamque parte sine pietate them the-Ambrones rushed and-the-greatest part without pity trucidaverunt. Deinde nefandi Pictorum et Hunnorum slaughtered then the-abominable of-the-Picts and of-the-Huns duces Guanius et Melga, qui partibus Gratiani et Valentiniani leaders Guanius and Melga who to-the-side of-Gratian and of-Valentinian favebant, cum didicissent insulam Britannia ab omni armato avored when they-had-learned the-island of-Britain of every armed milite vacuatam, iter festinatum versus illam direxerunt: knight emptied a-march hastened towards it they-directed associatisque sibi collateralibus insulis, in Albaniam and-joined to-themselves the-neighboring islands in Albany applicuerunt. Agmine igitur facto invaserunt regnum landed with-a-column therefore made they-invaded the-kingdom quod rectore et defensore carebat, vulgus irrationabile which a-ruler and defender lacked the-common-crowd senseless cædentes. Abduxerat enim secum Maximianus (ut prædictum slaughtering had-led-away for with-himself Maximianus as said-before est) omnes bellicosos juvenes qui reperiri potuerant: it-has-been all warlike youths who to-be-found could inermesque colonos atque inconsultos reliquerat. Quos cum and-unarmed farmers and unadvised he-had-left whom when prædicti Guanius et Melga compererunt minime resistere the-aforesaid Guanius and Melga discovered by-no-means to-resist posse, stragem non minimam facientes, urbes et provincias, to-be-able slaughter not least making the-cities and provinces ut ovium caulas, vastare non cessabant. Cum ergo tanta like of-sheep the-folds to-lay-waste not they-ceased when therefore so-great calamitas Maximiano nunciata fuisset, misit Gratianum calamity to-Maximianus announced had-been he-sent Gratian Municipem cum duabus legionibus, ut auxilium subvectaret: the-Burgess with two legions so-that help he-might-bring qui ut in insulam venerunt, præliati sunt cum prædictis who when into the-island they-came fought have with the-aforesaid hostibus, et acerrima nece affectos ipsos in Hiberniam enemies and with-most-fierce death afflicted them into Ireland fugaverunt. Interea Maximianus Romæ interfectus est ab they-put-to-flight meanwhile Maximianus at-Rome killed was by amicis Gratiani, et Britones quos secum duxerat, interfecti the-friends of-Gratian and the-Britons whom with-himself he-had-led killed sunt et dissipati: qui evadere potuerunt, venerunt ad concives were and scattered who to-escape could came to fellow-citizens suos ad Armoricam, quæ jam altera Britannia vocabatur. their-own to Armorica which already the-other Britain was-called

BOOK VI

Gratianus, rex factus, a plebe interficitur.

Britanni auxilium a Romanis contra hostes petunt

I • GRATIAN KILLED; THE BRITONS APPEAL TO ROME

Gratian the Burgess makes himself king and rules so tyrannously that the commons kill him. Guanius and Melga return from Ireland with Scots, Norwegians, and Danes and ravage the kingdom. The Britons beg Rome for help, and a legion drives out the enemy and has the commons build a wall between Albany and Deira.

At Gratianus Municeps, cum de nece Maximiani audivisset, but Gratian the-Burgess when about the-death of-Maximianus he-had-beard cepit regni diadema et sese in regem promovit. Exin took of-the-kingdom the-diadem and himself into king advanced thence tantam tyrannidem in populum exercuit, ita ut catervis factis so-great tyranny upon the-people he-exercised so that bands made plebs in eum irruerent et interficerent. Quod cum per the-commoners upon him should-rush and should-kill which when through cetera regna divulgatum fuisset, reversi sunt prædicti hostes the-other kingdoms spread-abroad had-been returned have the-aforesaid enemies ex Hibernia: et secum Scotos, Norwegenses et Dacos from Ireland and with-themselves the-Scots Norwegians and Danes conducentes, regnum a mari usque ad mare ferro et bringing the-kingdom from sea all-the-way to sea with-sword and flamma affecerunt. Ob hanc infestationem et durissimam flame afflicted on-account-of this barassment and most-hard oppressionem legati Romam cum epistolis mittuntur, militarem oppression envoys to-Rome with letters are-sent a-military manum ad se vindicandos lacrimosis postulationibus band for themselves to-be-avenged with-tearful demands poscentes, et subjectionem sui in perpetuum voventes, asking and the-subjection of-themselves for ever vowing si hostis longius arceretur: quibus mox committitur legio if the-enemy farther should-be-kept-off to-whom soon is-committed a-legion præteriti mali immemor, quæ ratibus trans Oceanum in of-past evil unmindful which by-rafts across the-Ocean into patriam vecta, cominus cum hostibus congressa est. Magnam the-country carried hand-to-hand with the-enemies engaged has a-great denique ex his multitudinem sternens, omnes e finibus finally of these multitude laying-low all from the-borders pepulit, atque oppressam plebem a tam atroci dilaceratione it-drove and the-oppressed commoners from so atrocious a-tearing liberavit: ad quos jussit construere murum inter Albaniam freed to whom it-ordered to-build a-wall between Albany et Deiram, a mari usque ad mare, ut esset arcendis and Deira from sea all-the-way to sea so-that it-might-be for-keeping-off hostibus a turba instructus terrori, civibus vero tutamini. the-enemies by the-crowd built for-terror to-the-citizens indeed for-safety Erat autem Albania penitus frequentatione Barbarorum vastata, was moreover Albany utterly by-the-frequenting of-the-barbarians laid-waste et quicumque hostes superveniebant, opportunum intra ipsam and whatever enemies came-upon a-convenient within it habebant receptaculum. Collecto igitur publico et privato had refuge gathered therefore public and private sumptu, incumbunt indigenæ operi, et murum perficiunt. expense press-on the-natives to-the-work and the-wall complete Romanis abeuntibus, Guithelinus cives suos, ut ipsi se armis defendant, hortatur

II · GUETHELINUS URGES THE BRITONS TO ARMS

The Romans announce that they will no longer exhaust themselves for the Britons, who must defend their own liberty with arms. Guethelinus, archbishop of London, addresses the assembled warriors. He pities their weakness since Maximianus stripped the island of its knights, reminds them that knights and peasants are born of one another, and urges them to act as men and call on Christ.

Romani igitur patriæ denunciant, nequaquam se tam the-Romans therefore to-the-country announce by-no-means themselves by-so laboriosis expeditionibus posse frequentius vexari: et laborious expeditions to-be-able more-often to-be-harassed and ob imbelles et erraticos latrunculos Romana stigmata on-account-of unwarlike and wandering petty-robbers the-Roman standards tantum talemque exercitum terra ac mari fatigari: sed ut so-great and-such an-army by-land and sea to-be-wearied but that potius solitis consuescendo armis ac viriliter dimicando rather to-accustomed by-growing-used arms and manfully by-fighting terram, substantiam, conjuges, liberos, et quod iis majus land substance wives children and what than-these greater est, libertatem vitamque totis viribus defenderent. Ut ergo is liberty and-life with-all strength they-should-defend that therefore hanc admonitionem facerent, jusserunt convenire omnes this admonition they-might-make they-ordered to-come-together all bellicosos viros insulæ intra Londoniam: nam Romani warlike men of-the-island within London for the-Romans repedare moliebantur. Cum autem convenissent cuncti, to-return were-preparing when moreover had-come-together all commissus est sermo Guethelino Londoniensi Metropolitano, committed was the-speech to-Guethelinus the-London Metropolitan qui ipsos in hæc verba adivit: “Cum vos jussu who them in these words approached when you by-the-order astantium principum alloqui deberem, magis in fletum of-the-standing-by princes to-address I-ought more into weeping prorumpere cogor, quam in excelsum sermonem: miseret to-burst-forth I-am-compelled than into a-lofty speech it-pities enim me orphanitatis et debilitatis, quæ vobis accessit, for me of-the-orphanhood and weakness which to-you has-come postquam Maximianus regnum istud omni milite omni que after Maximianus kingdom this of-every knight and-of-every juventute spoliavit. Vos autem reliquiæ eratis: plebs youth has-despoiled you moreover the-remnants were a-commoner-folk usus belli ignara, quæ ceteris negotiis, ut in terris colendis, of-the-use of-war ignorant which to-other businesses as to lands to-be-tilled diversisque commercii machinationibus intendebat. Cum ergo and-to-various of-commerce contrivances attended when therefore supervenerunt ab alienis nationibus inimici, velut oves sine came-upon from foreign nations enemies like sheep without pastore errantes, vos ovilia vestra deserere coegerunt: donec a-shepherd wandering you folds your to-desert they-forced until Romana potestas vos possessionibus vestris restituit. Eritne the-Roman power you to-possession your restored will-be-whether ergo spes vestra semper in alieno tutamine, et non therefore hope your always in another's protection and not instruitis manus vestras peltis, ensibus, hastis in latrones do-you-equip hands your with-shields with-swords with-spears against robbers nequaquam vobis fortiores, nisi segnitia et torpor adesset? by-no-means than-you stronger unless sloth and torpor were-present Jam tædet Romanos tam assidui itineris quo vexantur, already it-wearies the-Romans of-so constant a-journey by-which they-are-harassed ut pro vobis cum hostibus congrediantur. Prius omne tributum that for you with the-enemies they-should-engage rather every tribute quod solvitis amittere prælegerunt, quam hoc modo diutius which you-pay to-lose they-have-preferred than in-this manner longer terra et ponto fatigari. Quod si tempore militum vestrorum by-land and by-sea to-be-wearied but if in-the-time of-knights your fueratis vulgus, putatis idcirco a vobis humanitatem you-had-been the-common-crowd do-you-think therefore from you humanity diffugisse? Nonne homines transverso ordine nascuntur? Ita to-have-fled are-not men in-crosswise order born so ut ex rustico generetur miles, et ex milite rusticus? Miles that from a-peasant is-begotten a-knight and from a-knight a-peasant a-knight etiam de mangone venit, et mango de milite. Hac ergo also from a-dealer comes and a-dealer from a-knight with-this therefore consuetudine quamvis unus ab altero procedat, non existimo custom although one from the-other proceeds not I-think eos Esse, quod est hominis, amittere. Cum igitur sitis them being what is of-a-man to-lose since therefore you-are homines, habetote vos ut homines, et invoke Christum, men bold yourselves as men and call-upon Christ ut audaciam adhibeat, et libertatem vestram defendite.” that boldness he-may-supply and liberty your defend

Cumque finem dicendi fecisset, tanto murmure infremuit and-when the-end of-speaking he-had-made with-so-great a-murmur roared populus, ut ipsos subita audacia repletos diceret. the-people that them with-sudden boldness filled you-would-have-said

Guanius et Melga Britannos iterum invadunt

III · GUANIUS AND MELGA INVADE AGAIN

The Romans leave patterns for arms and watchtowers on the coast, but it is easier to make a hawk from a kite than a trained man from a peasant. As soon as they go, Guanius and Melga return with Scots, Picts, Norwegians, and Danes, and the trembling peasants are dragged from the wall with hooks. The Britons write to Agitius, three times consul, that the barbarians drive them into the sea and the sea back to the barbarians, but no help comes.

Post hæc Romani fortia monita formidoloso populo after these-things the-Romans strong warnings to-the-fearful people tradunt: exemplaria instruendorum armorum relinquunt. In hand-over patterns of-to-be-made of-arms they-leave on littore quoque Oceani, in quo naves illorum habebantur the-shore also of-the-Ocean in which ships their were-kept ad meridianam plagam, quod exinde Barbari timebantur, towards the-southern region because from-there the-barbarians were-feared turres per intervalla ad prospectum maris collocari præcepit. towers at intervals for a-view of-the-sea to-be-placed he-ordered Sed facilius est accipitrem ex milvo fieri, quam ex but easier it-is a-hawk from a-kite to-be-made than from rustico, subito eruditum: et qui profundam doctrinam a-peasant suddenly a-learned-man and who deep teaching eis diffundit, idem facit ac si margaritam inter porcos on-them pours-out the-same does as if a-pearl among swine spargeret. Nam ut vale dicto Romani tanquam non he-were-scattering for when farewell said the-Romans as-if not unquam reversuri abscesserunt: emergunt iterum prædicti ever about-to-return departed emerge again the-aforesaid duces Guanius et Melga e navibus, quibus in Hiberniam leaders Guanius and Melga from the-ships in-which into Ireland vecti fuerant, cum ceteris turmis Scotorum, et Pictorum, carried they-had-been with the-other troops of-the-Scots and of-the-Picts et cum Norwegensibus, Dacis et ceteris quos conduxerant, and with the-Norwegians the-Danes and the-others whom they-had-bired et omnem Albaniam muro tenus capessunt. Cognita etiam and all Albany the-wall as-far-as they-seize known also Romanorum reversione et reditus denegatione, confidentiores of-the-Romans the-return and of-return the-refusal more-confident solito destructioni insulæ imminent. Ad hæc in than-usual on-the-destruction of-the-island they-press to these-things on edito murorum statuuntur rustici segnes, ad pugnam the-height of-the-walls are-set peasants sluggish for fight inhabiles, ad fugam trementibus præcordiis inepti: qui diebus unfit for flight trembling hearts useless who for-days et noctibus stupido sedili marcebant. Interea non cessant and nights on-a-torpid seat languished meanwhile not cease uncinata hostium tela, quibus miserrimum vulgus de the-hooked of-the-enemies weapons by-which the-most-wretched common-crowd from muris trahebatur, et solo allidebatur. Hoc scilicet the-walls was-dragged and on-the-ground was-dashed this namely eis proficiebat, immaturæ mortis supplicium, qui tali to-them profited of-untimely death the-punishment who by-such funere rapiebantur: quo fratrum, pignorumque suorum death were-snatched by-which of-brothers and-of-pledges their-own miserandas imminentesque pœnas cito exitu devitarent. O the-pitiable and-impending punishments by-swift end they-might-avoid O divinam ob præterita scelera ultionem, ob tot divine on-account-of past crimes vengeance on-account-of of-so-many bellicosorum militum per vesaniam Maximiani absentiam: qui warlike knights through the-madness of-Maximianus the-absence who si in tanta calamitate adessent, non supervenisset populus, if in so-great calamity they-were-present not would-have-come-upon a-people quem non in fugam propellerent: quod manifestum fuit dum which not into flight they-would-drive which manifest was while manebant. Nam et longe posita regna adjiciebant potestati they-remained for also far placed kingdoms they-added to-power suæ, et Britanniam cum tranquillitate possidebant. Sic est, their-own and Britain with tranquillity they-possessed thus it-is cum regnum tutamini rusticorum relinquitur. Quid plura? when a-kingdom to-the-protection of-peasants is-left what more Relictis civitatibus, muroque excelso, iterum civibus fugæ, left the-cities and-the-wall high again for-the-citizens flights iterum dispersiones desperabiliores solito, iterum ab hoste again scatterings more-hopeless than-usual again from the-enemy insectationes, iterum crudeliores strages accelerant: et sicut agni pursuits again more-cruel slaughters hasten and as lambs a lupis, ita miseranda plebs ab inimicis discerpitur. Rursum by wolves so the-pitiable commoners by the-enemies is-torn-apart again igitur miseræ reliquiæ mittunt epistolas ad Agitium Romanæ therefore the-wretched remnants send letters to Agitius of-the-Roman potestatis virum, hoc modo loquentes: Agitio ter consuli, power a-man in-this manner speaking to-Agitius three-times consul Britonum gemitus. Et post pauca quærentes adjiciunt: of-the-Britons the-groans and after a-few-things complaining they-add “Nos mare ad Barbaros, Barbari ad mare repellunt. Interea us the-sea to the-barbarians the-barbarians to the-sea drive-back meanwhile oriuntur duo genera funerum: aut enim submergimur, aut arise two kinds of-deaths either for we-are-drowned or jugulamur.” Nec pro eis quicquam adjutorii habentes, tristes we-are-slaughtered nor for them anything of-help having sad redeunt, atque concivibus repulsam suam denunciant. they-return and to-the-fellow-citizens refusal their-own announce Guethelinus auxilium ab Aldroeno petit

IV · GUETHELINUS ASKS ALDROENUS FOR HELP

Guethelinus crosses to Armorica and offers its king Aldroenus, fourth after Conan, the crown of a Britain that Maximianus stripped and Rome abandoned. Aldroenus refuses, preferring to rule a smaller land in freedom than a richer one under the Roman yoke, but gives his brother Constantine and two thousand knights. Guethelinus hails Constantine as king of deserted Britain, and the knights are chosen and handed over.

Inito itaque consilio, transfretavit Guethelinus Londoniensis entered and-so counsel crossed Guethelinus of-London Archiepiscopus in minorem Britanniam quæ tunc Armorica Archbishop into lesser Britain which then Armorica sive Letavia dicebatur: ut auxilium a confratribus suis or Letavia was-called so-that help from brethren his-own postularet. Regnabat tunc in illa Aldroënus, quartus a he-might-ask reigned then in it Aldroenus fourth from Conano, cui Maximianus regnum illud donaverat, sicut Conan to-whom Maximianus kingdom that had-given as jam prædictum est. Qui viso tantæ reverentiæ viro, already said-before it-has-been who seen of-so-great reverence a-man illum cum honore excepit, causamque adventus sui him with honor received and-the-cause of-the-coming his-own inquisivit. Cui Guethelinus: “Satis patet nobilitati tuæ, inquired to-whom Guethelinus enough lies-open to-nobility your et te in fletum movere potest miseria, quam nos Britones and you to weeping to-move can the-misery which we Britons tui passi sumus, ex quo Maximianus insulam nostram your suffered have from when Maximianus island our suis militibus spoliavit: istudque regnum quod possides of-its-own knights despoiled and-this kingdom which you-possess (et utinam cum diuturna pace possideas) ab ipsis inhabitari and would-that with lasting peace you-may-possess by them to-be-inhabited præcepit. Insurrexerunt etenim in nos, pauperulas nominis ordered rose for against us the-poor of-name nostri reliquias, omnes comprovinciales insulæ, et nostram our remnants all the-neighboring islands and our insulam omni copia divitiarum repletam evacuaverunt: island with-every abundance of-ricbes filled they-emptied ita ut universæ ejusdem nationes, totius cibi baculo, so that all of-the-same the-nations of-the-whole food the-staff excepto venatoriæ artis solatio, careat: nec fuit qui excepted of-hunting art the-comfort lacks nor was-there who obviaret, cum nullus potens, nullus bellicosus ex nostris should-oppose since no powerful-man no warlike-man of ours remanserit. Nam Romani in tædium nostri versi sunt, et has-remained for the-Romans into weariness of-us turned have and omnino auxilium suum abnegaverunt. Ab omni igitur alia altogether help their-own denied from every therefore other spe repulsi adivimus misericordiam tuam, te implorantes, hope repelled we-have-come-to mercy your you imploring ut præsidium adhibeas, et debitum tibi regnum a that protection you-may-supply and the-due to-you kingdom from Barbarorum irruptione protegas. Quis enim alius te invito, of-the-barbarians the-inroad you-may-protect who for other you unwilling diademate Constantini et Maximiani debeat coronari: cum with-the-diadem of-Constantine and of-Maximianus ought to-be-crowned since avi tui, atque proavi ipso insigniti fuerint? the-grandfathers your and great-grandfathers with-it marked have-been Para navigium tuum, et veni: ecce regnum Britanniae in prepare fleet your and come behold the-kingdom of-Britain into manus tuas trado." Ad hæc Aldroënus: "Olim tempus hands your I-hand-over at these-things Aldroenus once a-time fuit, quo non negassem insulam Britanniae accipere, si was in-which not I-would-have-refused the-island of-Britain to-receive if quis eam mihi largitus fuisset: non enim existimo alteram anyone it to-me bestowed had not for I-think another patriam fertiliorē fuisse, dum pace et tranquillitate country more-fertile to-have-been while peace and tranquility frueretur. At nunc quando infortunia accesserunt, vilior it-enjoyed but now when misfortunes have-come cheaper facta est, et mihi et ceteris principibus odiosa. Super made it-has-been and to-me and to-the-other princes hateful above omnia vero mala, potestas Romanorum in tantum nocuit, all indeed evils power of-the-Romans in so-far has-harmed ita ut nemo stabilem dignitatem intra illam habere queat, so that no-one stable dignity within it to-have can quin servitutis iugo oneratus libertatem amittat. Quis but-that of-servitude by-the-yoke burdened liberty he-loses who ergo non mallet minus alibi cum libertate possidere, therefore not would-prefer less elsewhere with liberty to-possess quam divitias ipsius sub iugo servitutis habere? Regnum than the-riches of-it under the-yoke of-servitude to-have kingdom istud quod nunc potestati meæ subditum est, cum honore, this which now to-power my subject is with honor et sine obsequio quod superiori impendam, possideo. and without service which to-a-superior I-should-pay I-possess Unum istud ceteris nationibus præferre prælegi, cum one-thing this to-the-other nations to-prefer I-have-chosen since ipsum cum libertate gubernem: attamen quoniam jus in it with liberty I-govern but-yet since right over insulam avi et atavi mei habuerunt, trado the-island the-grandfathers and forefathers my had I-band-over tibi Constantinum fratrem meum, et duo milia militum, to-you Constantine brother my and two thousand of-knights ut si Deus permiserit, patriam a barbarica irruptione so-that if God will-have-permitted the-country from barbarian inroad liberet, et sese illius diademate insigniat. Habeo namque he-may-free and himself its with-diadem may-mark I-have for quemdam fratrem prædicto nomine vocatum, qui in militia a-certain brother by-the-aforesaid name called who in knighthood ceterisque probitatibus viget: illum tibi cum præfato numero and-other prowess flourishes him to-you with the-aforesaid number committere non diffugiam, si placet ut recipiatur. Nam de to-commit not I-shall-shun if it-pleases that he-be-received for about ampliori militum numero tacendum censeo, cum Gallorum a-larger of-knights number to-be-kept-silent I-judge since of-the-Gauls inquietudo quotidie immineat." Vix finem dicendi fecerat, the-disturbance daily threatens scarcely an-end of-speaking he-had-made cum grates egit ei Archiepiscopus, vocatoque Constantino when thanks gave to-him the-Archbishop and-called Constantine ei in hæc verba arrisit: "Christus vincit: Christus imperat: on-him in these words smiled Christ conquers Christ commands regnat Christus. Ecce rex Britannix desertæ. Adsit reigns Christ behold the-king of-Britain deserted may-be-be-present modo Christus: ecce defensio nostra: ecce spes nostra, et only Christ behold defense our behold hope our and gaudium." Quid plura? Paratis in littore navibus, eliguntur ex joy what more prepared on the-shore the-ships are-chosen from diversis regni partibus milites, et Guethelino traduntur. various of-the-kingdom parts knights and to-Guethelinus are-banded-over Constantinus, rex Britannia factus, a Picto quodam fraude interficitur

V · CONSTANTINE, KING OF BRITAIN

Constantine lands at Totnes, defeats the enemy with the remaining youth of the island, and is crowned at Silchester. He marries a noble Roman wife and has three sons, Constans, whom he gives to the monastery of Amphibalus at Winchester, Aurelius Ambrosius, and Uther Pendragon. After ten years a Pict in his service lures him into a thicket and stabs him.

Cumque omnia parata fuissent, ingressi sunt mare: atque and-when all-things prepared had-been entered they-have the-sea and in Totonesium portum applicuerunt. Nec mora collegerunt in the-Totnes port landed nor delay they-gathered reliquam juventutem insulae, et cum hostibus congressi, the-remaining youth of-the-island and with the-enemies having-engaged victoriam per meritum beati viri adepti sunt. Exin the-victory through the-merit of-the-blessed man obtained they-have thence confluxerunt undique Britones prius dispersi, et facta flowed-together from-everywhere the-Britons before scattered and made intra Silcestriam concione, erexerunt Constantinum in regem, within Silchester an-assembly raised Constantine into king regnique diadema capiti ejus imposuerunt. Dederunt and-of-the-kingdom the-diadem on-head his placed they-gave etiam ei conjugem, ex nobili Romanorum genere ortam, also to-him a-wife from a-noble of-the-Romans race sprung quam Guethelinus Archiepiscopus educaverat: cumque illam whom Guethelinus the-Archbishop had-brought-up and-when her cognovisset, genuit ex illa tres filios: quorum nomina he-had-known he-begot of her three sons whose names fuerunt, Constans, Aurelius Ambrosius, et Utherpendragon. were Constans Aurelius Ambrosius and Uther-Pendragon

Constantem vero primogenitum tradidit in ecclesiam Constans but the-first-born he-banded-over into the-church Amphibali intra Guintoniam, ut monachalem ordinem of-Amphibalus within Winchester that the-monastic order susciperet. Ceteros autem duos, Aurelium videlicet et he-might-take-up the-other moreover two Aurelius namely and Uther, Guethelino nutriendos commisit. Postremo cum decem Uther to-Guethelinus to-be-reared he-committed finally when ten anni præterissent, venit quidam Pictus, qui in obsequio ejus years had-passed came a-certain Pict who in the-service his fuerat, et quasi secretum colloquium habiturus, in virgulto had-been and as-if a-secret conversation about-to-have in a-thicket quodam semotis cunctis eum cultro interfecit. certain removed all-people him with-a-knife killed

Constans gubernationem regni suscipit

VI · CONSTANS TAKES THE KINGDOM

The nobles quarrel over the succession, and Vortigern, consul of the Gewissae, who longs for the crown, goes to the monk Constans. He promises to make him king in exchange for power, and Constans swears to grant whatever he wishes. Vortigern takes him from the cloister to London and, with no archbishop to anoint him, sets the crown on his head himself.

Defuncto igitur Constantino, fuit inter proceres dissensio, having-died therefore Constantine there-was among the-nobles dissension quis in regnum sublimaretur: alii itaque acclamabant who into the-kingdom should-be-raised some and-so acclaimed Aurelium Ambrosium, alii Utherpendragonem, alii ceteros Aurelius Ambrosius others Uther-Pendragon others the-others ex generatione propinquos. Denique cum nunc sic, nunc from the-generation near-ones finally when now thus now aliter contendissent, accessit Vortegirnus consul Gewisseorum otherwise they-had-contended approached Vortigern consul of-the-Gewissae qui omni nisu in regnum anhelabat, et adivit Constantem who with-all effort for the-kingdom panted and went-to Constans monachum, ipsumque in hæc verba allocutus est: Ecce pater the-monk and-him in these words addressed he-has behold father tuus defunctus est, et fratres tui propter ætatem sublimari your died has and brothers your on-account-of age to-be-raised nequeunt: nec alium video in progenie tua quem populus cannot nor another I-see in offspring your whom the-people in regem promoveat. Si igitur consilio meo acquiescere into king might-advance if therefore to-counsel my to-assent volueris, et meam possessionem augmentare, convertam you-will-wish and my possession to-increase I-shall-turn populum in affectum sublimandi te in regnum, et ex the-people into a-desire of-raising you into the-kingdom and from tali habitu, licet ordo repugnet, te abstraham. Quod cum such habit although the-order resist you I-shall-draw which when audisset Constans, maximo fluctuavit gaudio; et quicquid had-beard Constans with-greatest surged joy and whatever callebat ipsum velle, ei jurejurando promittebat. Cepit he-knew him to-wish to-him by-oath he-promised he-took itaque eum Vortegirnus, duxitque regiis ornamentis indutum and-so him Vortigern and-led in-royal ornaments clothed Londonias, atque vix annuente populo in regem erexit. to-London and scarcely nodding the-people into king raised Tunc defunctus fuerat Guethelinus Archiepiscopus, nec fuit then died had-been Guethelinus the-Archbishop nor was-there alius qui ipsum inungere præsumpsisset, quia ex monacho another who him to-anoint would-have-presumed because from a-monk transferebatur. Nec tamen idcirco postposuit diadema, quod he-was-being-transferred nor yet therefore set-aside the-diadem which ipse Vortegirnus episcopi capiti ejus imposuit. he-himself Vortigern of-the-bishop on-head his placed Vortegirnus deliberat, quomodo Constantem solio privare possit

VII • VORTIGERN PLOTS TO DEPOSE CONSTANS

Constans, who learned nothing of ruling in the cloister, leaves the kingdom to Vortigern, who plots to take his place. Vortigern seizes the treasure and the cities and has a hundred Picts brought into the king's household, flattering and feeding them until they hail him as worthy of the crown. He then tells them he is too poor to stay in Britain, and in their drink they resolve to kill the monk.

Sublimatus igitur Constans, totam justitiam regni raised therefore Constans the-whole justice of-the-kingdom Vortegirno commisit: et semetipsum in consilium ejusdem to-Vortigern committed and himself into the-counsel of-the-same tradidit, ita ut nihil absque ipsius præcepto faceret. Quippe handed-over so that nothing without his order he-did indeed debilitas sensus ipsius id faciebat. Nam intra claustrum the-weakness of-sense his this caused for within the-cloister aliud quam regnum tractare didicerat. Quod cum calluisset other than the-kingdom to-handle he-had-learned which when had-perceived Vortegirnus, cœpit apud se deliberare, qualiter in regem Vortigern began with himself to-deliberate how into king sublimari posset. Nam id prius super omnia concupierat. to-be-raised he-might-be-able for this before above all-things he-had-coveted Videbat etenim congruum tempus instare, quo desiderium he-saw for a-fitting time to-press in-which desire suum leviter ad effectum duci poterat. Totum namque his-own easily to effect to-be-led could the-whole for regnum dispositioni ejus commissum fuerat, nec Constans, kingdom to-the-disposition his committed had-been nor Constans qui rex dicebatur, nisi pro umbra principis astabat. Nullius who king was-called except as a-shadow of-a-prince stood-by of-no enim asperitatis, nullius justitiæ fuerat: nec a populo suo, for harshness of-no justice had-been nor by people his-own nec a vicinis gentibus timebatur. Duo autem pueri fratres nor by the-neighboring nations was-be-feared the-two moreover boys brothers ejusdem, Utherpendragon videlicet, atque Aurelius Ambrosius, of-the-same Uther-Pendragon namely and Aurelius Ambrosius in cunis adhuc jacentes, adhuc inhabiles erant, ut in in cradles still lying still unfit were that into regnum promoverentur. Præterea infortunium illud acciderat, the-kingdom they-should-be-advanced besides misfortune that had-befallen quod proceres regni, qui majores natu erant, defuncti that the-nobles of-the-kingdom who greater by-birth were died fuerant, solusque Vortegirnus astutus et sapiens, magnique had and-alone Vortigern sbrewd and wise and-of-great consilii videbatur: ceteri autem pene omnes pueri erant ac counsel seemed the-others moreover almost all boys were and juvenes, peremptisque in anteactis præliis eorundem patribus youths and-destroyed in former battles of-the-same fathers et avunculis, honores utcunque possidebant. Hæc omnia and uncles the-honors somehow they-possessed these-things all igitur comperiens Vortegirnus, meditabatur quo ingenio therefore finding Vortigern considered by-what device facilius et callidius Constantem monachum deponeret, ut more-easily and more-craftily Constans the-monk he-might-depose so-that in locum ipsius erumperet. Quod tandiu differre prælegit, into the-place his he-might-burst which so-long to-put-off he-preferred donec prius diversas nationes melius potestati suæ et until first various nations better to-power his-own and familiaritati submisisset. Cæpit ergo petere thesauros regis familiarity he-had-subjected he-began therefore to-seek the-treasures of-the-king ab ipso in custodiam, ejusque civitates cum munitionibus, from him into custody and-his cities with fortifications dicens, quod rumor asserebat collaterales insulanos supervenire saying that rumor asserted the-neighboring islanders to-come-upon affectasse. Quod cum impetrasset, posuit ubique familiares to-have-desired which when he-had-obtained he-placed everywhere intimates suos qui easdem urbes in fidelitate sua servarent. Deinde his-own who the-same cities in fidelity his-own should-keep then præmeditatam traditionem machinans, Constantem adivit, the-premeditated treachery contriving Constans he-went-to dixitque illi oportere numerum familiæ suæ augmentare, and-said to-him to-behoove the-number of-household his-own to-increase ut securius superventuris hostibus resisteret. Cui so-that more-securely about-to-come-upon enemies he-might-resist to-whom Constans: “Nonne omnia dispositioni tuæ commisi? Fac Constans not all-things to-disposition your I-have-committed do igitur quæcunque volueris: ita tamen, ut in fidelitate mea therefore whatever you-will-wish so yet that in fidelity my permaneant. Ad hæc Vortegirnus: Dictum est mihi, they-may-remain at these-things Vortigern said it-has-been to-me Pictos velle conducere Dacos et Norwegenses super nos, ut the-Picts to-wish to-bring the-Danes and the-Norwegians upon us so-that maximam inquietudinem inferant: quamobrem laudarem, greatest disturbance they-may-bring wherefore I-would-commend et consilium saluberrimum esse censeo ut quosdam ex and counsel most-wholesome to-be I-judge that some of Pictis in curia tua retineas, qui mediatores inter te et the-Picts in court your you-should-keep who mediators between you and ceteros existant. Nam si verum est quod rebellare inceperint, the-others may-be for if true it-is that to-rebel they-have-begun explorabunt tibi consociorum suorum machinationes et they-will-search-out for-you of-comrades their-own the-contrivances and versutias, quas levius vitare poteris. Ecce occulta occulti tricks which more-easily to-avoid you-will-be-able behold the-hidden of-a-hidden inimici proditio. Non enim id laudabat, ut salus inde enemy treachery not for this he-commended that safety thence proveniret Constanti: sed quia sciebat Pictos gentem esse should-come to-Constans but because he-knew the-Picts a-people to-be instabilem, et ad omne scelus paratam. Inebriati ergo, sive in unstable and for every crime ready made-drunk therefore or into iram inducti, commoveri possent facile adversus regem, ita ut anger led to-be-moved they-could easily against the-king so that absque cunctamine ipsum interficerent. Unde si id contigisset: without hesitation him they-would-kill whence if this had-happened haberet aditum sese promovendi in regem, ut sæpius he-would-have an-approach himself of-advancing into king as more-often affectaverat. Directis itaque in Scotiam nuntii, invitavit he-had-desired directed and-so into Scotland messengers he-invited centum Pictos milites: ipsosque intra familiam regis recepit. a-hundred Pictish knights and-them within the-household of-the-king received Receptos autem honorabat super omnes, diversisque donariis the-received moreover he-honored above all and-with-various gifts ditabat: cibus etiam et potibus ultra modum satiabat, ita ut he-enriched with-foods also and with-drinks beyond measure he-sated so that pro rege illum haberent. Adorantes ergo illum per plateas for king him they-held worshiping therefore him through the-streets psallebant, dicentes: Dignus est Vortegirnus imperio, dignus they-sang saying worthy is Vortigern of-empire worthy est sceptro Britannia: Constans vero indignus. Ad hæc is of-the-scepter of-Britain Constans but unworthy at these-things Vortegirnus magis ac magis eis donare nitebatur, ut magis Vortigern more and more on-them to-bestow strove that more placeret. At cum amorem eorum omnino adeptus fuisset, he-might-please but when the-love of-them altogether obtained he-had illos inebriavit, dixitque se ex Britannia velle recedere, them he-made-drunk and-said himself from Britain to-wish to-withdraw ut ampliores possessiones perquireret. Dicebat autem so-that ampler possessions he-might-seek he-said moreover illis id tantillum quod habebat non posse sufficere, ut to-them that so-little which he-had not to-be-able to-suffice that quinquaginta militibus stipendia donaret. Deinde quasi tristes, to-fifty knights pay he-might-give then as-if sad secessit ad hospitium suum, ipsos vero in aula potantes he-withdrew to lodging his-own them indeed in the-hall drinking deseruit. Quo viso, ultra quam credi potest contristati sunt he-deserted which seen beyond what to-be-believed can saddened were Picti, arbitantes verum esse quod dixerat: murmurantesque the-Picts thinking true to-be what he-had-said and-murmuring ad invicem dicebant, “Ut quid monachum istum vivere to each-other they-said to what-end monk this to-live permittimus? ut quid non interficimus eum, ut Vortegirnus do-we-permit to what-end not do-we-kill him so-that Vortigern regni solio potiatur? Quis etenim alius ei in of-the-kingdom throne may-gain-possession who for other to-him in regnum succederet? dignus namque est imperio et honore, the-kingdom would-succeed worthy for is-he of-empire and of-honor dignus etiam omni dignitate, qui nos ditare non cessat. worthy also of-every dignity who us to-enrich not ceases

Constans vi obtruncatur

VIII • CONSTANS IS MURDERED

The Picts burst into Constans' chamber, kill him, and bring his head to Vortigern, who weeps in public and rejoices in secret. He has the murderers beheaded, though some think the plot his own. The guardians of Aurelius Ambrosius and Uther Pendragon flee with the boys to King Budicius in lesser Britain.

Post hæc irrupentes thalamum, impetum fecerunt after these-things bursting-into the-chamber an-attack they-made in Constantem, peremptoque illo, caput coram Vortegirno upon Constans and-destroyed him the-head before Vortigern tulerunt. Quod cum aspexisset Vortegirnus, quasi contristatus they-carried which when had-seen Vortigern as-if saddened in fletum erupit: nec unquam prius majori gaudio into weeping burst nor ever before with-greater joy fluctuaverat. Vocatis tamen civibus Londoniæ (nam id intra had-be-surged called yet the-citizens of-London for this within eam contigerat) iussit cunctos proditores alligari, alligatosque it had-happened he-ordered all the-traitors to-be-bound and-the-bound decollari, quia tantum scelus facere præsumperant. Fuerunt to-be-beheaded because so-great a-crime to-do they-had-presumed there-were autem qui existimabant proditionem illam per Vortegirnum moreover who thought treachery that through Vortigern fuisse machinatum: Pictos vero nullatenus nisi assensu to-have-been contrived the-Picts indeed by-no-means except with-the-assent illius incœpisse. Fuerunt etiam qui nihil hæsitantes, his to-have-begun there-were also who nothing hesitating ipsum a tali crimine purgabant. Re tandem in dubio him of such crime cleared the-matter at-last in doubt relicta, nutritores duorum fratrum, Aurelii Ambrosii, atque left the-fosterers of-the-two brothers of-Aurelius Ambrosius and Utherpendragon, diffugerunt cum eis in minorem Britanniam, Uther-Pendragon fled with them into lesser Britain timentes ne a Vortegirno perimerentur. Ibidem excepit fearing lest by Vortigern they-might-be-destroyed there received illos Budecius rex, et honore quo decebat educavit.

them Budicius the-king and with-honor with-which it-was-fitting brought-up

Vortegirnus sibi imperium sumit

IX · VORTIGERN TAKES THE CROWN

Vortigern crowns himself. When his treachery becomes known, the peoples of the islands whom the Picts brought into Albany rise against him, and the Picts strive to avenge their comrades. He also fears Aurelius Ambrosius and Uther Pendragon, who are said to be grown and building a fleet to return.

At Vortegirnus cum neminem sibi parem in regno but Vortigern when no-one to-himself equal in the-kingdom conspexisset, capiti suo diadema regni imposuit, et he-had-seen on-head his-own the-diadem of-the-kingdom placed and coprincipes suos supergressus est. Proditione ejus tandem the-fellow-princes his-own surpassed has the-treachery his at-last divulgata, insurrexerunt in eum comprovincialium insularum spread-abroad rose against him of-the-neighboring islands populi, quos Picti in Albaniam conduxerant. Indignati the-peoples whom the-Picts into Albany had-brought indignant namque Picti, commilitones suos, qui propter Constantem for the-Picts the-comrades their-own who on-account-of Constans interfecti fuerant, in ipsum vindicare nitebantur. Anxiabatur killed had-been on him to-avenge strove was-troubled igitur Vortegirnus quotidie, damnumque exercitus sui in therefore Vortigern daily and-the-loss of-army his-own in præliando patiebatur. Anxiabatur etiam ex alia parte timore fighting suffered he-was-troubled also from the-other side by-fear Aurelii Ambrosii, fratrisque sui Utherpendragon: qui, ut of-Aurelius Ambrosius and-of-brother his-own Uther-Pendragon who as prædictum est, in minorem Britanniam propter ipsum said-before it-has-been into lesser Britain on-account-of him diffugerant. Quotidianus etenim rumor aures ejus impleverat, had-fled daily for rumor the-ears his had-filled ipsos jam adultos esse, maximumque navigium construxisse, them already grown to-be and-a-very-great fleet to-have-built atque reditum suum in debitum regnum velle moliri. and return their-own into the-due kingdom to-wish to-attempt Hengist et Horsus in Britanniam perveniunt

X · HENGIST AND HORSA COME TO BRITAIN

Three long ships of armed Saxons land in Kent under the brothers Hengist and Horsa, exiled by their custom of sending out surplus youth by lot. They worship Woden, after whom Wednesday is named, and the goddess Frea of Friday. Vortigern deplors their faith but welcomes their arms, and they rout the Picts beyond the Humber.

Interea applicuerunt tres celoces, quas longas naves dicimus, meanwhile landed three keels which long ships we-call in partes Cantiaë, plenæ armatis militibus, quibus duo in the-parts of-Kent full with-armed knights to-which two fratres Horsus et Hengistus ducatum præstabant. Erat tunc brothers Horsa and Hengist leadership offered was then Vortegirnus Doroberniæ, quæ nunc Cantuaria dicitur, ut Vortigern at-Dorobernia which now Canterbury is-called as consuetudo eum conduxerat, civitatem illam sæpissime visitare. custom him had-led city that most-often to-visit Cui cum retulissent nuncii, ignotos viros magnæque staturæ to-whom when had-reported messengers unknown men and-of-great stature homines in magnis navibus applicuisse, dedit pacem: et ipsos persons in great ships to-have-landed he-gave peace and them ad se conduci præcepit. Mox ut conducti fuerunt, vertit to himself to-be-brought ordered soon when brought they-were he-turned oculos suos in duos Germanos. Nam ipsi præ ceteris et eyes his-own upon the-two brothers for they before the-others both nobilitate et decore præminebant. Cumque ceteros etiam in-nobility and in-comeliness stood-out and-when the-others also aspectu peragrasset, quæsivit quæ patria produxerat illos, et with-a-look he-had-gone-over he-asked which country had-brought-forth them and quæ causa eos in regnum suum direxerat. Cui Hengistus what cause them into kingdom his-own had-directed to-whom Hengist pro aliis respondere incepit: nam ipsum et maturior for the-others to-answer began for him both riper ætas et sapientia præponebat. “Rex ceterorum nobilissime, age and wisdom set-before O-king of-the-others most-noble Saxonica tellus nos edidit, una ex Germaniæ regionibus. the-Saxon land us brought-forth one of of-Germany regions Causa hæc adventus nostri est, ut tibi sive alteri principi the-cause this of-the-coming our is that to-you or to-another prince obsequium nostrum offeramus. Fueramus etenim expulsi a service our we-may-offer we-had-been for driven from patria nostra, nec ob aliud, nisi quia regni consuetudo country our nor for other-thing except because of-the-kingdom the-custom expetebat. Consuetudo namque in patria nostra est, ut cum demanded the-custom for in country our is that when hominum abundantia in eadem supervenerit, convenient ex of-men an-abundance in the-same will-have-come-upon come-together from diversis provinciis principes, et totius regni juvenes coram various provinces the-princes and of-the-whole kingdom the-youths before se venire præcipiunt: deinde projecta sorte potiores atque themselves to-come they-order then thrown the-lot the-abler and fortiores eligunt, qui extera regna petituri, victum sibi stronger they-choose who foreign kingdoms about-to-seek food for-themselves perquirant, et patria ex qua orti sunt a superflua may-seek-out and the-country from which sprung they-have from the-superfluous multitudine liberetur. Superfluente igitur noviter in regno multitude may-be-freed overflowing therefore newly in kingdom nostro hominum copia, convenerunt principes, sortemque our of-men the-host came-together the-princes and-the-lot projicientes elegerunt juventutem istam quam in præsentia throwing chose youth this which in the-presence tua cernis: præceperuntque ut consuetudini ab antiquo your you-see and-ordered that to-the-custom from of-old statutæ parerent. Nos quoque duos Germanos, quorum ego established they-should-obey us also two brothers of-whom I Hengistus, iste Horsus nuncupatur, eis duces præfecerunt.

Hengist this-one Horsa is-called to-them as-leaders they-set Nam ex ducum progenie progeniti fuimus. Obedientes for from of-dukes offspring begotten we-had-been obeying ergo decretis ab ævo sancitis, ingressi sumus maria, therefore to-the-decrees from an-age ballowed entered we-have the-seas regnumque tuum duce Mercurio petivimus.” Ad nomen itaque and-kingdom your as-guide Mercury we-have-sought at the-name and-so Mercurii erecto vultu rex, inquit cujusmodi religionem of-Mercury with-raised face the-king asks of-what-kind religion habent. Cui Hengistus: “Deos patrios, Saturnum, Jovem, they-had to-whom Hengist the-gods of-the-fathers Saturn Jupiter atque ceteros qui mundum gubernant, colimus: maxime autem and the-others who the-world govern we-worship most moreover Mercurium, quem Woden lingua nostra appellamus. Huic Mercury whom Woden in-tongue our we-call to-this-one veteres nostri dicaverunt quartam septimanæ feriam, quæ elders our dedicated the-fourth of-the-week day which usque in hodiernum diem nomen Wodensdai de nomine all-the-way into today's day the-name Wednesday from the-name ipsius sortita est. Post illum colimus deam inter ceteras his got has after him we-worship a-goddess among the-others potentissimam, nomine Fream, cui etiam dedicaverunt most-powerful by-name Frea to-whom also they-dedicated sextam feriam, quam de nomine ejus Fridai vocamus.” the-sixth day which from the-name her Friday we-call Ad hæc Vortegirinus: “De credulitate vestra, quæ potius at these-things Vortigern about credulity your which rather incredulitas dici potest, vehementer doleo. De adventu incredulity to-be-called can vehemently I-grieve about the-coming autem vestro gaudeo, quia in congruo tempore vos necessitati moreover your I-rejoice because in a-fitting time you to-need meæ, sive Deus, sive alius obtulit. Opprimunt etenim me my either God or another has-offered press for me inimici mei undique, et si laborem præliorum meorum enemies my from-everywhere and if the-labor of-battles my mecum communicaveritis, retinebo vos honorifice intra with-me you-will-have-shared I-shall-keep you honorably within regnum meum, et diversis muneribus et agris ditabo.” kingdom my and with-various gifts and fields I-shall-enrich Paruerunt ilico Barbari, et fœdere confirmato in curia obeyed on-the-spot the-barbarians and the-pact confirmed in the-court ipsius remanserunt. Nec mora, emergentes ex Albania Picti, his remained nor delay emerging from Albany the-Picts exercitum valde grandem fecerunt, cœperuntque Aquilonares an-army very great made and-began the-northern partes insulæ devastare. Cumque id Vortegirno nunciatum parts of-the-island to-lay-waste and-when this to-Vortigern announced fuisset, milites suos collegit: atque trans Humbrum eis had-been knights his-own he-gathered and beyond the-Humber to-them obviam perrexit. Deinde ut cominus convenerunt hinc to-meet proceeded then when hand-to-hand they-came-together on-this-side et illinc et cives et hostes, acerrimam pugnam commiserunt: and on-that both citizens and enemies a-most-fierce fight joined nec multum oportuit cives pugnare: nam Saxones qui nor much was-it-needed the-citizens to-fight for the-Saxons who aderant, tam viriliter praeliabantur, ita ut hostes, qui prius were-present so manfully fought so that the-enemies who before vincere solebant, sine mora in fugam propellerentur. to-conquer were-accustomed without delay into flight were-driven Hengist plures e Germania arcessit: territorium in Britannia adipiscitur

XI · HENGIST WINS LAND

Vortigern gives Hengist land in Lindsey, and Hengist urges him to bring more men from Germany. Refused a city because he is a pagan foreigner, Hengist asks only for as much land as a thong can encircle. He cuts a bull's hide into a single thong, rings a rocky place, and builds the castle called Kaercorreï, or Thanceaster.

Vortegirrus ergo per illos victoria potitus, donaria sua Vortigern therefore through them of-the-victory having-gained gifts his-own eis ampliavit, atque eorum duci Hengisto agros plurimos to-them enlarged and their to-leader Hengist fields very-many dedit in Londesïa regione, quibus sese et commilitones suos gave in the-Lindsey region by-which himself and comrades his-own sustentaret. Hengistus ergo cum esset vir doctus atque he-might-sustain Hengist therefore since he-was a-man learned and astutus, comperta amicitia quam adversus se rex gerebat, shrewd discovered the-friendship which towards him the-king bore eum hoc sermone adivit: “Domine, undique inquietant him with-this speech approached O-lord from-everywhere harass te inimici tui, et pauci sunt ex concivibus tuis qui te you enemies your and few are of fellow-citizens your who you diligunt: omnes minantur tibi, dicuntque se conducturos love all threaten you and-say themselves about-to-bring Aurelium Ambrosium ex Armorico tractu, ut te deposito, Aurelius Ambrosius from the-Armorican tract so-that you deposed ipsum in regem promoveant. Si placet tibi, mittamus in him into king they-may-advance if it-pleases you let-us-send into patriam nostram: et ex ea milites invitemus, ut numerus country our and from it knights let-us-invite so-that number noster ad certandum augeatur. Sed unum a discretione our for contending may-be-increased but one-thing from the-discretion clementiæ tuæ implorarem, nisi repulsam pati timerem.” Ad of-clemency your I-would-implore unless refusal to-suffer I-feared at hæc Vortegirrus: “Mitte ergo legatos tuos ad Germaniam, these-things Vortigern send therefore envoys your to Germany et invita quos volueris, et pete a me quod desideras, et and invite whom you-will-wish and ask from me what you-desire and nullam repulsam patieris.” Cui inclinato capite gratias egit no refusal you-will-suffer to-whom bowed head thanks gave Hengistus, et ait: “Ditasti me largis mansionibus et Hengist and says you-have-enriched me with-large dwellings and agris, nec tamen eo honore quo ducem decuerat, cum fields nor yet with-that honor with-which a-duke had-befitted since duces me progenuerint. Quippe inter cetera danda esset dukes me have-begotten indeed among other-things to-be-given would-be mihi civitas sive oppidum, ut dignior inter proceres tui to-me a-city or a-town so-that more-worthy among the-nobles of-your regni censerer. Dignitas namque consulis, sive principis kingdom I-might-be-thought the-dignity for of-a-consul or of-a-prince adhibenda esset, ex utrorumque genere edito.” Cui to-be-applied would-be from of-both the-race to-one-born to-whom Vortegirnus: “Prohibitum sum hujusmodi donaria vobis largiri, Vortigern forbidden I-am such gifts on-you to-bestow quia alienigenæ estis et pagani, nec adhuc vestros mores et because foreigners you-are and pagans nor yet your ways and consuetudines agnosco, ut vos concivibus meis parificem: customs I-know that you to-fellow-citizens my I-might-make-equal nec, si vos ut proprios cives existimassem, inciperem donare, nor if you as my-own citizens I-had-thought I-would-begin to-give quod procures regni mei dissuaderent.” Cui Hengistus: what the-nobles of-kingdom my would-dissuade to-whom Hengist “Concede,” inquit, “mihi servo tuo, quantum una corrigia grant he-says to-me servant your as-much-as one thong possit ambiri intra terram quam dedisti, ut ibidem can to-be-gone-round within the-land which you-have-given so-that there promontorium ædificem, quo me, si opus fuerit, recipiam. a-stronghold I-may-build in-which me if need will-have-been I-may-receive Fidelis etenim tibi sum, et fui et ero: et in fidelitate faithful for to-you I-am and I-have-been and I-shall-be and in fidelity tua quæ agere desidero, faciam. Motus igitur rex ipsius your what to-do I-desire I-shall-do moved therefore the-king his verbis, ejusdem petitioni acquievit: præcepitque legatos suos by-words of-the-same to-the-petition assented and-ordered envoys his-own in Germaniam mittere: ut milites ex ea invitati festinatum into Germany to-send so-that knights from it invited hastened auxilium darent. Nec mora, missa in Germaniam legatione, help should-give nor delay sent into Germany the-embassy cepit Hengistus corium tauri, atque ipsum in unam corrigiam took Hengist the-hide of-a-bull and it into one thong redegit. Exin saxosum locum quem maxima cautela elegerat, reduced thence a-rocky place which with-greatest caution he-had-chosen circuivit cum corrigia, et intra spatium metatum castellum he-went-round with the-thong and within the-space measured-out a-castle ædificare cœpit. Quod ut ædificatum fuit, traxit nomen ex to-build began which when built it-was it-drew its-name from corrigia, quia cum ea fuerat metatum. Dictum namque fuit the-thong because with it it-had-been measured-out called for it-was postmodum Britannice Kaercorrei: Saxonice vero Thancastre. afterward in-British Kaercorrei in-Saxon indeed Thanceaster Quod Latino sermone castrum corrigiæ appellamus. which in-the-Latin speech the-castle of-the-thong we-call Vortegirnus Rowenam, Hengisti filiam matrimonio ducit

XII · VORTIGERN MARRIES ROWENA

Eighteen ships arrive from Germany with Hengist's beautiful daughter Rowena. At a feast she offers Vortigern a golden cup with "Lord King, be hale"; he answers "Drink hale," and the custom endures in Britain. Drunk, and with Satan in his heart, Vortigern asks for the pagan girl, and Hengist gives her in exchange for Kent, which turns the nobles and Vortigern's sons against him.

Interea vero reversi sunt nuncii ex Germania, meanwhile indeed returned have the-messengers from Germany conduxeruntque decem et octo naves electis militibus and-brought ten and eight ships with-chosen knights plenas. Conduxerunt etiam Hengisti filiam nomine full they-brought also of-Hengist the-daughter by-name Rowenam: cujus pulchritudo nulli secunda videbatur.
Rowena whose beauty to-none second seemed Postquam autem venerunt, invitavit Hengistus Vortegirnum after moreover they-came invited Hengist Vortigern regem in domum suam, ut et novum ædificium et the-king into house his-own so-that both the-new building and milites novos qui applicuerant videret. Venit ilico rex the-knights new who had-landed he-might-see came on-the-spot the-king privatim, et tam subitum opus laudavit, et milites invitatos privately and so sudden a-work praised and the-knights invited retinuit. Ut vero regiis epulis reffectus fuit, egressa est kept when indeed with-royal feasts refreshed he-was come-out has puella de thalamo, aureum scyphum vino plenum ferens: the-girl from the-chamber a-golden cup with-wine full carrying accedens deinde propius, regi flexis genibus dixit: "Laford approaching then nearer to-the-king bent knees she-said Lord King wacht heil!" At ille, visa facie puellæ, admiratus est King be hale but he seen the-face of-the-girl wondered has tantum ejus decorem, et incaluit. Deinde interpretem suum so-much her comeliness and grew-hot then interpreter his-own interrogavit quid puella dixerat, et quid ei respondere he-asked what the-girl had-said and what to-her to-answer debeat. Cui interpretes dixit: "Vocavit te dominum regem, he-ought to-whom the-interpreter said she-has-called you lord king et vocabulo salutationis honoravit. Quod autem respondere and with-a-word of-greeting honored what moreover to-answer debes, est, Drinc heil!" Respondens deinde Vortegirrus. you-ought is drink hale answering then Vortigern Drinc heil! jussit puellam potare: cepitque de manu drink hale he-ordered the-girl to-drink and-took from the-hand ipsius scyphum, et osculatus est eam, et potavit: ab illo her the-cup and kissed he-has her and drank from that die usque in hodiernum diem, mansit consuetudo illa in day all-the-way into today's day remained custom that in Britannia, quod in conviviis qui potat, ad alium dicit: Wacht Britain that at banquets who drinks to another says be heil! qui vero post ipsum recipit potum, respondet: Drinc heil! hale who indeed after him receives the-drink answers drink hale Vortegirnus autem diverso genere potus inebriatus, intrante Vortigern moreover with-various kind of-drink made-drunk entering Satana in cor ejus, puellam amavit, eamque a patre ejus Satan into heart his the-girl loved and-her from father her postulavit. Intraverat inquam Satanas in cor ejus: quia cum asked had-entered I-say Satan into heart his because though Christianus esset, cum Pagana coire desiderabat. Hengistus a-Christian he-was with a-Pagan to-lie he-desired Hengist ilico, ut erat prudens, animi regis levitate comperta: on-the-spot as he-was prudent of-mind of-the-king the-levity discovered fratrem suum Horsum, ceterosque majores natu qui secum brother his-own Horsa and-the-other greater by-birth who with-him aderant, consuluit quid de regis petitione faceret. Sed were-present consulted what about of-the-king the-petition he-should-do but omnibus unum consilium fuit, ut puella regi daretur: for-all one counsel was that the-girl to-the-king should-be-given et ut pro ea ab illo provinciam Cantiaë peterent. Nec mora: and that for her from him the-province of-Kent they-should-ask nor delay data fuit puella Vortegirno, et provincia Cantiaë Hengisto, given was the-girl to-Vortigern and the-province of-Kent to-Hengist nesciente Gorangano Comite, qui in eadem regnabat. Nupsit not-knowing Gorangonus the-Count who in the-same reigned married itaque rex in eadem nocte Paganæ: quæ ei ultra and-so the-king on the-same night the-Pagan-woman who to-him beyond modum placuit. Unde in inimicitiam procerum et filiorum measure pleased whence into enmity of-the-nobles and of-sons suorum citissime incidit. Generaverat namque filios primitus, his-own most-swiftly he-fell he-had-begotten for sons first quibus erant nomina, Vortimer, Katigernus et Pascentius. to-whom were names Vortimer Katigern and Pascentius Episcopi Germanus et Lupus Britannos visunt: Vortimer Saxones prælio fundit

XIII · GERMANUS, LUPUS, AND VORTIMER

The bishops Germanus and Lupus restore the faith corrupted by the pagans and the Pelagian heresy. Hengist brings in his son Octa, Ebissa, and Cerdich with three hundred ships, until the Britons fear the pagans and depose Vortigern for his son Vortimer. Vortimer defeats the Saxons in four battles, Horsa and Katigern killing each other, and the Saxons sail home from Thanet, leaving their women and children.

In tempore illo venit Sanctus Germanus Altisiodorensis in time that came Saint Germanus of-Auxerre episcopus, et Lupus Trecensis episcopus, ut verbum Dei bishop and Lupus of-Troyes bishop so-that the-word of-God Britonibus prædicarent. Corrupta namque fuerat Christianitas to-the-Britons they-might-preach corrupted for had-been Christianity eorum, tum propter Paganos quos rex in societatem their both on-account-of the-Pagans whom the-king into fellowship eorum posuerat, tum propter Pelagianam hæresim, cuius their bad-placed and on-account-of the-Pelagian heresy whose venenum ipsos multis diebus affecerat. Beatorum igitur poison them for-many days had-afflicted of-the-blessed therefore virorum prædicatione, restituta est inter eos veræ fidei men by-the-preaching restored was among them of-the-true faith religio, quia multis miraculis quotidie præclarebant: multa the-religion because by-many miracles daily they-shone-forth many per eos miracula ostendebat Deus, quæ Gildas in tractatu through them miracles showed God which Gildas in treatise suo luculento sermone paravit. Data autem puella regi, his-own in-lucid speech set-forth given moreover the-girl to-the-king ut prædictum est, dixit Hengistus ad eum: “Ego sum as said-before it-has-been said Hengist to him I am pater tuus, et consiliator tibi esse debeo: noli præterire father your and counselor to-you to-be I-ought do-not pass-over consilium meum: quia omnes inimicos tuos virtute gentis counsel my because all enemies your by-the-valor of-people meæ superabis. Invitemus adhuc filium meum Octam cum my you-will-overcome let-us-invite further son my Octa with fratre suo Ebissa: Bellatores enim viri sunt. Da eis brother his-own Ebissa warriors for men they-are give to-them regiones, quæ sunt in Aquilonaribus partibus Britanniae juxta the-regions which are in the-northern parts of-Britain beside murum, inter Deiram et Scotiam. Detinebunt namque the-wall between Deira and Scotland they-will-hold-back for ibidem Barbarorum impetum: ita quod in pace citra there of-the-barbarians the-attack so that in peace on-this-side-of Humbrum remanebis.” Paruit Vortegirnus, præcepitque eis the-Humber you-will-remain obeyed Vortigern and-ordered them invitare quoscunque scirent in auxilium sibi valere. Missis to-invite whomever they-knew in help to-him to-avail sent illico legatis: venerunt Octa et Ebissa et Cerdich cum on-the-spot envoys came Octa and Ebissa and Cerdich with trecentis navibus armata manu repletis, quos omnes benigne three-hundred ships with-armed band filled whom all kindly suscepit Vortegirnus: maximisque muneribus donavit. Vincebat received Vortigern and-with-greatest gifts presented he-conquered namque inimicos suos per eos, et in omni prælio for enemies his-own through them and in every battle victor existerat. Hengistus etiam paulatim naves invitabat, victor he-was Hengist also little-by-little ships invited et quotidie numerum suum augebat. Quod cum vidissent and daily number his-own increased which when had-seen Britones, prodicionem eorum timentes, regi dixerunt, ut the-Britons treachery their fearing to-the-king they-said that ipsos e finibus regni sui expelleret. Non enim them from the-borders of-kingdom his-own he-should-drive-out not for debebant Pagani Christianis communicare, nec intromitti, ought the-Pagans with-Christians to-share nor to-be-let-in quia Christiana lex prohibebat. Insuper tanta multitudo because the-Christian law forbade moreover so-great a-multitude advenerat, ita ut civibus terrori essent. Jam nesciebatur had-come so that to-the-citizens for-terror they-were already it-was-not-known quis Paganus esset, quis Christianus: quia Pagani filias who Pagan was who Christian because the-Pagans the-daughters et consanguineas eorum sibi associaverant. Talia and kinswomen their to-themselves had-joined such-things objicientes, dissuadebant regi illos retinere, ne in proditione putting-forward they-dissuaded to-the-king them to-keep lest in treachery aliqua cives supergrederentur. At Vorteginus diffugiebat some the-citizens they-might-overcome but Vortigern shunned consilio eorum acquiescere: quia super omnes gentes propter to-counsel their to-assent because above all peoples on-account-of conjugem suam ipsos diligebat. Quod cum vidissent Britones, wife his-own them he-loved which when had-seen the-Britons deseruerunt ilico Vorteginum, et unanimiter Vortimerium they-deserted on-the-spot Vortigern and with-one-mind Vortimer filium ejus in regem erexerunt: qui eis acquiescens, per son his into king raised who to-them assenting in omnia incepit expellere Barbaros, atque oppugnare, et diris all-things began to-drive-out the-barbarians and to-assault and with-dire irruptionibus afficere. Quatuor bella gessit cum eis: et in inroads to-afflict four wars he-waged with them and in omnibus superavit. Primum super fluvium Derwent. Secundum all overcame the-first upon the-river Derwent the-second super vadum Episford: ubi convenerunt Horsus et Catigernus upon the-ford Episford where came-together Horsa and Katigern alter filius Vortegirni. Congressuque facto ceciderunt ambo, the-other son of-Vortigern and-an-engagement made fell both alter alterum letaliter aggressi. Tertium bellum super littus one the-other mortally having-attacked the-third war upon the-shore maris: quo naves muliebriter ingressi, diffugerunt hostes: of-the-sea where the-ships in-womanly-fashion having-entered fled the-enemies et insulam Thanet pro refugio adiverunt. At Vortimerius and the-island Thanet for refuge went-to but Vortimer illos ibidem obsedit, et navali prælio quotidie infestabat. them there besieged and with-naval battle daily harassed Cumque Britonum impetum diutius tolerare nequirent, and-when of-the-Britons the-attack longer to-bear they-could-not miserunt Vortegirnum regem, qui in omnibus bellis cum they-sent Vortigern the-king who in all wars with ipsis aderat, ad filium suum Vortimerium, petentes licentiam them was-present to son his-own Vortimer asking leave abscedendi, petendique Germaniam cum salute. Cumque inde of-departing and-of-seeking Germany with safety and-when thence colloquium haberent, interim ingressi sunt Celoces suas, a-parley they-were-having meanwhile entered they-have keels their-own relictisque mulieribus et filiis, in Germaniam redierunt. and-left the-women and children into Germany returned

Vortimerius morbo moritur

XIV · VORTIMER DIES OF SICKNESS

Vortimer restores the Britons' possessions and renews the churches, but the devil moves his stepmother Rowena to have him poisoned. Dying, he gives his treasure to his knights and urges them to defend the country. He asks for a bronze pyramid at the Saxons' landing place with his body buried on top of it to frighten them away, but the Britons bury him at Trinovantum.

Victoria deinde potitus Vortimerius, cœpit reddere of-the-victory then having-gained Vortimer began to-return possessiones ereptas civibus, ipsosque diligere ac honorare, the-possessiones snatched to-the-citizens and-them to-love and to-honor et ecclesias jubente sancto Germano renovare. Sed bonitati and the-churches ordering holy Germanus to-renew but to-the-goodness ejus invidit ilico diabolus: qui in corde Rowenæ novercæ his envied on-the-spot the-devil who into the-heart of-Rowena stepmother suæ ingressus, eam incitavit, ut neci ipsius immineret: his-own having-entered her roused that on-the-death his she-should-press quæ ascitis universis veneficiis, dedit illi per quendam who summoned all poisons gave to-him through a-certain familiarem suum venenum potare, quem innumerabilibus intimate her-own poison to-drink whom with-innumerable donariis corruerat. Quod cum hausisset inclytus bellator ille, gifts she-had-corrupted which when had-drunk renowned warrior that subita infirmitate gravatus est: ita ut nullam spem vivendi with-sudden sickness weighed-down he-was so that no hope of-living haberet. Nec mora, jussit omnes milites suos venire ad se, he-had nor delay he-ordered all knights his-own to-come to himself et indicata morte quæ superveniebat, distribuit eis aurum and shown the-death which was-coming-on he-distributed to-them the-gold atque argentum suum, et quicquid atavi congesserant: and silver his-own and whatever the-forefathers had-heaped-up flentes quoque et ejulantes consolabatur, docens viam the-weeping also and wailing he-consolated teaching the-way universæ carnis esse quam iturus erat. Audaces autem et of-all flesh to-be which about-to-go he-was the-bold moreover and bellicosos juvenes, qui ei in debellationibus suis adstare warlike youths who to-him in warrings his-own to-stand-by solebant, hortabatur, ut pro patria pugnantes, eam ab were-accustomed he-urged that for the-country fighting it from hostili irruptione tueri niterentur. Audacia autem maxima hostile inroad to-guard they-should-strive boldness moreover greatest docente, jussit sibi pyramidem fieri æream, locarique teaching he-ordered for-himself a-pyramid to-be-made of-bronze and-to-be-placed in portu quo Saxones applicare solebant. Corpus vero suum in the-port where the-Saxons to-land were-accustomed body indeed his-own postquam defunctum foret, sepeliri jussit desuper, ut after dead it-should-be to-be-buried he-ordered on-top so-that viso busto Barbari retortis velis in Germaniam redirent. seen the-tomb the-barbarians turned-back sails into Germany should-return Dicebat enim, neminem illorum audere propius accedere, he-said for no-one of-them to-dare nearer to-approach si etiam bustum ipsius aspicerent. O maximam viri if even the-tomb his they-saw O greatest of-the-man audaciam, qui eis quibus vivus terrori fuerat, post obitum boldness who for-them to-whom alive for-terror he-had-been after death etiam ut timeretur optabat. Sed illo defuncto, aliud egerunt even that he-be-feared wished but him having-died otherwise did Britones, quia in urbe Trinovanti corpus ejus sepelierunt. the-Britons because in the-city of-Trinovantum the-body his they-buried Hengistus, qui fuerat fugatus, in Britanniam redit: principes regni fraude perimit, Vortegirnum captum in custodia servat

XV · THE TREACHERY OF THE LONG KNIVES

Restored to the throne, Vortigern recalls Hengist at Rowena's urging, but Hengist comes with three hundred thousand men. Told the Britons mean to fight, he asks for a day and place to settle terms, and Vortigern summons both peoples near the monastery of Ambrius on the Kalends of May. Hengist's men hide long knives in their boots; at his signal he seizes Vortigern by the cloak, and they slaughter about 460 unarmed barons and consuls, whom Eldadus later buries near Salisbury.

Post obitum vero filii, restitutus est Vortegirnus in regnum, after the-death indeed of-the-son restored was Vortigern into the-kingdom qui precibus conjugis suæ commotus, misit nuncios suos who by-the-prayers of-wife his-own moved sent messengers his-own ad Hengistum in Germaniam, mandavitque ipsi ut iterum in to Hengist into Germany and-commanded him that again into Britanniam rediret: attamen privatim et cum paucis: quia Britain he-should-return yet privately and with few because timebat ne si aliter supervenisset, discordia inter Barbaros he-feared lest if otherwise he-had-come-upon discord between the-barbarians et cives oriretur. Hengistus ergo, audito obitu Vortimerii, and the-citizens might-arise Hengist therefore heard the-death of-Vortimer trecenta millia armatorum sibi associavit: paratoque navigio three-hundred thousand of-armed-men to-himself joined and-prepared a-fleet in Britanniam reversus est. Sed cum tantæ multitudinis into Britain returned he-has but when of-so-great a-multipitude adventus Vortegirno et regni principibus nunciatus esset, the-arrival to-Vortigern and of-the-kingdom to-the-princes announced had-been valde indignati sunt: intoque consilio constituerunt cum greatly indignant they-were and-entered counsel they-decided with eis præliari, atque ipsos ex littoribus expellere. Quod cum them to-fight and them from the-shores to-drive-out which when filia sua Hengisto per internuncios indicasset, confestim daughter his-own to-Hengist through go-between had-shown forthwith cogitavit quid potius contra id agendum esset. Diversis he-considered what rather against this to-be-done should-be various igitur machinationibus peragrat, unum ex omnibus elegit, therefore contrivances gone-through one of all he-chose ut gentem regni sub specie pacis adoriretur prodere. that the-people of-the-kingdom under the-guise of-peace he-might-attempt to-betray Misit itaque legatos suos ad regem: jussitque nunciare, he-sent and-so envoys his-own to the-king and-ordered to-announce quod non conduxerat tantam multitudinem virorum, ut that not he-had-brought so-great a-multipitude of-men so-that vel secum in regno remanerent, vel violentiam aliquam either with-him in the-kingdom they-should-remain or violence some cum eis patriæ ingereret. Erat namque causa cur eam with them on-the-country he-might-inflict there-was for a-cause why it conduxisset: quia existimabat Vortimerium adhuc vivere: qui he-had-brought because he-thought Vortimer still to-live who per eos affectabat resistere, si illum expugnare incepisset. through them he-desired to-resist if him to-storm he-had-begun Quoniam autem non hæsitabat ipsum defunctum esse, since moreover not he-doubted him dead to-be committebat sese et populum suum dispositioni Vortegirni: he-committed himself and the-people his-own to-the-disposition of-Vortigern ut quot optaret ex tanto numero in regno suo so-that as-many-as he-should-wish from so-great a-number in kingdom his-own retinuisset: et quos refutandos censeret, concedebat ut he-might-keep and those-whom to-be-refused he-should-judge he-granted that in Germaniam sine dilatione redirent. Etsi id Vortegirno into Germany without delay they-should-return and-if this to-Vortigern placuisset: tunc petebat ipse, ut diem et locum nominaret pleased then he-asked he-himself that a-day and place should-name Vortegirnus, quo pariter convenirent, et omnia ex Vortigern where together they-might-come-together and all-things according-to voluntate sua disponent? Talia namque ut regi will his-own might-arrange such-things for when to-the-king nunciata fuerunt, ei vehementer placuerunt: quia invitus announced were to-him vehemently pleased because unwilling sineret Hengistum abire. Postremo jussit et cives he-would-allow Hengist to-go-away finally he-ordered both the-citizens et Saxones Maiis kalendis, quæ jam instare incipiebant, and the-Saxons on-the-May Kalends which already to-press were-beginning juxta Ambrii cœnobium convenire, ut ibidem prædicta beside of-Ambrius the-monastery to-come-together so-that there the-aforesaid-things statuerentur. Quod cum in utraque parte statutum esset: might-be-settled which when on each side settled had-been Hengistus nova proditione usus, commilitonibus suis Hengist new treachery having-used to-comrades his-own præcepit, ut unusquisque longum cultrum intra caligas ordered that each-one a-long knife within the-boots absconditum haberent. Et cum colloquium securius tractarent bidden should-have and when the-parley more-securely were-handling Britones: ipse eis hoc daret signum, Nemet oure saxas: the-Britons he-himself to-them this would-give signal take your knives unde quisque paratus astantem Britonem audacter occuparet, whence each-one ready the-standing-by Briton boldly should-seize atque abstractis cultris ocyus ipsum jugularet. Nec mora, and drawn knives more-swiftly him should-slaughter nor delay statuta die instante convenerunt omnes intra nominatam the-appointed day pressing came-together all within the-named urbem, et de pace habenda colloquium incepterunt. Ut city and about peace to-be-had a-parley began when igitur horam proditioni suæ idoneam inspexisset Hengistus, therefore the-hour for-treachery his-own suitable he-had-seen Hengist vociferatus est, Nemet oure saxas: et ilico Vortegirnum cried-out has take your knives and on-the-spot Vortigern accepit, et per pallium detinuit. Audito ocyus signo, he-took and by the-cloak held heard more-swiftly the-signal abstraxerunt Saxones cultros suos, et astantes principes drew the-Saxons knives their-own and the-standing-by princes invaserunt, ipsosque nihil tale præmeditantes jugulaverunt attacked and-them nothing such foreseeing slaughtered circiter quadringentos sexaginta, inter barones et consules, about four-hundred sixty among barons and consuls (quorum corpora beatus Eldadus postmodum sepelivit, atque whose bodies blessed Eldadus afterward buried and Christiano more humavit, haud longe a Kaercaradane, in-Christian manner interred not far from Kaercaradane quæ nunc Salesberia dicitur, in cemeterio quod est juxta which now Salisbury is-called in the-cemetery which is beside cœnobium Ambrii abbatis, qui olim fundator ipsius extiterat). the-monastery of-Ambrius the-abbot who once the-founder of-it had-been Omnes enim sine armis advenerant, nec aliud nisi de all for without arms had-come nor other-thing except about pace tractanda existimabant. Unde ceteri qui propter peace to-be-handled they-thought whence the-others who on-account-of proditionem accesserant, levius ipsos inermes interficere the-treachery had-come more-easily them unarmed to-kill potuerunt. Non impune tamen hæc egerunt Pagani: qui could not unpunished yet these-things did the-Pagans who multi eorum perempti fuerunt: dum neci ceterorum many of-them destroyed were while to-the-death of-the-others imminent. Eripiebant enim Britones ex tellure lapides et they-pressed snatched for the-Britons from the-ground stones and fustes, atque sese defendere volentes, proditores illidebant. clubs and themselves to-defend wishing the-traitors they-struck Hengistus pro vita Vortegirni civitates et munitiones regni paciscitur

XVI · VORTIGERN RANSOMED

Eldol, consul of Gloucester, seizes a stake, kills seventy men, and escapes to his city. The Saxons spare Vortigern in exchange for his cities and strongholds, then take London, York, Lincoln, and Winchester and ravage the land like wolves among unguarded sheep. Vortigern flees to Cambria.

Aderat ibi consul Claudiocestriæ nomine Eldol, qui visa was-present there the-consul of-Gloucester by-name Eldol who seen proditiōe, sustulit palum quem forte invenerat, et the-treachery took-up a-stake which by-chance he-had-found and defensionī vacavit. Quemcunque attingebat, confringens to-defense devoted-himself whomever he-reached breaking ei membrum quod percutiebat, dirigebat confestim ad for-him the-limb which he-struck he-directed forthwith to tartara: alii caput, alii brachia, alii scapulas, Tartarus for-one the-head for-another the-arms for-another the-shoulders compluribus etiam crura elidens, terrorem non minimum for-very-many also the-legs dashing terror not least inferebat: nec prius ex loco illo abscessit quam septuaginta he-brought nor before from place that departed than seventy viros consumpto palo interfecisset. Sed tantæ multitudini men consumed the-stake he-had-killed but to-so-great a-multitude cum resistere nequiret, divertit sese ab illis, atque civitatem since to-resist he-could-not he-turned himself from them and city suam petivit. Multi hinc et inde ceciderunt: sed victoriam his-own sought many on-this-side and on-that fell but the-victory habuerunt Saxones. Britones namque nihil tale præmeditati, had the-Saxons the-Britons for nothing such having-foreseen inermes advenerant: unde minus resistere potuerunt. Ut unarmed had-come whence less to-resist they-could when ergo nefandum inceptum peregerunt Saxones, noluerunt therefore the-abominable undertaking had-completed the-Saxons were-unwilling Vortegirnum interficere, sed mortem comminantes eum Vortigern to-kill but death threatening him ligaverunt, petieruntque civitates ejus atque munitiones pro vita. they-bound and-sought the-cities his and fortifications for life Quibus illico quicquid affectaverant, concessit, ut vivus to-whom on-the-spot whatever they-had-desired he-granted so-that alive abscedere sineretur. Cumque id jurejurando confirmatum to-depart he-might-be-allowed and-when this by-oath confirmed fuisset, solverunt eum a vinculis, atque urbem Londoniæ had-been they-loosed him from the-chains and the-city of-London primitus adeuntes ceperunt. Ceperunt deinde Eboracum et first going-to they-took they-took then York and Lindocolinum, necnon et Guintoniam, quasunque provincias Lincoln nor-not also Winchester all provinces devastantes. Invadebant undique cives, quemadmodum laying-waste they-attacked from-everywhere the-citizens just-as lupi oves, quas pastores deseruerunt. Cum ergo tantam wolves sheep which the-shepherds have-deserted when therefore so-great cladem inspexisset Vortegirnus, secessit in partes Cambriæ: disaster had-seen Vortigern withdrew into the-parts of-Cambria inscius quid contra nefandam gentem ageret. unknowing what against the-abominable people he-should-do Vortegirnus, magorum monitu juvenem quærit, cui nullus fuisset pater

XVII · THE YOUTH WITH NO FATHER

Vortigern's Magi tell him to build a strong tower, but on Mount Erir the earth swallows each day's work. The Magi say the mortar must be sprinkled with the blood of a youth without a father. At Kaermodin the envoys hear the boy Dabutius taunt Merlin that he has no father, and the bystanders tell them that Merlin's mother is a daughter of the king of Demetia, living among the nuns of Saint Peter's.

Vocatis denique Magis suis, consuluit illos, iussitque dicere called finally the-Magi his-own he-consulted them and-ordered to-say quid faceret. Qui direxerunt ut ædificaret sibi turrim what he-should-do who directed that he-should-build for-himself a-tower fortissimam, quæ sibi tutamen foret, cum ceteras amisisset most-strong which for-him a-safety might-be since the-other he-had-lost munitiones. Peragratis ergo quibuscunque locis, ut eam fortifications traveled-through therefore all places so-that it in congruo loco statueret, venit tandem ad Erir montem: in a-fitting place he-might-set he-came at-last to Erir mountain ubi coadunatis ex diversis patriis cæmentariis turrim iussit where gathered from various countries masons a-tower he-ordered construere. Convenientes itaque lapidarii, eam fundare to-build coming-together and-so the-stonecutters it to-found cœperunt: sed quicquid una die operabantur, absorbebat began but whatever on-one day they-worked swallowed tellus in altera, ita ut nescirent quorsum opus suum the-earth on the-next so that they-did-not-know whither work their-own evanesceret. Cumque id Vortegirno nunciatum fuisset, iterum vanished and-when this to-Vortigern announced had-been again magos suos consuluit, ut causam rei indicarent. Qui magi his-own he-consulted that the-cause of-the-matter they-might-show who dixerunt, ut juvenem quæreret sine patre, quæsitumque said that a-youth he-should-seek without father and-the-sought interficeret: ut sanguine ipsius cæmentum et lapides should-kill so-that with-the-blood his the-mortar and stones aspergerentur. Id enim prodesse asserebant, ut turris might-be-sprinkled this for to-profit they-asserted that of-the-tower fundamentum constaret. Nec mora, mittuntur legati per the-foundation might-stand nor delay are-sent envoys through universas provincias, ut talem invenirent hominem. At cum all provinces that such they-might-find a-man but when in urbem, quæ postea Kaermodin vocata fuit, venissent: into the-city which afterward Kaermodin called was they-had-come conspexerunt juvenes ante portam ludentes, et ad ludum they-saw youths before the-gate playing and to the-game accesserunt. Fatigati autem itinere, sederunt in circo approached wearied moreover by-the-journey they-sat in the-circle exploraturi quod quærebant. Denique cum multum diei about-to-search-out what they-were-seeking finally when much of-the-day præterisset, subita lis orta est inter duos juvenes, quorum had-passed a-sudden quarrel arisen has between two youths whose erant nomina Merlinus atque Dabutius. Certantibus ergo ipsis, were names Merlin and Dabutius quarreling therefore them dixit Dabutius ad Merlinum: “Quid mecum contendis fatue? said Dabutius to Merlin why with-me do-you-contend O-fool nunquam nobis eadem erat nobilitas. Ego enim ex regum never to-us the-same was nobility I for from of-kings origine editus sum, ex utraque parte meæ generationis: de the-origin born am from each side of-my generation about te autem nescitur quis sis, cum patrem non habeas.” Ad you moreover it-is-not-known who you-are since a-father not you-have at verbum istud vultus suos erexerunt legati, atque intuentes word that faces their-own raised the-envoys and gazing in Merlinum, interrogaverunt circumstantes quis esset? Quibus at Merlin asked the-bystanders who he-was to-whom illi dixerunt, quod nesciebatur quis pater eum progenuerat: they said that it-was-not-known who father him had-begotten mater vero fuerat filia regis Demetiæ, quæ in the-mother but had-been the-daughter of-the-king of-Demetia who in ecclesia sancti Petri in eadem urbe inter monachas degebat. the-church of-saint Peter in the-same city among the-nuns lived Vortegirrus a matre Merlini quærit, quomodo eum sine viro concepisset

XVIII · MERLIN'S MOTHER

Merlin and his mother are brought to Vortigern. She swears she has known no man, but a figure like a handsome youth embraced and spoke to her, vanished, and at last lay with her and left her with child. Maugantius explains from Apuleius that incubus demons, part men and part angels, dwell between the moon and earth and can beget children on women.

Festinantes itaque nuncii, venerunt ad præfectum urbis, hurrying and-so the-messengers came to the-prefect of-the-city præceperuntque ei ex parte regis, ut Merlinus cum matre and-ordered him from the-side of-the-king that Merlin with mother sua ad regem mitteretur. Præfectus ilico cum causam his-own to the-king should-be-sent the-prefect on-the-spot when the-cause legationis eorum cognovisset, Merlinum et matrem ejus ad of-the-embassy their he-had-learned Merlin and mother his to Vortegirnum misit, ut de eis libitum suum perficeret.
Vortigern sent so-that about them pleasure his-own he-might-perform Et cum in ipsius præsentiam adducti fuissent: excepit rex and when into his presence led they-had-been received the-king diligenter matrem, quia eam nobilibus sciebat natalibus ortam: carefully the-mother because her from-noble he-knew birth sprung deinde inquirere cœpit ab illa, ex quo viro conceperat. Cui then to-inquire he-began from her from what man she-had-conceived to-whom illa dixit: "Vivit anima mea et anima tua, domine mi rex: quia she said lives soul my and soul your O-lord my king that neminem agnovi qui illum in me generaverit. Unum autem no-one I-have-known who him in me has-begotten one-thing moreover scio, quod cum essem inter socias meas in thalamis nostris, I-know that when I-was among companions my in chambers our apparebat mihi quidam in specie pulcherrimi juvenis, et appeared to-me a-certain-one in the-form of-a-most-handsome youth and sæpissime, amplexens me strictis brachiis, deosculabatur: et most-often embracing me tight arms kissed and cum aliquantulum mecum moram fecisset, subito evanescebat, when for-a-little-while with-me a-stay he-had-made suddenly he-vanished ita ut nihil ex eo viderem: multotiens quoque me so that nothing of him I-saw many-times also me alloquebatur dum secreto sederem, nec usquam comparebat: he-addressed while in-secret I-sat nor anywhere appeared cumque diu me in hunc modum frequentasset, coivit mecum and-when long me in this manner he-had-frequented he-lay with-me in specie hominis sæpius, atque gravidam dereliquit. Sciat in the-form of-a-man more-often and pregnant left may-know prudentia tua, domine mi, quod aliter virum non cognovi prudence your O-lord my that otherwise a-man not I-have-known qui juvenem istum generavit." Admirans itaque rex, iussit who youth this begot wondering and-so the-king ordered Maugantium ad se vocari, ut sibi manifestaret, si Maugantius to himself to-be-called so-that to-him he-might-make-plain whether id quod mulier dixerat fieri potuisset." Adductus autem that which the-woman had-said to-be-done could led moreover Maugantius, auditis omnibus ex ordine, dixit ad Vortegirnum:

Maugantius heard all-things in order said to Vortigern

“In libris philosophorum nostrorum, et in plurimis historiis in the-books of-philosophers our and in very-many histories reperi, multos homines huiusmodi procreationem habuisse.

I-have-found many men of-this-kind procreation to-have-had Nam ut Apuleius de deo Socratis perhibet, inter lunam et for as Apuleius about the-god of-Socrates records between the-moon and terram habitant spiritus, quos incubos dæmones appellamus:

the-earth dwell spirits whom incubus demons we-call hi partim hominum, partim vero Angelorum naturam these partly of-men partly indeed of-Angels the-nature habent: et cum volunt, assumunt sibi humanas figuras, have and when they-wish they-take to-themselves human shapes et cum mulieribus coeunt. Forsitan unus ex eis huic and with women lie perhaps one of them to-this mulieri apparuit, et juvenem istum in ipsa generavit.” woman appeared and youth this in her begot Merlinus regem de turri edificanda monet

XIX · MERLIN ADVISES THE KING ON THE TOWER

Merlin challenges the Magi to say what lies under the foundation, and when they are silent, he tells the king to dig. A pool is found beneath the tower, and Merlin says that two hollow stones lie at its bottom, with two dragons sleeping in them. Vortigern has the pool drained, and all marvel at Merlin's wisdom.

Cumque omnia auscultasset Merlinus, accessit ad regem, et and-when all-things had-listened-to Merlin approached to the-king and ait: “Ut quid ego et mater mea in præsentiam tuam says to what-end I and mother my into the-presence your adducti sumus?" Cui Vortegirnus: "Magi mei mihi consilium led have-been to-whom Vortigern the-Magi my to-me counsel dederunt, ut hominem sine patre perquirerem: ut opus gave that a-man without father I-should-look so-that work meum ipsius sanguine irrigatum staret." Tunc ait Merlinus: my his with-blood watered might-stand then says Merlin "Jube tuos Magos venire coram me, et convincam illos order your Magi to-come before me and I-shall-convict them mendacium adinvenisse. Admirans autem rex super verbis a-lie to-have-devised wondering moreover the-king at the-words illius, continuo jussit Magos venire, et coram Merlino sedere." his at-once ordered the-Magi to-come and before Merlin to-sit Quibus ait Merlinus: "Nescitis quid fundamentum incoep̃tæ to-whom says Merlin you-do-not-know what the-foundation of-the-begun turris impediatur. Laudastis ut sanguis meus diffunderetur tower hinders you-commended that blood my should-be-poured-out in cæmentum, quasi illico opus constaret. Sed dicite into the-mortar as-if on-the-spot the-work would-stand but tell mihi, quid sub fundamento latet? Nam aliquid sub ipso est, me what under the-foundation lies-bid for something under it is quod ipsum stare non permittit." Expavescentes autem Magi, which it to-stand not permits terrified moreover the-Magi conticuerunt. Tunc ait Merlinus, qui et Ambrosius dicebatur: fell-silent then says Merlin who also Ambrosius was-called "Domine mi rex, voca operarios tuos, et jube fodere terram, O-lord my king call workmen your and order to-dig the-earth et invenes stagnum sub ea quod turrim stare non and you-will-find a-pool under it which the-tower to-stand not permittit." Quod cum factum fuisset, repertum est ilico permits which when done had-been found was on-the-spot stagnum sub terra, quod eam instabilem fecerat. Accessit a-pool under the-earth which it unstable had-made approached iterum Ambrosius Merlinus ad Magos, et ait: "Dicite mihi again Ambrosius Merlin to the-Magi and says tell me mendaces adultores, quid sub stagno est?" Nec unum verbum O-lying flatterers what under the-pool is nor one word respondentes obmutuerunt. Et iterum dixit regi: "Præcipe, answering they-became-dumb and again he-said to-the-king order rex, hauriri stagnum per rivulos, et in fundo videbis O-king to-be-drained the-pool through rivulets and at the-bottom you-will-see duos concavos lapides, et in illis duos dracones dormientes." two hollow stones and in them two dragons sleeping Credidit rex verbis ejus: quia verum dixerat de stagno, et believed the-king the-words his because truth he-had-said about the-pool and illud hauriri jussit. Et cum ita invenisset, Merlinum super it to-be-drained ordered and when so he-had-found Merlin above omnia admirabatur. Admirabantur etiam cuncti qui astabant all-things he-wondered-at wondered also all who stood-by tantam in eo sapientiam, existimantes numen esse in illo. so-great in him wisdom thinking a-deity to-be in him

BOOK VII

Præfatio auctoris

I · THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE

Before Geoffrey has reached this point in the history, rumor about Merlin spreads, and his contemporaries press him to publish the prophecies. Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, a man of the highest piety and generosity, presses him most. To satisfy him, Geoffrey translates the prophecies and sends them with a letter.

Nondum autem ad hunc locum historiæ perveneram, cum not-yet moreover to this place of-the-history I-had-come when de Merlino divulgato rumore, compellebant me undique about Merlin spread-abroad the-rumor compelled me from-everywhere contemporanei mei, ipsius prophetias edere: maxime autem the-contemporaries my of-him the-prophecies to-publish most moreover Alexander Linconiensis Episcopus, vir summæ religionis Alexander of-Lincoln Bishop a-man of-highest religion et prudentiæ. Non erat alter in clero sive in and prudence not there-was another among the-clergy or among populo cui tot milites vel nobiles famularentur: quos the-people to-whom so-many knights or nobles might-serve whom mansueta pietas ipsius, et benigna largitas in obsequium the-gentle dutifulness his and kind largess into service ejus alliciebat: cui cum satisfacere prælegissem, prophetias his enticed to-whom when to-satisfy I-had-preferred the-prophecies transtuli, et eidem cum hujusmodi literis direxi.
I-translated and to-the-same with such letters directed

Ad Alexandrum

II · TO ALEXANDER

Geoffrey tells Alexander that love for him compels him to translate Merlin's prophecies from British into Latin before finishing the history he had begun. He marvels that the bishop entrusts the task to so poor a style when so many more learned men serve him. He asks Alexander, who would sing better than all the philosophers of Britain if not called to other business, to correct whatever he has set down amiss.

Cogit me, Alexander Linconiensis præsul, nobilitatis tuæ compels me O-Alexander of-Lincoln prelate of-nobility your dilectio Prophetias Merlini de Britannico in Latinum the-love the-Prophecies of-Merlin from British into Latin transferre, antequam historiam perarassem, quam de to-translate before the-history I-had-finished-writing which about gestis regum Britannorum inceperam: proposueram enim the-deeds of-the-kings of-the-Britons I-had-begun I-had-proposed for illam prius perficere et istud opus subsequenter explicare: it first to-complete and this work afterward to-unfold ne dum uterque labor ingrueret, sensus meus ad singula lest while both labor should-press the-sense my to the-single-things minus sufficeret. Attamen quoniam securus eram veniæ, less might-suffice yet since secure I-was of-the-pardon quam discretio subtilis ingenii tui donaret: agrestem calamum which the-discretion of-subtle wit your would-grant rustic pen meum libellis apposui, et plebeio modulamine ignotum my to-the-little-books I-applied and with-plebeian melody unknown tibi interpretatus sum sermonem. Admiror autem admodum, to-you interpreted I-have the-speech I-wonder moreover greatly quod id pauperi stylo dignatus es committere, cum tot that this to-a-poor style deigned you-have to-commit since so-many doctiores et tot ditiores virga potestatis tuæ coerceat: qui more-learned and so-many richer the-rod of-power your restrains who sublimioris carminis delectamento aures Minervæ tuæ mulcerent. of-loftier song with-the-delight the-ears of-Minerva your might-soothe Et ut omnes philosophos totius Britanniae insulae præteream, and that all the-philosophers of-the-whole of-Britain island I-may-pass-over tu solus es, quod non erubesco fateri, qui præ ceteris audaci you alone are which not I-blush to-confess who before the-others with-bold lyra caneres: nisi te culmen honoris ad alia negocia vocaret. lyre would-sing unless you the-height of-honor to other businesses called Quoniam ergo placuit ut Galfridus Monumetensis fistulam since therefore it-has-pleased that Geoffrey of-Monmouth pipe suam in hoc vaticinio sonaret, modulationibus ejus favere non his-own in this prophecy should-sound to-the-measures his to-favor not diffugas: et si quid inordinate sive vitiose protulerit, may-you-sbun and if anything disorderly or faultily he-will-have-uttered ferula camænarum tuarum in rectum convertas concentum. with-the-rod of-the-Muses your into right may-you-turn harmony

Merlini prophetia

III · THE PROPHECY OF MERLIN

From the drained pool a white and a red dragon emerge and fight, and Merlin, weeping, prophesies. The red dragon is the people of Britain, the white the Saxons whom Vortigern invited, and the Britons will be oppressed until the Boar of Cornwall brings succor and tramples the foreigners' necks. A long sequence of beasts, kings, and portents follows: the white dragon's rise and fall, the Lion of Justice, the primacy of sees transferred, and famine, plague, and wonders of rivers and springs.

Sedente itaque Vortegirno Britonum rege super ripam sitting and-so Vortigern of-the-Britons king upon the-bank exhausti stagni, egressi sunt duo dracones, quorum unus of-the-drained pool gone-out have two dragons of-whom one erat albus, et alter rubeus. Cumque alter alteri was white and the-other red and-when one to-the-other appropinquasset, diram commiserunt pugnam, et ignem had-drawn-near dire they-joined fight and fire anhelitu suo procreabat. Prævalebat autem albus draco, with-breath its-own it-produced prevailed moreover the-white dragon rubeumque usque ad extremitatem lacus fugabat. At and-the-red all-the-way to the-end of-the-lake drove but ille cum se expulsum doluisset, impetum fecit in album, it when itself driven-out it-had-grieved an-attack made upon the-white ipsumque retro ire coëgit. Ipsi ergo in hunc modum and-it back to-go forced them therefore in this manner pugnantibus, præcepit rex Ambrosio Merlino dicere, quid fighting ordered the-king to-Ambrosius Merlin to-say what draconum prælium portendebat. Mox ille in fletum erumpens, of-the-dragons the-battle portended soon he into weeping bursting spiritum hausit prophetiæ, et ait: Væ rubeo draconi, nam the-spirit drank of-prophecy and says woe to-the-red dragon for ejus exterminatio festinat: cavernas ejus occupavit albus its extermination hastens the-caverns its has-seized the-white draco, qui Saxones quos invitasti significat. Rubeus vero dragon which the-Saxons whom you-invited signifies the-red but gentem designat Britannia, quæ ab albo opprimetur. the-people designates of-Britain which by the-white will-be-oppressed Montes itaque ejus ut valles æquabuntur, et flumina the-mountains and-so its as the-valleys will-be-made-level and the-rivers vallium sanguine manabunt. Cultus religionis delebitur, of-the-valleys with-blood will-flow the-worship of-religion will-be-wiped-out et ecclesiarum ruina patebit. Prævalebit tandem oppressa, and of-the-churches the-ruin will-lie-open will-prevail at-last the-oppressed et sævitia exterorum resistet. Aper etenim Cornubiæ and to-the-savagery of-foreigners will-resist the-boar for of-Cornwall succursum præstabit, et colla eorum sub pedibus suis succor will-offer and the-necks of-them under feet its-own conculcabit. Insulæ Oceani potestati ipsius subdentur, et will-trample the-islands of-the-Ocean to-the-power his will-be-subjected and Gallicanos saltus possidebit. Timebit Romulea domus ipsius the-Gallic glades he-will-possess will-fear the-Romulean house his sævitiam: et exitus ejus dubius erit. In ore populorum savagery and the-end his doubtful will-be in the-mouth of-the-peoples celebrabitur: et actus ejus cibus erit narrantibus. Sex he-will-be-celebrated and the-deeds his food will-be to-the-tellers six posterij ejus sequentur sceptrum: sed post ipsos exsurget descendants his will-follow the-scepter but after them will-rise-up Germanicus vermis. Sublimabit illum æquoreus lupo: quem a-German worm will-raise him a-sea wolf whom Africana nemora comitabuntur. Delebitur iterum religio, the-African forests will-accompany will-be-wiped-out again religion et transmutatio primarum sedium erit. Dignitas Londoniæ and a-transmutation of-the-first sees will-be the-dignity of-London adorabit Doroberniam: et pastor Eboracensis septimus in will-adore Dorobernia and the-shepherd of-York seventh in Armorico regno frequentabitur. Menevia pallio urbis the-Armorican kingdom will-be-frequented Menevia with-the-pallium of-the-City Legionum induetur: et prædicator Hiberniæ propter of-the-Legions will-be-clothed and the-preacher of-Ireland on-account-of infantem in utero crescentem obmutescet. Pluet sanguineus an-infant in the-womb growing will-become-dumb will-rain a-bloody imber: et dira fames mortales afficiet. His supervenientibus shower and dire hunger mortals will-afflict these coming-upon dolebit rubeus: sed emenso labore vigebit. Tunc will-grieve the-red but having-passed the-labor it-will-flourish then infortunium albi festinabit, et edificia hortulorum the-misfortune of-the-white will-hasten and the-buildings of-the-little-gardens ejus diruentur. Septem sceptrigeri perimentur, et unus its will-be-pulled-down seven scepter-bearers will-be-destroyed and one eorum sanctificabitur. Ventres matrum truncabuntur, et of-them will-be-made-a-saint the-wombs of-mothers will-be-cut and infantes abortivi erunt. Erit ingens supplicium hominum: the-infants untimely will-be there-will-be a-huge punishment of-men ut indigenæ restituantur. Qui faciet hæc, æneum virum that the-natives may-be-restored who will-do these-things a-bronze man induet, et per multa tempora super æneum equum will-put-on and through many times upon a-bronze horse Londoniæ portas servabit. Exin in proprios mores revertetur of-London the-gates will-guard thence into its-own ways will-return rubeus draco: et in se ipsum sævire laborabit. Superveniet the-red dragon and on it itself to-rage will-labor will-come-upon itaque ultio tonantis: quia omnes ager colonos and-so the-vengeance of-the-Thunderer because all field the-farmers decipiet. Arripiet mortalitas populum: cunctasque nationes will-deceive will-seize mortality the-people and-all nations evacuabit. Residui natale solum deserent, et exteras will-empty the-remaining the-native soil will-desert and foreign culturas seminabunt. Rex benedictus parabit navigium, et tillages will-sow a-king blessed will-prepare a-fleet and in aula inter beatos duodecim annumerabitur. Erit in the-hall among the-blessed the-twelfth will-be-counted there-will-be miseranda regni desolatio, et areæ messium in a-pitiable of-the-kingdom desolation and the-floors of-the-harvests into fructuosos saltus redibunt. Exurget iterum albus draco, et fruitful glades will-return will-rise-up again the-white dragon and filiam Germaniæ invitabit. Replebuntur iterum hortuli the-daughter of-Germany will-invite will-be-filled again little-gardens nostri alieno semine, et in extremitate stagni languebit our with-foreign seed and at the-end of-the-pool will-languish rubeus. Exin coronabitur Germanicus vermis, et æneus the-red thence will-be-crowned the-German worm and the-bronze princeps humabitur. Terminus illi positus est, quem prince will-be-buried a-limit for-him placed has-been which transvolare nequibit. Centum namque et quinquaginta to-fly-over it-will-be-unable a-hundred for and fifty annis in inquietudine et subjectione manebit: trecentis for-years in disturbance and subjection it-will-remain for-three-hundred vero insidebit. Tunc exsurget in illum aquilo, et indeed it-will-settle-upon then will-rise-up against it the-north-wind and flores quos zephyrus procreavit eripiet. Erit deauratio the-flowers which the-west-wind produced will-snatch there-will-be gilding in templis, nec acumen gladiatorum cessabit. Vix obtinebit in the-temples nor the-edge of-swords will-cease scarcely will-hold cavernas suas Germanicus draco: quia ultio prodicionis the-caverns its-own the-German dragon because the-vengeance of-treachery ejus superveniet. Vigebit tandem paulisper: sed decimatio its will-come-upon it-will-flourish at-last for-a-little but the-decimation Neustriæ nocebit. Populus namque in ligno et ferreis of-Neustria will-harm a-people for in wood and in-iron tunicis superveniet, qui vindictam de nequitia ipsius tunics will-come-upon which vengeance for the-wickedness its sumet. Restaurabit pristinis incolis mansiones: et ruina will-take it-will-restore to-the-former inhabitants the-dwellings and the-ruin alienigenarum patebit. Germen albi draconis ex hortulis of-the-foreigners will-lie-open the-seed of-the-white dragon from little-gardens nostris abradetur, et reliquiæ generationis ejus decimabuntur. our will-be-scraped and the-remnants of-generation its will-be-decimated Jugum servitutis ferent: matremque suam lignibus et the-yoke of-servitude they-will-bear and-mother their-own with-mattocks and aratris vulnerabunt. Succedent duo dracones, quorum alter with-plows they-will-wound will-succeed two dragons of-whom one invidiæ spiculo suffocabitur: alter vero sub umbra nominis of-envy by-the-dart will-be-choked the-other but under the-shadow of-a-name redibit. Succedet leo justitiæ, ad cujus rugitum Gallicanæ will-return will-succeed a-lion of-justice at whose roar the-Gallic turre et insulani dracones tremebunt. In diebus illis aurum towers and the-island dragons will-tremble in days those gold ex lilio et urtica extorquebitur, et argentum ex ungulis from the-lily and the-nettle will-be-wrung and silver from the-hoofs mugientium manabit. Calamistrati varia vellera vestient, et of-the-lowing-ones will-flow the-curved varied fleeces will-wear and exterior habitus interiora signabit. Pedes latrantium the-outer garb the-inner-things will-mark the-feet of-the-barking-ones truncabuntur. Pacem habebunt feræ: et humanitas will-be-cut peace will-have the-wild-beasts and humanity supplicium delet. Findetur forma commercii: dimidium the-punishment will-wipe-out will-be-split the-form of-commerce the-half rotundum erit. Peribit miluorum rapacitas, et luporum round will-be will-perish of-kites the-rapacity and of-wolves dentes hebetabuntur. Catuli leonis in æquoreos pisces the-teeth will-be-blunted the-whelps of-the-lion into sea fishes transformabuntur: et aquila ejus super montem Aravium will-be-transformed and the-eagle its upon the-mount Aravius nidificabit. Venedocia rubebit materno sanguine, et domus will-nest Venedotia will-redden with-maternal blood and the-house Corinei sex fratres interficiet. Nocturnis lacrymis madebit of-Corineus six brothers will-kill with-nightly tears will-be-wet insula: unde omnes ad omnia provocabuntur. Væ tibi Neustria, the-island whence all to all-things will-be-provoked woe to-you O-Neustria quia cerebrum leonis in te effundetur: dilaceratisque because the-brain of-the-lion upon you will-be-poured-out and-torn membris a patrio solo eliminabitur. Nitentur posteri the-limbs from the-native soil it-will-be-banished will-strive the-descendants transvolare superna: sed favor novorum sublimabitur. Nocebit to-fly-over the-heights but the-favor of-the-new will-be-raised will-harm possidenti ex impiis pietas, donec sese genitore the-possessor from the-impious dutifulness until himself with-the-father induerit. Apri igitur dentibus accinctus, cacumina he-will-have-clothed of-the-boar therefore with-the-teeth girded the-peaks montium et umbram galeati transcendet. Indignabitur of-the-mountains and the-shadow of-the-helmeted-one he-will-cross will-be-indignant Albania, et convocatis collateralibus sanguinem effundere Albany and called-together the-neighbors blood to-pour-out vacabit. Dabitur maxillis ejus frenum quod in Armorico will-be-busy will-be-given to-the-jaws its a-bridle which in the-Armorican sinu fabricabitur. Deaurabit illud aquila rupti fœderis, et bay will-be-made will-gild it the-eagle of-the-broken pact and tertia nidificatione gaudebit. Evigilabunt rugientes catuli, in-the-third nesting will-rejoice will-awake the-roaring whelps et postpositis nemoribus intra mœnia civitatum venabuntur. and set-aside the-forests within the-walls of-cities will-hunt Stragem non minimam ex obstantibus facient, et linguas slaughter not least of the-opposing-ones they-will-make and the-tongues taurorum abscondent. Colla rugientium onerabunt catenis, of-the-bulls will-cut-off the-necks of-the-roaring-ones they-will-load with-chains et avita tempora renovabunt. Exin de primo in quartum: and ancestral times will-renew thence from the-first into the-fourth de quarto in tertium: de tertio in secundum rotabitur from the-fourth into the-third from the-third into the-second will-be-rolled pollex in oleo. Sextus Hiberniæ mœnia subvertet, et nemora the-thumb in oil the-sixth of-Ireland the-walls will-overturn and the-forests in planitiem mutabit: diversas portiones in unum reducet, into a-plain will-change the-various portions into one will-lead-back et capite leonis coronabitur. Principium ipsius vago and with-the-head of-a-lion will-be-crowned the-beginning his to-a-wandering affectui subjacebit: sed finis ipsius ad supernos convolabit. desire will-lie-subject but the-end his to the-heavenly-ones will-fly Renovabit namque beatorum sedes per patrias, et pastores he-will-renew for of-the-blessed the-seats through the-countries and shepherds in congruis locis locabit. Duas urbes duobus palliis induet: in fitting places will-place two cities with-two palls he-will-clothe et virginea munera virginibus donabit. Promerebitur inde and virginal gifts on-virgins will-bestow he-will-merit thence favorem tonantis, et inter beatos collocabitur. Egre dietur the-favor of-the-Thunderer and among the-blessed will-be-placed will-go-forth ex eo lynx penetrans omnia, quæ ruinæ propriæ gentis from him a-lynx piercing all-things which on-the-ruin of-its-own people imminebit: per illam enim utramque insulam amittet will-press through it for both island will-lose Neustria: et pristina dignitate spoliabitur. Deinde revertentur Neustria and of-former dignity will-be-despoiled then will-return cives in insulam: nam dissidium alienigenarum orietur. the-citizens into the-island for dissension of-the-foreigners will-arise Niveus quoque senex in niveo sedens equo, fluvium Perironis a-snowy also old-man on a-snowy sitting horse the-river of-Periron divertet, et cum candida virga molendinum super ipsum will-turn-aside and with a-white rod a-mill upon it metabitur. Cadwalladrus vocabit Conanum, et Albaniam in will-measure-out Cadwallader will-call Conan and Albany into societatem accipiet. Tunc erit strages alienigenarum: tunc alliance will-receive then there-will-be slaughter of-the-foreigners then flumina sanguine manabunt. Tunc erumpent Armorici fontes, the-rivers with-blood will-flow then will-burst-forth the-Armorican springs et Bruti diademate coronabuntur. Replebitur Cambria lætitia: and of-Brutus with-the-diadem will-be-crowned will-be-filled Cambria with-joy et robora Cornubiæ virescent. Nomine Bruti vocabitur and the-oaks of-Cornwall will-grow-green by-the-name of-Brutus will-be-called insula, et nuncupatio extraneorum peribit. Ex Conano the-island and the-naming of-the-strangers will-perish from Conan procedet aper bellicosus, qui intra Gallicana nemora acumen will-proceed a-boar warlike who within the-Gallic forests the-edge dentium suorum exercebit. Truncabit namque quæque majora of-teeth its-own will-exercise he-will-lop for all greater robora, minoribus vero tutelam præstabit. Timebunt illum oaks to-the-smaller indeed protection will-offer will-fear him Arabes et Africani: nam impetum cursus sui in ulteriorem the-Arabs and the-Africans for the-impetus of-course its-own into farther Hispaniam protendet. Succedet hircus Venerei castris aurea Spain it-will-stretch will-succeed the-goat of-the-Venereal camp golden habens cornua, et argenteam barbam: qui ex naribus suis having horns and a-silver beard who from nostrils its-own tantam efflabit nebulam qua tota superficies insulæ so-great will-breathe-out a-mist by-which the-whole surface of-the-island obumbrabitur. Pax erit in tempore illius: et ubertate will-be-shadowed peace will-be in the-time his and by-the-richness glebæ multiplicabuntur segetes. Mulieres incessu serpentes of-the-soil will-be-multiplied the-crops women in-gait serpents fient, et omnes earum gressus superbia replebuntur. will-become and all their steps with-pride will-be-filled Renovabuntur castra Veneris: nec cessabunt sagittæ Cupidinis will-be-renewed the-camps of-Venus nor will-cease the-arrows of-Cupid vulnerare. Fons omnis vertetur in sanguinem: et duo to-wound the-spring every will-be-turned into blood and two reges duellum propter lænam de vado baculi committent. kings a-duel on-account-of a-lioness at the-ford of-the-staff will-join Omnis humus luxuriabit: et humanitas fornicari non desinet. every soil will-run-riot and humanity to-fornicate not will-cease Omnia hæc tria secula videbunt: donec sepulti reges all these-things three ages will-see until the-buried kings in urbe Londoniarum propalabuntur. Redibit iterum fames: in the-city of-London will-be-brought-to-light will-return again hunger redibit mortalitas: et desolationem urbium dolebunt cives. will-return mortality and the-desolation of-the-cities will-lament the-citizens Superveniet aper commercii, qui dispersos greges ad amissa will-come-upon the-boar of-commerce who the-scattered flocks to the-lost pascua revocabit. Pectus ejus cibus erit egentibus, et lingua pastures will-recall the-breast his food will-be for-the-needy and the-tongue ejus sedabit sitientes. Ex ore ipsius procedent flumina his will-allay the-thirsting from the-mouth his will-proceed rivers quæ arentes hominum fauces rigabunt. Exin super turrim which the-dry of-men throats will-water thence upon the-tower Londoniarum procreabitur arbor, quæ tribus solummodo of-London will-be-produced a-tree which with-three only ramis contenta, superficiem totius insulæ latitudine branches content the-surface of-the-whole island with-the-breadth foliorum obumbrabit. Huic adversarius Boreas superveniet, of-the-leaves will-shadow to-this an-adversary the-north-wind will-come-upon atque iniquo flatu suo tertium illi ramum eripiet: duo and with-unjust blast its-own the-third from-it branch will-snatch the-two vero residui locum extirpati occupabunt, donec alter alterum but remaining the-place of-the-uprooted will-seize until one the-other foliorum multitudine annihilabit: deinde vero locum with-the-multitude of-leaves will-annihilate then indeed the-place duorum obtinebit ipse, et volucres exterarum regionum of-the-two will-hold it-itself and the-birds of-foreign regions sustentabit. Patriis volatilibus nocivus habebitur: nam timore will-sustain to-native birds harmful it-will-be-held for by-fear umbræ ejus liberos volatus amittent. Succedet asinus of-the-shadow its free flights they-will-lose will-succeed the-ass nequitia in fabricatores auri velox: sed in luporum of-wickedness against the-fashioners of-gold swift but against of-wolves rapacitatem piger. In diebus illis ardebunt quercus per the-rapacity sluggish in days those will-burn the-oaks through nemora, et in ramis tiliarum nascentur glandes. Sabrinum the-forests and on the-branches of-the-limes will-be-born acorns the-Severn mare per septem ostia discurret, et fluvius Oscæ per sea through seven mouths will-run-out and the-river of-the-Usk for septem menses fervebit. Pisces illius calore morientur: et seven months will-boil the-fishes of-it from-the-heat will-die and ex eis procreabuntur serpentes: frigebunt Badonis balnea: et from them will-be-produced serpents will-grow-cold of-Bath the-baths and salubres aquæ eorum mortem generabunt. Londonia necem the-healthy waters of-them death will-beget London the-death viginti milium lugebit: et Tamensis fluvius in sanguinem of-twenty thousand will-mourn and the-Thames river into blood mutabitur. Cucullati ad nuptias provocabuntur, et clamor will-be-changed the-hooded-ones to marriages will-be-called and the-cry eorum in montibus Alpium audietur. of-them on the-mountains of-the-Alps will-be-beard

Merlini prophetiæ continuatio

IV · THE PROPHECY OF MERLIN CONTINUED

Three springs will rise at Winchester, bringing long life, hunger, and sudden death, until a girl dries them with her breath. A heron, a fox, a wolf, and a bear, dragons, giants, and lions follow in a long train of kings and wars across the island. At the end the stars leave their courses, the signs of the Zodiac quarrel, the seas rise, and the winds clash with a sound among the stars.

Tres fontes in urbe Guintonia erumpent, quorum rivuli three springs in the-city Winchester will-burst-forth whose rivulets insulam in tres portiones secabunt. Qui bibet de the-island into three portions will-cut who will-drink from uno, diuturniori vita fruetur: nec supervenienti languore one with-longer life will-enjoy nor by-coming-on sickness gravabitur. Qui bibet de altero, indeficienti fame peribit: will-be-weighed-down who will-drink from the-other with-unfailing hunger will-perish et in facie ipsius pallor et horror sedebit. Qui bibet and on the-face his pallor and horror will-sit who will-drink de tertio, subita morte periclitabitur, nec corpus ipsius from the-third by-sudden death will-be-imperiled nor the-body his subire poterit sepulcrum. Tantam ingluviem vitare volentes, to-undergo will-be-able the-tomb so-great gluttony to-avoid wishing diversis tegumentis eam occultare nitentur. Quæcumque with-various coverings it to-hide they-will-strive whatever moles superposita fuerit, formam alterius corporis recipiet. mass placed-on-top will-have-been the-form of-another body will-receive Terra namque in lapides: lapides in lignum, lignum earth for into stones stones into wood wood in cineres, cinis in aquam, si superjecta fuerint, into ashes ash into water if thrown-on they-will-have-been vertentur. Ad hæc ex urbe Canuti nemoris eliminabitur will-be-turned at these-things from the-city of-Canute of-the-forest will-be-banished puella, ut medelæ curam adhibeat. Quæ ut omnes a-girl so-that of-healing the-care she-may-apply who when all artes inierit, solo anhelitu suo fontes nocivos arts she-will-have-entered with-sole breath her-own the-springs harmful siccabit. Exin ut sese salubri liquore refecerit, will-dry thence when herself with-healthful liquor she-will-have-refreshed gestabit in dextera sua nemus Caledonis: in sinistra vero she-will-carry in right-hand her-own the-forest of-Caledon in the-left indeed murorum Londoniæ propugnacula. Quacunque incedet, of-the-walls of-London the-bulwarks wherever she-will-advance passus sulphureos faciet, qui duplici flamma fumabunt: steps sulfurous she-will-make which with-a-double flame will-smoke fumus ille excitabit Rutenos, et cibum submarinis smoke that will-rouse the-Ruteni and food for-the-undersea-creatures conficiet. Lacrymis miserandis manabit ipsa, et clamore will-make with-tears pitiable will-flow she-herself and with-a-cry horrido replebit insulam. Interficiet eam cervus decem horrid will-fill the-island will-kill her a-stag of-ten ramorum: quorum quatuor aurea diademata gestabunt: sex branches of-which four golden diadems will-carry the-six vero residui in cornua bubalorum vertentur, quæ nefando indeed remaining into horns of-buffaloes will-be-turned which with-abominable sonitu tres insulas Britanniae commovebunt. Excitabitur sound the-three islands of-Britain will-move will-be-roused Daneium nemus, et in humanam vocem erumpens clamabit: the-Danish forest and into human voice bursting will-cry “Accede, Cambria, et junge lateri tuo Cornubiam, et dic approach O-Cambria and join to-side your Cornwall and say Guintoniæ, absorbebit tellus te. Transfer sedem pastoris to-Winchester will-swallow the-earth you transfer the-seat of-the-shepherd quo naves applicant, et cetera membra caput sequantur. where the-ships land and the-other limbs the-head let-them-follow Festinat namque dies, qua cives ob scelera perjurii hastens for the-day in-which the-citizens on-account-of the-crimes of-perjury peribunt. Candor lanarum nocuit, atque tincturæ ipsarum will-perish the-whiteness of-wools has-harmed and of-dyeing their diversitas. Væ perjuræ genti, quia urbs inclyta propter the-variety woe to-the-perjured people because the-city renowned on-account-of eam ruet. Gaudebunt naves augmentatione tanta, et unum it will-fall will-rejoice the-ships with-increase so-great and one ex duobus fiet. Reædificabit eam Ericius, oneratus from two will-be-made will-rebuild it a-hedgehog loaded pomis: ad quorum odorem diversorum nemorum convolabunt with-apples to whose scent of-various forests will-fly-together volucres. Adjiciet palatium ingens, et sexcentis turribus the-birds he-will-add a-palace huge and with-six-hundred towers vallabit illud. Invidebit ergo Londonia, et muros suos will-wall it will-envy therefore London and walls its-own tripliciter augebit. Circuibit eam undique Tamensis fluvius, threefold will-increase will-go-round it on-all-sides the-Thames river et rumor operis transcendet Alpes. Occultabit intra illam and the-rumor of-the-work will-cross the-Alps will-hide within it Ericius poma sua, et subterraneas vias machinabitur. In the-hedgehog the-apples his-own and underground ways will-contrive in tempore illo loquentur lapides, et mare quo ad Galliam time that will-speak stones and the-sea by-which to Gaul navigatur intra breve spatium contrahetur. In utraque ripa it-is-sailed within a-short space will-be-drawn-together on each bank audietur homo ab homine, et solum insulæ dilatabitur. will-be-heard man by man and the-soil of-the-island will-be-widened Revelabuntur occulta submarinorum, et Gallia præ will-be-revealed the-hidden-things of-the-under-sea-creatures and Gaul for timore tremet. Post hæc ex Calaterio nemore procedet fear will-tremble after these-things from the-Calaterian forest will-proceed ardea, quæ insulam per biennium circumvolabit. Nocturno a-heron which the-island for two-years will-fly-round with-nightly clamore convocabit volatilia, et omne genus volucrum cry it-will-call-together the-birds and every kind of-fowls associabit sibi. In culturas mortalium irruent, et omnia will-associate to-itself upon the-tillages of-mortals they-will-rush and all grana messium devorabunt. Sequetur fames populum, atque the-grains of-the-harvests will-devour will-follow hunger the-people and dira mortalitas famem. At cum calamitas tanta cessaverit, dire mortality the-hunger but when calamity so-great will-have-ceased adibit detestabilis ales vallem Galabes, atque ipsam will-approach the-detestable bird the-valley Galabes and it in excelsum montem levabit. In cacumine quoque ipsius, into a-lofty mountain will-raise on the-top also of-it plantabit quercum, atque intra ramos nidificabit. Tria it-will-plant an-oak and within the-branches will-nest three ova procreabuntur in nido: ex quibus vulpes, lupus, et eggs will-be-produced in the-nest from which a-fox a-wolf and ursus egredientur. Devorabit vulpes matrem et asininum a-bear will-go-out will-devour the-fox the-mother and an-ass's caput gestabit. Monstro igitur assumpto, terrebit fratres head will-carry the-monster therefore assumed it-will-terrify brothers suos, ipsosque in Neustriam fugabit. At ipsi excitabunt its-own and-them into Neustria will-put-to-flight but they will-rouse aprum dentosum in illa, et navigio revecti cum vulpe a-boar toothed in it and by-ship carried-back with the-fox congregientur. Quæ cum certamen inierit, finget se will-engage which when the-contest it-will-have-entered will-feign itself defunctam, et aprum in pietatem movebit. Mox adibit dead and the-boar to pity will-move soon will-approach ipse cadaver, et dum superstabit, anhelabit in oculos it-itself the-corpse and while it-will-stand-over it-will-breathe into the-eyes ejus et faciem. At ipsa non oblita præteriti doli, its and face but it not having-forgotten of-the-past trick mordebit sinistram pedem ipsius, totumque ex corpore will-bite the-left foot its and-the-whole from the-body evellet. Saltu quoque facto, eripiet ei dextram will-tear-out with-a-leap also made it-will-snatch from-him the-right aurem et caudam, et intra cavernas montium delitebit. ear and tail and within the-caverns of-the-mountains will-lie-bid Aper ergo illusus, requiret lupum et ursum, ut ei the-boar therefore mocked will-ask the-wolf and the-bear that to-him amissa membra restituant. Qui ut causam inierint, the-lost limbs they-may-restore who when the-cause they-will-have-entered promittent ei duos pedes vulpis, et aures et caudam, will-promise to-him two feet of-the-fox and ears and tail et ex ipsis porcina membra component. Acquiescet ipse, and from them swinish limbs they-will-compose will-assent it-itself promissamque restaurationem expectabit. Interim descendet and-the-promised restoration will-await meanwhile will-descend vulpes de montibus, et sese in lupum mutabit, et the-fox from the-mountains and itself into a-wolf will-change and quasi colloquium habitura cum apro, adibit illum, et as-if a-parley about-to-have with the-boar will-approach it and callide ipsum totum devorabit. Exin transvertet sese in craftily it whole will-devour thence it-will-turn itself into aprum, et quasi sine membris expectabit germanos: sed a-boar and as-if without limbs will-await the-brothers but et ipsos, postquam advenerint, subito dente interficiet, also them after they-will-have-come with-sudden tooth will-kill atque capite leonis coronabitur. In diebus ejus nascetur and with-the-head of-a-lion will-be-crowned in the-days its will-be-born serpens, qui neci mortalium imminebit. Longitudine a-serpent which on-the-death of-mortals will-press with-length sua circuibit Londoniam, et quosque prætereuntes its-own it-will-go-round London and all passing-by devorabit. Bos montanus caput lupi assumet, dentesque will-devour the-ox mountain the-head of-a-wolf will-assume and-teeth suos in Fabrica Sabrina dealbabit. Associabit sibi greges its-own in the-Forge of-the-Severn will-whiten will-associate to-itself the-flocks Albanorum et Cambriæ qui Tamensem fluvium potando of-the-Albans and of-Cambria which the-Thames river by-drinking siccabunt. Vocabit asinus hircum prolixæ barbæ, et formam will-dry will-call the-ass the-goat of-long beard and the-form ipsius mutuabit. Indignabitur igitur montanus, vocatoque its will-borrow will-be-indignant therefore the-mountain-one and-called lupo, cornutus taurus in ipsos fiet. Ut autem sævitix the-wolf a-horned bull against them will-become when moreover to-savagery indulerit, devorabit carnes eorum et ossa, sed in it-will-have-indulged it-will-devour the-flesh their and bones but on cacumine Uriani cremabitur: favillæ rogi mutabuntur in the-top of-Urian will-be-burned the-ashes of-the-pyre will-be-changed into cygnos, qui in sicco quasi in flumine natabunt. Devorabunt swans which on dry-land as-if in a-river will-swim they-will-devour pisces in piscibus: et homines in hominibus deglutient. fishes in fishes and men in men they-will-swallow Superveniente vero senectute, efficiuntur submarini lupi, coming-on indeed old-age they-will-be-made under-sea wolves atque submarinas insidias machinabuntur. Submergent navalia, and under-sea ambushes will-contrive they-will-sink the-ships et argentum non minimum congregabunt. Fluctuabit iterum and silver not least will-gather will-surge again Tamensis: convocatisque fluminibus ultra metas alvei the-Thames and-called-together the-rivers beyond the-bounds of-the-channel procedet: urbes vicinas occultabit: oppositosque montes will-proceed the-cities neighboring it-will-hide and-the-opposing mountains subvertet. Adhibebit sibi fontem Galaes dolo et nequitia will-overturn it-will-apply to-itself the-spring of-Galabes with-guile and wickedness repletus. Orientur ex eo seditiones provocantes Venedotos filled will-arise from it seditions provoking the-Venedotians ad prælia. Convenient nemorum robora, et cum saxis to battles will-come-together of-the-forests the-oaks and with the-rocks Gewisseorum congregientur. Aderit corvus cum miluis, et of-the-Gewissae will-engage will-be-present a-raven with the-kites and corpora peremptorum devorabit. Super muros Claudiocestriæ the-bodies of-the-slain will-devour upon the-walls of-Gloucester nidificabit bubo, et in nido ejus procreabitur asinus. will-nest an-owl and in the-nest its will-be-produced an-ass Educabit illum serpens Malvernæ, et in plures dolos will-bring-up it the-serpent of-Malvern and into many tricks commovebit. Sumpto diademate transcendet excelsa, et will-move taken the-diadem it-will-climb the-heights and horrido racanatu populum patriæ terrebit. In diebus ejus with-horrid braying the-people of-the-country will-terrify in the-days its titubabunt montes Panchaii, et provinciæ nemoribus suis will-totter the-mountains of-Panchaea and the-provinces of-forests their-own spoliabuntur. Superveniet namque vermis ignei anhelitus: will-be-despoiled will-come-upon for a-worm of-fiery breath qui emissio vapore comburet arbores. Egredientur ex eo which sent-forth vapor will-burn the-trees will-go-out from it septem leones capitibus hircorum turpati. Fœtore narium seven lions with-the-heads of-goats disfigured with-the-stench of-nostrils mulieres corrumpent: et proprias communes facient. Nesciet the-women they-will-corrupt and their-own common will-make will-not-know pater proprium filium: quia more pecudum lascivient. the-father his-own son because in-the-manner of-cattle they-will-wanton Superveniet vero gigas nequitia, qui oculorum acumine will-come-upon indeed a-giant of-wickedness who with-the-keenness of-eyes terrebit universos. Exsurget in eum draco Wigornia, will-terrify all will-rise-up against him the-dragon of-Worcester et eum exterminare conabitur: facto autem congressu, and him to-exterminate will-try made moreover the-engagement superabitur draco, et nequitia victoris opprimetur. will-be-overcome the-dragon and by-the-wickedness of-the-victor will-be-crushed Ascendet namque draconem, et exuta veste insidebit he-will-mount for the-dragon and stripped the-garment will-sit-on-it nudus. Feret illum ad sublimia draco: erectaque cauda naked will-carry him to the-heights the-dragon and-raised tail verberabit nudatum. Resumpto iterum vigore gigas, fauces will-lash the-stripped-one resumed again strength the-giant the-jaws illius gladio confringet. Implicabitur tandem sub cauda ejus of-it with-sword will-break will-be-entangled at-last under the-tail its draco, et venenatus interibit. Succedet post illum Totonesius the-dragon and poisoned will-perish will-succeed after him the-Totnes aper, et dira tyrannide opprimet populum, Eliminabit boar and with-dire tyranny will-oppress the-people will-banish Claudiocestria leonem, qui diversis praeliis inquietabit Gloucester a-lion which with-various battles will-harass sævientem. Conculcabit eum sub pedibus suis, apertisque the-raging-one will-trample him under feet its-own and-with-opened faucibus terrebit. Cum regno tandem litigabit leo, et jaws will-terrify with the-kingdom at-last will-quarrel the-lion and terga nobilium transcendet. Superveniet taurus litigio, the-backs of-the-nobles will-climb will-come-upon a-bull to-the-quarrel et leonem dextro pede percutiet. Expellet eum per and the-lion with-the-right foot will-strike will-drive-out him through regni diversoria: sed cornua sua in muros Oxonia of-the-kingdom the-lodgings but horns its-own on the-walls of-Oxford confringet. Vindicabit leonem vulpes Kaerdubali, et totum will-break will-avenge the-lion the-fox of-Kaerdubalum and the-whole suis dentibus consumet. Circumcinget illam Lindocolinus with-its-own teeth will-consume will-gird-round it the-Lincoln coluber, præsentiamque suam draconibus multis horribili sibilo snake and-presence its-own to-the-dragons many with-horrible hiss testabitur. Congredientur deinde dracones ut alter alterum will-attest will-engage then the-dragons so-that one the-other dilaniet? Opprimet alatus carentem alis et unguis in may-tear-apart will-crush the-winged-one the-one-lacking wings and the-claws into genas venenatas configet. Ad certamen convenient alii: et the-cheeks poisoned will-fix to the-contest will-come-together others and alius alium interficiet. Succedet quintus interfectus, residuos one another will-kill will-succeed the-fifth killed the-remaining diversis machinationibus confringet. Transcendet dorsum with-various contrivances will-break he-will-climb the-back unius cum gladio, et caput a corpore separabit, Exuta of-one with the-sword and the-head from the-body will-separate stripped veste ascendet alium, et dexteram caudæ lævamque the-garment he-will-mount another and the-right-hand on-the-tail and-the-left injiciet. Superabit eum nudus, cum nihil indutus proficeret. will-throw he-will-overcome him naked when nothing clothed he-could-achieve Ceteros tormentabit a dorso, et in rotunditatem regni the-others he-will-torment from the-back and into the-roundness of-the-kingdom compellet. Superveniet leo rugiens, immani feritate will-drive will-come-upon a-lion roaring with-monstrous ferocity timendus. Ter quinque portiones in unum reducet: to-be-feared three-times five portions into one he-will-lead-back et solus possidebit populum. Splendebit gigas colore niveo, and alone will-possess the-people will-shine the-giant with-color snowy et ad candidum populum germinabit. Deliciæ principes and for a-white people will-sprout delights the-princes enervabunt: et subiti in beluas mutabuntur. Orietur in will-enervate and suddenly into beasts they-will-be-changed will-arise among illis leo humano cruore turgidus. Supponetur ei in them a-lion with-human gore swollen will-be-put-under to-him in segete falcifer: qui dum laborabit metere, opprimetur ab the-crop a-sickle-bearer who while he-will-labor to-reap will-be-crushed by illo. Sedabit illos Eboracensis auriga: expulsoque domino in him will-calm them the-York charioteer and-driven-out the-lord into currum quem ducit ascendet. Abstracto gladio minabitur the-chariot which he-drives will-mount drawn the-sword he-will-threaten Orienti: et rotarum suarum vestigia replebit sanguine. Fiet to-the-East and of-the-wheels his-own the-tracks will-fill with-blood will-become deinde piscis in æquore, qui sibilo serpentis revocatus, then a-fish in the-sea which by-the-biss of-a-serpent recalled coibit cum illo. Nascentur inde tres tauri fulgurantes, will-mate with it will-be-born thence three bulls flashing qui consumptis pascuis convertentur in arbores. Gestabit which consumed the-pastures will-be-turned into trees will-carry primus flagellum vipereum, et a post genito dorsum the-first a-whip viperous and from the-after born back suum divertet. Nitetur ipse flagellum eripere: sed ab his-own will-turn will-strive he-himself the-whip to-snatch but by ultimo corripitur. Avertent mutuo a sese facies, donec the-last will-be-seized they-will-turn mutually from themselves the-faces until venenatum scyphum projecerint: succedet ei Colonus the-poisoned cup they-will-have-thrown-away will-succeed to-him the-Farmer Albanix, cui a dorso imminet serpens. Vacabit ipse of-Albany on-whom from the-back will-press a-serpent will-be-busy he-himself tellurem subvertere, ut patriæ segetibus candeant. the-earth to-overturn so-that the-countries with-crops may-shine-white Laborabit serpens venenum diffundere: ne herbæ in messes will-labor the-serpent poison to-pour-out lest the-grasses into harvests proveniant. Letali clade deficiet populus: et mœnia urbium may-come with-deadly disaster will-fail the-people and the-walls of-the-cities desolabuntur. Dabitur in remedium urbs Claudii, quæ will-be-desolated will-be-given as remedy the-city of-Claudius which alumnam flagellantis interponet. Stateram namque medicinæ the-nursling of-the-scourger will-interpose the-balance for of-medicine gestabit: et in brevi renovabitur insula. Deinde duo she-will-carry and in short-time will-be-renewed the-island then two subsequentur sceptrum, quibus cornutus draco ministrabit. will-follow the-scepter to-whom a-horned dragon will-minister Adveniet alter in ferro: et volentem equitabit serpentem. will-come the-one in iron and a-flying will-ride serpent Nudato corpore insidebit dorso: et dexteram caudæ injiciet. stripped body he-will-sit-on the-back and the-right-hand on-the-tail will-throw Clamore ipsius excitabuntur maria: et timorem secundo by-the-cry his will-be-roused the-seas and fear into-the-second injiciet. Secundus itaque sociabitur leoni: sed exorta will-throw the-second and-so will-be-allied to-the-lion but having-arisen lite congressum facient. Mutuis cladibus succumbent a-quarrel an-engagement they-will-make by-mutual disasters they-will-succumb mutuo, sed feritas beluæ prævalebit. Superveniet quidam mutually but the-ferocity of-the-beast will-prevail will-come-upon a-certain-one in tympano et cithara, et demulcebit leonis sævitiam. with a-drum and a-harp and will-soothe of-the-lion the-savagery Pacificabuntur ergo nationes regni, et leonem ad will-be-pacified therefore the-nations of-the-kingdom and the-lion to stateram provocabunt. Locata sede ad pensas vacabit: sed the-balance will-call placed the-seat to the-weights he-will-attend but palmas in Albaniam extendet. Tristabuntur ergo Aquilonares the-palms into Albany he-will-stretch will-be-saddened therefore the-northern provinciæ, et ostia templorum reserabunt. Signifer lupus provinces and the-doors of-the-temples will-unbar the-standard-bearer wolf conducet turmas, et Cornubiam cauda sua circumcinget: will-lead the-troops and Cornwall with-tail its-own will-gird-round resistet ei miles in curru, qui populum illum in aprum will-resist him a-knight in a-chariot who people that into a-boar mutabit. Vastabit ergo aper provincias: sed in profundo will-change will-lay-waste therefore the-boar the-provinces but in the-deep Sabrinæ occultabit caput. Amplexabitur homo leonem in auro: of-the-Severn will-bide the-head will-embrace a-man a-lion in gold et fulgor auri oculos intuentium excæcabit. Candebit and the-flash of-the-gold the-eyes of-the-beholders will-blind will-shine-white argentum in circuitu, et diversa torcularia vexabit. Imposito silver in the-circuit and various winepresses will-trouble placed-on vino inebriabuntur mortales: et postposito cœlo in terram the-wine will-be-made-drunk mortals and set-aside heaven to the-earth respicient. Ab eis vultus avertent sidera, et solitum they-will-look from them faces will-turn-away the-stars and the-accustomed cursum confundent. Arebunt segetes his indignantibus, course will-confound will-dry the-crops these being-indignant et humor convexi negabitur. Radices et rami vices and the-moisture of-the-vault will-be-denied the-roots and the-branches places mutabunt: novitasque rei erit in miraculum. Splendor will-change and-the-novelty of-the-thing will-be for a-wonder the-splendor Solis electro Mercurii languebit: et erit horror of-the-Sun by-the-amber of-Mercury will-languish and there-will-be horror insipientibus. Mutabit clypeum Stilbon Arcadiæ: vocabit to-the-beholders will-change the-shield Stilbon of-Arcadia will-call Venerem galea Martis. Galea Martis umbram conficiet: Venus the-helmet of-Mars the-helmet of-Mars a-shadow will-make et transibit terminos furor Mercurii. Nudabit ensem Orion and will-cross the-limits the-fury of-Mercury will-bare the-sword Orion ferreus. Vexabit nubes Phœbus æquoreus. Exibit Jupiter iron will-trouble the-clouds Phoebus of-the-sea will-leave Jupiter licitas semitas: et Venus deseret statutas lineas. Saturni the-lawful paths and Venus will-desert the-appointed lines of-Saturn sideris livor pluendo corruet, et falce recurva mortales of-the-star the-malice by-raining will-fall and with-sickle curved mortals perimet. Bis senus numerus domorum siderum, deflebit will-destroy twice six the-number of-the-houses of-the-stars will-bewail hospites ita transcurrere. Omittent Gemini complexus solitos, the-guests so to-run-across will-omit the-Twins the-embraces accustomed et urnam in fontes provocabunt. Pensa libræ oblique and the-urn into the-springs will-call the-weights of-the-scale obliquely pendebunt, donec aries recurva cornua sua supponat. Cauda will-hang until the-ram curved horns its-own puts-under the-tail Scorpionis procreabit fulgura, et Cancer cum Sole litigabit. of-the-Scorpion will-produce lightnings and the-Crab with the-Sun will-quarrel Ascendet Virgo dorsum Sagittarii, et flores virgineos will-climb the-Virgin the-back of-the-Archer and flowers virginal offuscabit. Currus Lunæ turbabit Zodiacum: et in fletum will-darken the-chariot of-the-Moon will-disturb the-Zodiac and into weeping prorumpent Pleiades. Officia jam nulla redibunt: sed clausa will-burst the-Pleiades the-duties now none will-return but shut janua in crepidinibus Ariadne delitebit. In ictu radii the-door in the-crevices Ariadne will-lie-bid in the-stroke of-the-ray exsurgent æquora, et pulvis veterum renovabitur. Confligent will-rise-up the-seas and the-dust of-the-ancients will-be-renewed will-clash venti diro sufflamine, et sonitum inter sidera conficient. the-winds with-dire blast and a-sound among the-stars will-make

BOOK VIII

Vortegirinus interrogat Merlinum de morte sua

I · VORTIGERN ASKS MERLIN ABOUT HIS DEATH

Vortigern praises the prophecies and asks Merlin how his life will end. Merlin warns him to flee the sons of Constantine, who are already sailing from Armorica to avenge their father and will burn him in a tower. Aurelius will be crowned, restore the churches, and die of poison, and Uther will succeed him and die the same way; the next day Aurelius lands at Totnes with ten thousand knights.

Cum igitur hæc et alia multa prophetasset Merlinus, when therefore these-things and others many had- prophesied Merlin ambiguitate verborum suorum adstantes in admirationem by-the-ambiguity of-words his-own the-bystanders into wonder commovit. Vortegirinus vero præ ceteris admirans, et sensum he-moved Vortigern but before the-others wondering both the-sense juvenis, et vaticinia collaudabat. Neminem enim præsens of-the-youth and the-prophecies praised no-one for the-present ætas produxerat, qui ora sua in hunc modum coram ipso age had-produced who lips his-own in this manner before him solvisset. Scire igitur volens exitum vitæ suæ, rogavit juvenem had-loosed to-know therefore wishing the-end of-life his-own he-asked the-youth sibi indicare quod sciebat. Ad hæc Merlinus: "Ignem to-him to-show what he-knew at these-things Merlin the-fire filiorum Constantini diffuge: si diffugere valueris. Jam of-the-sons of-Constantine flee if to-flee you-will-be-able already naves parant: jam Armoricanum littus deserunt: jam vela ships they-prepare already the-Armorican shore they-desert already sails per æquora pandunt: petent Britanniam insulam: invadent across the-seas they-spread they-will-seek Britain the-island they-will-invade Saxoniam gentem: subjugabunt populum nefandum: sed prius the-Saxon people they-will-subjugate the-people abominable but first te intra turrim inclusum comburent. Malo tuo patrem eorum you within a-tower shut-in they-will-burn to-evil your father their prodidisti: et Saxones in insulam invitasti. Invitasti eos you-betrayed and the-Saxons into the-island you-invited you-invited them tibi in præsidium: sed supervenerunt in tuum supplicium. for-you as protection but they-have-come-upon to your punishment Imminent tibi duo funera: nec est promptum, utrum prius threaten you two deaths nor is it-plain which first vitabis. Hinc enim regnum tuum devastabunt Saxones, et you-will-avoid on-this-side for kingdom your will-lay-waste the-Saxons and leto tuo incumbent: hinc autem applicabunt duo fratres, on-death your will-press on-that-side moreover will-land two brothers Aurelius et Utherpendragon, qui mortem patris sui in Aurelius and Uther-Pendragon who the-death of-father their-own on te vindicare nitentur. Quære tibi diffugium si poteris: you to-avenge will-strive seek for-yourself a-refuge if you-will-be-able cras Totonesium littus tenebunt. Rubebunt sanguine tomorrow the-Totnes shore they-will-hold will-redden with-the-blood Saxonum facies: et interfecto Hengisto Aurelius Ambrosius of-the-Saxons the-faces and killed Hengist Aurelius Ambrosius coronabitur. Pacificabit nationes: restaurabit ecclesias: sed will-be-crowned he-will-pacify the-nations he-will-restore the-churches but veneno deficiet. Succedet ei germanus suus Utherpendragon: by-poison he-will-fail will-succeed to-him brother his-own Uther-Pendragon cujus dies anticipabuntur veneno. Aderunt tantæ proditiōni whose days will-be-anticipated by-poison will-be-present at-so-great treachery posterī tui, quos aper Cornubiæ devorabit. Nec mora, descendants your whom the-boar of-Cornwall will-devour nor delay cum crastina dies illuxit, applicuit Aurelius Ambrosius cum when the-next day dawned landed Aurelius Ambrosius with germano suo, decem milibus militum comitatus. brother his-own by-ten thousand of-knights accompanied Aurelius Ambrosius, rex Britanniaë factus, Vortegirnum obsessum igne perimit

II · AURELIUS AMBROSIIUS BURNS VORTIGERN

The scattered Britons gather, and the clergy anoint Aurelius king. Before facing the Saxons, he marches on Vortigern in the town of Genoreu on the Wye. He reminds Eldol of Gloucester of Vortigern's betrayals of Constantine, of Constans, and of the whole people, and when the walls resist, fire burns the tower and Vortigern with it.

Rumore itaque adventus ipsius divulgato: convenerunt the-rumor and-so of-the-arrival his spread-abroad came-together undique Britones, qui in tanta clade dispersi fuerant: from-everywhere the-Britons who in so-great disaster scattered had-been et societate concivium suorum roborati, hilariores solito and by-the-fellowship of-fellow-citizens their-own strengthened more-cheerful than-usual efficiuntur. Convocato autem clero, inunxerunt Aurelium in are-made called-together moreover the-clergy they-anointed Aurelius into regem: et sese ei more suo submiserunt. Cumque king and themselves to-him in-manner their-own submitted and-when impetum in Saxones fieri cohortarentur, dissuasit rex. an-attack upon the-Saxons to-be-made they-urged dissuaded the-king Nam prius Vortegirnum persequi affectaverat. Adeo enim for first Vortigern to-pursue he-had-desired so-much for propter prodicionem patri illatam doluerat, quod nil on-account-of the-treachery on-the-father brought he-had-grieved that nothing agere videretur, nisi eum prius vindicaret. Affectum itaque suum to-do he-seemed unless him first he-avenged the-desire and-so his-own exequi desiderans, convertit exercitum suum in Cambriam, to-carry-out desiring he-turned army his-own into Cambria oppidumque Genoreu petivit. Diffugerat enim eo Vortegirnus, and-the-town Genoreu sought had-fled for there Vortigern ut tutum refugium haberet. Erat autem oppidum illud in so-that a-safe refuge he-might-have was moreover town that in natione Hergin super fluvium Ganiæ, in monte qui Cloarius the-region Hergin upon the-river of-the-Wye on the-mountain which Cloarius nuncupatur. Ut igitur ad illud pervenit Ambrosius, proditiōis is-called when therefore to it he-came Ambrosius of-the-treachery patri ac fratri illatæ reminiscens, Eldol ducem Claudiocestriæ on-father and brother brought remembering Eldol duke of-Gloucester affatur: “Respice dux nobilis hujus urbis mœnia, an addresses look O-duke noble of-this city the-walls whether poterunt Vorteginum protegere, quin gladii mei mucronem they-will-be-able Vortigern to-protect but-that of-sword my the-blade ipse intra viscera ipsius recondam? Promeruit enim necem: I-myself within the-bowels his may-bide he-has-deserved for death nec tibi ignotum esse existimo ipsum eam promeruisse. O nor to-you unknown to-be I-think him it to-have-deserved O hominem omnium sceleratissimum: O ineffabilibus tormentis man of-all most-wicked O with-unspeakable torments perdendum! Primo prodidit patrem meum Constantinum, qui to-be-destroyed first he-betrayed father my Constantine who ipsum et patriam a Pictorum irruptione liberaverat. Deinde him and the-country from of-the-Picts the-inroad had-freed then Constantem fratrem meum, quem ut perderet in regem Constans brother my whom that he-might-destroy into king promovit. Deinde cum ipsemet versutia sua insignitus he-advanced then when he-himself by-cunning his-own marked fuisset, intromisit concivibus Paganos, ut eos qui he-had-been he-let-in to-the-fellow-citizens Pagans so-that those who fidelitati meæ adhærebant, exterminaret: sed permittente deo to-fidelity my clung he-might-exterminate but permitting God in laqueum, quem fidelibus suis paraverat, incautus cecidit. into the-snare which for-the-faithful his-own he-had-prepared unwary he-fell

Nam ut nequitiam ipsius compererunt Saxones, ejecerunt for when the-wickedness his discovered the-Saxons they-threw illum e regno, quod neminem pigere debeat. Illud vero him from the-kingdom which no-one to-irk ought that indeed dolendum esse censeo, quod nefandus populus quem nefandus lamentable to-be I-judge that the-abominable people which abominable ille invitavit, nobiles cives exterminavit: fertilem patriam that-man invited the-noble citizens has-exterminated the-fertile country devastavit: sacras ecclesias destruxit: et Christianitatem fere has-laid-waste the-holy churches has-destroyed and Christianity almost a mari usque ad mare delevit. Nunc ergo cives from sea all-the-way to sea has-wiped-out now therefore O-citizens viriliter agite: et vindicate vos prius in istum, per quem manfully act and avenge yourselves first on this-man through whom hæc omnia mala accesserunt. Deinde vertamus arma in these all evils have-come then let-us-turn arms against hostes imminentes, et patriam ab eorum ingluvie liberemus. the-enemies threatening and the-country from their gluttony let-us-free Nec mora, diversis machinationibus incumbunt: mœnia nor delay with-various contrivances they-press-on the-walls diruere nituntur. Postremo, cum cetera defecissent, to-pull-down they-strive finally when the-other-things had-failed ignem adhibuerunt: qui cum alimentum reperisset, non fire they-applied which when nourishment it-had-found not acquievit adjunctus, donec turrim et Vortegirnum exarsit. rested joined until the-tower and Vortigern it-burned-up

Aurelii Ambrosii laudes

III • THE PRAISES OF AURELIUS AMBROSIIUS

Hengist and the Saxons fear Aurelius, a warrior no Gaul dared face, generous, devout, modest, and truthful, brave on foot and braver on horse. They withdraw beyond the Humber and fortify the cities there, near Scotland, the refuge of every invader. Aurelius marches north, grieving at the ruined churches, which he vows to restore.

Quod cum Hengisto Saxonibusque ejus relatum esset, invasit which when to-Hengist and-to-Saxons his reported had-been invaded eum timor: quia probitatem Aurelii timebat. Tanta namque him fear because the-prowess of-Aurelius he-feared so-great for virtus et audacia viro inerat: quod cum Galliarum valor and boldness in-the-man was-present that when of-the-Gauls partes frequentaret, non erat alter qui cum illo congredi the-parts he-frequented not there-was another who with him to-engage auderet. Nam si congressum fecisset, vel hostem ab equo dared for if an-engagement he-had-made either the-enemy from the-horse prosternebat: vel hastam in frusta confringebat. Præterea largus he-laid-low or the-spear into bits broke besides generous erat in dandis: sedulus in divinis obsequiis: modestus in he-was in giving diligent in divine services modest in cunctis: et super omnia mendacium vitans. Fortis pedes: fortior all-things and above all-things a-lie avoiding brave on-foot braver equo: et ad regendum exercitum doctus. Tales probitates ejus on-horse and for ruling an-army learned such prowesses his dum adhuc in Armorica Britannia moraretur, fama assiduis while still in Armorican Britain he-stayed fame with-constant volatibus in insulam detulerat. Timuerunt ergo eum Saxones, flights into the-island had-carried feared therefore him the-Saxons et sese trans Humbrum receperunt. In partibus illis and themselves beyond the-Humber withdrew in parts those munierunt civitates et oppida: nam patria illa semper refugio they-fortified the-cities and towns for country that always for-refuge eis patuerat. Vicinitas etenim Scotiæ adhibebat tutelam: to-them had-lain-open the-neighborhood for of-Scotland applied protection quæ in omne damnum civibus imminere consueverat. which upon every loss for-the-citizens to-press had-been-accustomed Natio namque ad inhabitandum horribilis, evacuata civibus, the-region for for inhabiting horrible emptied of-citizens tutum receptaculum alienigenis præstiterat. Siquidem Pictis, a-safe refuge to-foreigners had-offered indeed to-the-Picts Scotis, Dacis, Norwogensibus, ceterisque qui ad vastandam to-the-Scots to-the-Danes to-the-Norwegians and-to-the-others who for laying-waste insulam applicuerant, situ locorum admittente patuerat. the-island had-landed the-situation of-the-places admitting it-had-lain-open Securi ergo affinitatis patriæ, versus illam diffugerant: secure therefore of-the-nearness of-the-country towards it they-had-fled ut si opus fuisset, sese intra eam, quasi in propria so-that if need had-been themselves within it as-if into their-own castra recepissent. Cumque id Aurelio indicatum camp they-might-have-withdrawn and-when this to-Aurelius shown fuisset, audacior effectus, spem victoriæ recepit. Ocyus had-been bolder made hope of-victory he-received more-swiftly ergo convocatis civibus, exercitum suum augmentavit, atque therefore called-together the-citizens army his-own he-increased and versus Aquilonares partes iter arripuit. Et cum nationes towards the-northern parts the-march took and when the-regions præteriret, inspiciens illas desolatas, condolebat: maxime autem he-passed seeing them desolated he-grieved most moreover propter ecclesias usque ad solum destructas: quibus on-account-of the-churches all-the-way to the-ground destroyed to-which restaurationem promittebat, si triumpho potiretur. restoration he-promised if of-the-triumph he-should-gain-possession

Hengistus contra Ambrosium proficiscitur

IV · HENGIST MARCHES AGAINST AMBROSIUS

Hengist tells his two hundred thousand men that Aurelius has barely ten thousand Armoricans and that the island Britons are nothing. He lies in wait for him in the field of Maisbeli. Aurelius sees the trap, sets three thousand Armoricans on horseback and the rest with the islanders, and posts the Demetians and Venedotians on the hills and in the woods.

At Hengistus cum adventum ipsius comperisset, revocata but Hengist when the-arrival his he-had-discovered recalled audacia commilitones suos elegit, atque unumquemque boldness comrades his-own he-chose and each-one inanimans, hortabatur eos unanimiter et viriliter eis resistere: encouraging he-urged them with-one-mind and manfully them to-resist nec congressum Aurelii exhorrere. Dicebat autem ipsum nor the-engagement of-Aurelius to-dread he-said moreover him paucos ex Armoricanis Britonibus habere, cum numerus eorum few of the-Armorican Britons to-have since the-number of-them ultra decem milia non procederet. Insulanos vero Britones pro beyond ten thousand not went the-island indeed Britons for nihilo reputabat, cum toties eos in præliis devicisset. Proinde nothing he-reckoned since so-often them in battles he-had-defeated accordingly promittebat suis victoriam, et ob ampliorem numerum he-promised his-own victory and on-account-of the-larger number securitatem. Aderant enim circiter ducenta milia armatorum. security were-present for about two-hundred thousand of-armed-men

Et cum omnes hoc modo inanimasset, ivit obviam Aurelio and when all in-this manner he-had-encouraged he-went to-meet Aurelius in campum qui dicebatur Maisbeli, per quem ipse Aurelius into the-field which was-called Maisbeli through which he-himself Aurelius transiturus erat: affectabat namque et subitum et furtivum about-to-pass was he-desired for both a-sudden and stealthy impetum facere, Britonesque non præmeditados occupare. attack to-make and-the-Britons not having-foreseen to-seize Quod tamen non latuit Aurelium, nec idcirco distulit campum which yet not escaped Aurelius nor therefore he-delayed the-field adire: sed festinantius ingressus est. Ut ergo hostes to-approach but more-hastily entered he-has when therefore the-enemies prospexit, disposuit turmas suas: tria milia ex Armoricanis he-saw-ahead he-arranged troops his-own three thousand of the-Armoricians jussit equis adesse, ceteros cum insulanis mixtim in he-ordered on-horses to-be-present the-others with the-islanders mingled into aciem constituit. Demetios in collibus, Venedotos in prope the-battle-line he-set the-Demetians on the-hills the-Venedotians on near sitis collibus nemoribusque locavit. Erat autem causa, ut si situated hills and-forests he-placed was moreover the-cause that if Saxones ad ea diffugerent, adessent qui obviarent. the-Saxons to them should-flee there-might-be-present those-who would-oppose

Pugna inter Hengistum et Ambrosium committitur

V · THE BATTLE OF HENGIST AND AMBROSIUS

Eldol of Gloucester asks only for a chance to meet Hengist, who betrayed 460 unarmed barons at the parley. Aurelius urges his men to trust in the Son of God, and the armies clash. Hengist flees to Kaerconan, now Conisbrough, and makes a stand, and the Saxons are prevailing until the Armorican horse arrive.

Interea accessit Eldol dux Claudiocestriæ ad regem, et ait:

meanwhile approached Eldol duke of-Gloucester to the-king and says “Sola dies pro omnibus diebus vitæ meæ mihi sufficeret, a-single day for all days of-life my for-me would-suffice si congredi cum Hengisto mihi Deus concederet. Nempe if to-engage with Hengist to-me God should-grant surely succumberet alter nostrum, dum gladiis insisteremus.

would-succumb one of-us while with-swords we-pressed Reminiscor namque diei qua convenimus quasi pacem

I-remember for of-the-day on-which we-came-together as-if peace habitura: cumque de concordia ageretur, prodidit omnes about-to-have and-when about concord it-was-being-treated he-betrayed all qui aderant, et cum cultris interfecit, præter me solum, qui who were-present and with knives killed except me alone who reperito palo evasi. Succubuerunt eadem die quadringenti found a-stake escaped succumbed on-the-same day four-hundred sexaginta barones ac consules, qui omnes inermes advenerant.

sixty barons and consuls who all unarmed had-come

In tanto periculo subvectavit mihi deus palum, quo defensus in so-great danger brought-up to-me God a-stake by-which defended evasi.” Talia referebat Eldol. Sed Aurelius hortabatur

I-escaped such-things reported Eldol but Aurelius urged socios totam spem suam in filium Dei ponere: hostes the-comrades all hope their-own in the-son of-God to-place the-enemies suos deinde audacter invadere, et pro patria unanimiter their-own then boldly to-attack and for the-country with-one-mind pugnare. At Hengistus e contrario turmas suas componebat: to-fight but Hengist on the-contrary troops his-own arranged componendo præliari docebat: docendo singulas perambulabat, by-arranging to-fight he-taught by-teaching the-single-ones he-walked-through ut omnibus unam audaciam pugnandi ingereret. Dispositis so-that on-all one boldness of-fighting he-might-heap arranged tandem in utraque parte cuneis, congrediuntur acies: mutuos at-last on each side the-wedges engage the-lines mutual ictus ingeminant: cruorem non minimum diffundunt. Hinc blows redouble gore not least they-pour-out on-this-side Britones: hinc Saxones vulnerati moriuntur. Hortatur Britons on-that-side Saxons wounded die exhorts Aurelius Christianos, monet Hengistus Paganos: et dum Aurelius the-Christians admonishes Hengist the-Pagans and while talem decertationem facerent, nitebatur semper Eldol habere such contest they-made strove always Eldol to-have aditum congrediendi cum Hengisto, sed non habuit. an-approach of-engaging with Hengist but not he-bad Nam Hengistus ut vidit suos succumbere, Britones vero for Hengist when he-saw his-own to-succumb the-Britons indeed nutu Dei prævalere: confestim diffugit, petivitque oppidum by-the-nod of-God to-prevail forthwith fled and-sought the-town Kaerconan, quod nunc Cunungeburg appellatur. Insequitur eum Kaerconan which now Conisbrough is-called pursues him Aurelius: et quoscunque in itinere reperiebat, vel occidebat, Aurelius and whomever on the-march he-found either he-killed vel in servitutem compellebat. Cum ergo vidisset Hengistus, or into servitude drove when therefore had-seen Hengist quod insequeretur se Aurelius, noluit oppidum introire: that pursued him Aurelius he-was-unwilling the-town to-enter sed convocato in turmas populo, iterum praeliari disposuit.

but called-together into troops the-people again to-fight be-resolved Quippe sciebat, quod oppidum nequaquam Aurelio resisteret:

indeed he-knew that the-town by-no-means Aurelius would-resist et quod omne tutamen suum in gladio et hasta consisteret.

and that all protection his-own in sword and spear consisted Denique cum supervenisset Aurelius, composuit et ipse finally when had-come-up Aurelius arranged also he-himself socios suos in turmas, et acerrimam pugnam ingressit.

comrades his-own into troops and a-most-fierce fight heaped Porro Saxones unanimiter resistunt, et invicem letaliter further the-Saxons with-one-mind resist and in-turn mortally vulnerantur. Diffunditur sanguis utrobique: clamor morientium are-wounded is-poured-out blood on-both-sides the-cry of-the-dying vivos in iram ducebat. Postremo, Saxones praevaluisse, the-living into anger led finally the-Saxons would-have-prevailed nisi equestris turma Armoricanorum Britonum supervenisset.

unless the-mounted troop of-the-Armorican Britons had-come-up Constituerat namque eam Aurelius, sicut in primo praelio had-set for it Aurelius as in the-first battle fecerat. Superveniente ergo illa, cesserunt ei Saxones, et be-had-done coming-up therefore it gave-way to-it the-Saxons and aliquantulum dilacerati, vix iterum sese consociaverunt.

somewhat torn scarcely again themselves joined Aciores deinde Britones incumbunt: et hostes unanimiter more-fierce then the-Britons press-on and the-enemies with-one-mind infestant. Non cessabat Aurelius socios monere, obviantes harass not ceased Aurelius the-comrades to-admonish the-opposing vulnerare, fugientes insequi, atque suos hoc modo consolari.

to-wound the-fleeing to-pursue and his-own in-this manner to-console Similiter Eldol, nunc hac nunc illac discurrens infestis likewise Eldol now here now there running-about with-hostile vulneribus adversarios suos afficiebat: quicquid autem ageret, wounds adversaries his-own afflicted whatever moreover he-did æstuabat semper habere copiam congregiendi cum Hengisto.

 he-burned always to-have the-chance of-engaging with Hengist Britanni Saxones prosternunt; Hengistus ab Eldol vivus capitur

VI · ELDOL TAKES HENGIST ALIVE

Eldol and Hengist meet at last, and sparks fly from their swords like lightning. When Gorlois of Cornwall comes up, Eldol seizes Hengist by the nose-guard of his helmet and drags him among the Britons, crying that God has granted his wish. The Saxons scatter, Octa to York and Eosa to Alclud.

Cum itaque diversas irruptiones diversæ turmæ facerent, when and-so various inroads various troops made convenerunt forte pariter, et mutuos ictus ingeminare they-came-together by-chance together and mutual blows to-redouble cœperunt. O viros præ ceteris pugnaces, qui dum mutuos began O men before the-others pugnacious who while mutual enses alter in alterum immitterent, prosiliebant ex ictibus swords one upon the-other they-sent leapt-forth from the-blows ignes, ac si tonitrua coruscationesque procrearent. Diu fires as if thunders and-lightnings they-produced long dubium fuit, utri præstantior vigor inerat. Quandoque doubtful it-was in-which-of-two more-excellent strength was-present sometimes enim prævalebat Eldol, et cedebat Hengistus: quandoque for prevailed Eldol and yielded Hengist sometimes cedebat Eldol, et prævalebat Hengistus. Dum in hunc yielded Eldol and prevailed Hengist while in this modum decertarent: supervenit Gorlois dux Cornubiæ cum manner they-contended came-up Gorlois duke of-Cornwall with phalange cui præerat, turmas diversorum infestans. Quem the-phalanx over-which he-presided the-troops of-various-ones harassing whom cum aspexisset Eldol, securior effectus, cepit Hengistum per when had-seen Eldol more-secure made took Hengist by nasale cassidis, atque totis viribus utens, ipsum intra the-nose-guard of-the-helmet and with-all strength using him among cives extraxit. Maximo igitur gaudio fluctuans, excelsa voce the-citizens dragged with-greatest therefore joy surging with-lofty voice dicebat: "Desiderium meum implevit Deus, prosternite viri he-said desire my has-fulfilled God lay-low O-men obstantes Ambrones, prosternite. Vobis est in manu victoria: the-opposing Ambrones lay-low to-you is in hand the-victory vicistis enim devicto Hengisto. Inter hæc, Britones non you-have-conquered for defeated Hengist among these-things the-Britons not cessant Paganos oppugnare, sæpius ac sæpius invadere: et cum cease the-Pagans to-assault more-often and more-often to-attack and when retrocedebant, iterum revocata audacia resistere. Nec in hunc they-fell-back again recalled boldness to-resist nor in this modum quieverunt, donec potiti sunt victoria. Diffugerunt manner they-rested until gained they-have the-victory fled itaque Saxones, quo impetus quemque ducebat. Alii urbes, alii and-so the-Saxons where the-impulse each-one led some cities others montana nemorosa, alii naves petebant. At Octa, filius Hengisti, mountains wooded others ships sought but Octa son of-Hengist cum majori multitudine Eboracum adivit. Eosa vero cognatus with the-greater multitude York went-to Eosa but kinsman ejus urbem Alclud: et se cum innumeris armatis munivit. his the-city Alclud and himself with innumerable armed-men fortified

Eldol Hengisti caput gladio amputat

VII · ELDOL BEHEADS HENGIST

Aurelius takes Conisbrough and rests there three days, tending the wounded. Eldadus, bishop of Gloucester, cites Samuel's beheading of Agag and calls Hengist a second Agag. Eldol beheads him outside the city, and Aurelius has him buried under a mound in the pagan fashion.

Ut itaque triumphavit Aurelius, cepit urbem Conani, quam when and-so triumphed Aurelius he-took the-city of-Conan which supra memoraveram: et ibidem tribus diebus moratus est. above I-had-mentioned and there for-three days stayed he-has Interea iussit peremptos sepeliri, vulneratos curari, meanwhile he-ordered the-slain to-be-buried the-wounded to-be-cared-for fatigatos requiescere, et eosdem diversis levaminibus reficere. the-wearied to-rest and the-same with-various reliefs to-refresh Post hæc convocatis ducibus, decernere præcepit, quid after these-things called-together the-leaders to-decide he-ordered what de Hengisto ageretur. Aderat Eldadus Claudiocestrensis about Hengist should-be-done was-present Eldadus of-Gloucester Episcopus, frater Eldol, vir summæ prudentiæ et religionis.
Bishop brother of-Eldol a-man of-highest prudence and religion Hic cum Hengistum coram rege stantem aspexit, iussit this-one when Hengist before the-king standing he-saw ordered ceteros tacere, et in hunc modum locutus est: “Et si omnes the-others to-be-silent and in this manner spoken he-has even if all istum liberare conarentur, ego ipsum in frustra conciderem: him to-free should-try I him into bits would-cut-up insequeretur namque Prophetam Samuelem, qui cum Agag regem I-would-follow for the-Prophet Samuel who when Agag king Amalech in potestate tenuisset, concidit illum in frustra, dicens: of-Amalech in power he-had-held cut-up him into bits saying sicut fecisti matres sine liberis, sic faciam hodie matrem as you-have-made mothers without children so I-shall-make today mother tuam sine liberis inter mulieres: sic ergo facite de Hengisto, your without children among women so therefore do about Hengist qui alter Agag existit.” Accepit ergo Eldol gladium, et duxit who a-second Agag is took therefore Eldol a-sword and led eum extra urbem, et amputato capite ad tartara direxit. At him outside the-city and cut-off the-head to Tartarus directed but Aurelius, ut erat in cunctis rebus modestus, jussit eum sepeliri, Aurelius as he-was in all things modest ordered him to-be-buried et cumulum terræ super corpus ejus, Pagano more, apponi. and a-heap of-earth upon body his in-Pagan fashion to-be-placed Octa, Hengisti filius, in Eboraco obsessus, Aurelio sese dedit

VIII · OCTA SURRENDERS AT YORK

Besieged in York, Octa comes out with a chain in his hand and sand on his head and confesses that his gods are conquered. Eldadus recalls the mercy Israel showed the Gibeonites and argues that Christians should not be worse than Jews. Aurelius grants Octa and Eosa land near Scotland under a treaty.

Deinde duxit Aurelius exercitum suum ad Eboracum, then led Aurelius army his-own to York ut Octam filium Hengisti expugnaret. Cumque civitatem so-that Octa son of-Hengist he-might-storm and-when the-city obsideret: dubitavit Octa resistere, et urbem contra tantam he-was-besieging hesitated Octa to-resist and the-city against so-great multitudinem defendere. Communicato itaque consilio, egressus a-multitude to-defend shared and-so counsel gone-out est cum nobilioribus qui secum aderant, gestans catenam he-has with the-more-noble who with-him were-present carrying a-chain in manu, et arenam in capite: et sese regi in hæc in hand and sand on head and himself to-the-king in these verba præsentavit: “Victi sunt Dei mei, Deumque tuum words presented conquered have-been gods my and-God your regnare non hæsito, qui tot nobiles ad te hoc modo to-reign not I-doubt who so-many nobles to you in-this manner venire compellit. Accipe ergo nos, et catenam istam: to-come compels receive therefore us and chain this et nisi misericordiam habueris, habe nos ligatos, et ad and unless mercy you-will-have have us bound and for quodlibet supplicium voluntarie paratos.” Motus ergo Aurelius any punishment voluntarily ready moved therefore Aurelius pietate, jussit adjudicari quid in illos agendum foret. by-pity ordered to-be-adjudged what upon them to-be-done might-be Cum autem diversi diversa proferrent, surrexit Eldadus when moreover different-ones different-things put-forward rose Eldadus Episcopus, et sententiam hoc sermone disseruit: “Gibeonitæ the-Bishop and the-sentence in-this speech set-forth the-Gibeonites voluntarie venerunt ad filios Israel, petentes misericordiam, voluntarily came to the-sons of-Israel seeking mercy et impetraverunt. Erimus ergo Christiani peiores Judæis, and obtained-it shall-we-be therefore Christians worse than-the-Jews abnegantes misericordiam? misericordiam petunt, misericordiam denying mercy mercy they-seek mercy habeant. Ampla est insula Britannia, et in pluribus let-them-have ample is the-island of-Britain and in many locis deserta. Fœderatos ergo illos sinamus saltem deserta places deserted bound-by-treaty therefore them let-us-allow at-least the-deserts inhabitare, et nobis in sempiternum serviant. Acquievit to-inhabit and to-us for ever let-them-serve assented itaque rex Eldadi sententiæ, et misericordiam de eis and-so the-king of-Eldadus to-the-sentence and mercy about them habuit: exemplo etiam Octæ motus, venit Eosa ceterique had by-the-example also of-Octa moved came Eosa and-the-others qui diffugerant, et misericordiam impetraverunt. Dedit ergo who had-fled and mercy obtained he-gave therefore eis regionem juxta Scotiam, et fœdus cum eis confirmavit.” to-them a-region beside Scotland and a-pact with them confirmed Aurelius, profligatis hostibus, res regni renovat

IX · AURELIUS RESTORES THE KINGDOM

Aurelius orders the churches the Saxons destroyed to be rebuilt, beginning with York. He restores London, renews the laws, and returns lost estates to their heirs, then restores Winchester. At the monastery of Ambrius near Salisbury, where the betrayed nobles lie, he weeps and resolves to make the place a lasting memorial.

Triumphatis itaque hostibus, convocavit rex consules et triumphed-over and-so the-enemies called-together the-king the-consuls and principes regni intra Eboracum, præcepitque eis restaurare princes of-the-kingdom within York and-ordered them to-restore Ecclesias, quas gens Saxonum destruxerat. Ipse vero the-Churches which the-people of-the-Saxons had-destroyed he-himself but Metropolitanam sedem illius urbis, atque ceteros Episcopatus the-Metropolitan see of-that city and the-other Bishops provinciæ reâdificari incœpit. Emensis deinde quindecim of-the-province to-be-rebuilt began having-passed then fifteen diebus, cum operarios diversos in diversis locis statuisset, days when workmen various in various places he-had-set adiit urbem Londoniæ, cui hostilis irruptio non pepercerat. he-went-to the-city of-London to-which the-hostile inroad not had-spared Condolens igitur illius excidium, revocat undique cives grieving-with therefore its destruction he-recalls from-everywhere the-citizens residuos, et eam restituere aggreditur. Ibidem disposuit remaining and it to-restore undertakes there he-arranged regnum suum, legesque sopitas renovat, amissas avorum kingdom his-own and-the-laws lulled-asleep he-renews the-lost of-the-forefathers possessiones nepotibus distribuit. Quæ autem in tanta possessions to-the-descendants he-distributes those-which moreover in so-great calamitate heredes amiserant: largitæ sunt commilitonibus ejus. calamity heirs had-lost bestowed were on-the-comrades his Tota intentio ipsius versabatur circa regni restitutionem, the-whole intent his turned around of-the-kingdom the-restoration Ecclesiarum reformationem, pacis ac legis renovationem, of-the-Churches the-reform of-peace and of-law the-renewal justitiæ compositionem. Exin petivit Guintoniam, ut eam of-justice the-settlement thence he-sought Winchester so-that it sicut ceteras restitueret. Cumque in restauratione ejus quæ as the-others he-might-restore and-when in the-restoration its what-things ponenda erant posuisset: monitu Eldadi Episcopi, ivit ad to-be-placed were he-had-placed by-the-warning of-Eldadus the-Bishop he-went to monasterium prope Kaercaradoc, quæ nunc Salesberia dicitur, the-monastery near Kaercaradoc which now Salisbury is-called ubi consules et principes jacebant, quos nefandus Hengistus where the-consuls and princes lay whom the-abominable Hengist prodiderat. Erat ibi Cœnobium trecentorum fratrum in had-betrayed there-was there a-Monastery of-three-hundred brothers on monte Ambrii, qui, ut fertur, fundator ejus olim extiterat. the-mountain of-Ambrius who as it-is-said the-founder of-it once had-been Ut ergo locum quo defuncti jacebant circumspexit, et when therefore the-place where the-dead lay he-looked-round and pietate motus in lacrymas solutus est, postremo in diversas by-pity moved into tears loosened he-was finally into various meditationes inductus, deliberavit apud se qualiter locum meditations led he-deliberated with himself how the-place faceret memorabilem. Dignum namque memoria censebat he-might-make memorable worthy for of-memory he-judged cespitem, qui tot nobiles pro patria defunctos protegebat. the-turf which so-many nobles for the-country dead protected

De chorea gigantea

X · THE GIANTS' DANCE

The craftsmen cannot devise a fitting monument, and Archbishop Tremounus advises sending for Merlin, who is found at the spring of Galabes. Merlin refuses to prophesy idly but advises bringing the Giants' Dance from Mount Killaraus in Ireland. Its great stones, set in a ring, will stand for ever.

Convocatis itaque undique artificibus lignorum et lapidum, called-together and-so from-everywhere craftsmen of-timber and of-stones præcepit ingeniis uti, novamque structuram adinvenire, quæ be-ordered wits to-use and-a-new structure to-devise which in memoriam tantorum virorum in ævum constaret. Cumque in memory of-so-great men for ever might-stand and-when omnes ingeniis suis diffidentes, repulsam intulissent: accessit all wits their-own distrusting refusal had-brought approached Tremounus urbis Legionum Archiepiscopus ad regem, et ait: Tremounus of-the-City of-the-Legions Archbishop to the-king and says “Si uspiam est qui præceptum tuum aggredi valuerit, Merlinus if anywhere is who order your to-undertake may-be-able Merlin vates Vortegirni aggredietur. Quippe non existimo alterum in the-prophet of-Vortigern will-undertake-it indeed not I-think another in regno tuo esse, cui clarius sit ingenium, sive in futuris kingdom your to-be to-whom clearer may-be the-wit whether in future-things dicendis, sive in operationibus machinandis. Jube eum venire, to-be-said or in works to-be-contrived order him to-come atque ingenio suo uti, ut opus quod affectas constet." Cum and wit his-own to-use so-that the-work which you-desire may-stand when itaque de eo multa interrogasset Aurelius, misit diversos and-so about him many-things had-asked Aurelius he-sent various nuncios, per diversas nationes patriæ, ut inventum illum messengers through various regions of-the-country so-that found him adducerent: qui peragratis provinciis invenerunt eum in natione they-might-bring who traveled-through the-provinces found him in the-region Gewissorum, ad fontem Galabes, quem solitus fuerat of-the-Gewissae at the-spring of-Galabes which accustomed he-had-been frequentare. Indicato autem quid vellent, duxerunt illum ad to-frequent shown moreover what they-wished they-led him to regem. Excepit eum rex cum gaudio, iussitque futura dicere, the-king received him the-king with joy and-ordered future-things to-tell cupiens miranda audire. Cui Merlinus: "Non sunt revelanda desiring wonderful-things to-hear to-whom Merlin not are to-be-revealed huiusmodi mysteria, nisi cum summa necessitas incubuerit. such mysteries except when highest necessity will-have-pressed Nam si ea in derisionem sive vanitatem proferrem, taceret for if them in mockery or vanity I-were-to-put-forth would-be-silent spiritus qui me docet, et, cum opus superveniret, recederet." the-spirit which me teaches and when need came-upon would-withdraw Denique cum omnibus repulsam intulisset, noluit rex finally when to-all refusal he-had-brought was-unwilling the-king eum infestare de futuris, sed de operatione præmeditata him to-trouble about future-things but about the-work premeditated allocutus est. Cui Merlinus: "Si perpetuo opere sepulchram addressed he-has to-whom Merlin if with-perpetual work the-burial virorum decorare vuleris, mitte pro chorea gigantum, quæ of-the-men to-adorn you-will-wish send for the-dance of-the-giants which est in Killarao monte Hiberniæ. Est etenim ibi structura is on the-Killaraus mountain of-Ireland there-is for there a-structure lapidum, quam nemo hujus ætatis construeret, nisi ingenium of-stones which no-one of-this age could-build unless wit artem subvectaret. Grandes sunt lapides, nec est aliquis art were-to-bear-up great are the-stones nor is there-anyone cujus virtuti cedant: qui si eo modo quo ibi positi whose to-strength they-may-yield which if in-that manner in-which there placed sunt, circa plateam locabuntur, stabunt in æternum. they-are around a-space they-will-be-placed they-will-stand for ever Utherpendragon ad Hiberniam navigat

XI · UTHER PENDRAGON SAILS TO IRELAND

Aurelius laughs at fetching stones from so far, as if Britain had none. Merlin explains that the giants brought the stones from Africa for their healing power, since water poured over them cured the sick and wounded. Uther is sent with fifteen thousand men and Merlin to bring them.

Ad ea verba Merlini solutus est Aurelius in risum, dicens: at those words of-Merlin loosened was Aurelius into laughter saying “Qualiter id fieri posset, ut tanti lapides ex tam how this to-be-done could that so-great stones from so longinquo regno adveherentur, ac si Britannia lapidibus distant a-kingdom should-be-carried as if Britain of-stones careret, qui ad operationem sufficerent.” Ad hæc Merlinus: lacked which for the-work would-suffice at these-things Merlin “Ne moveas rex vanum risum: quia hæc absque vanitate do-not move O-king vain laughter because these-things without vanity profero. Mystici sunt lapides, et ad diversa medicamenta I-put-forth mystical are the-stones and for various medicines salubres. Gigantes olim asportaverunt eos ex ultimis finibus healthful the-giants once carried them from the-farthest borders

Africæ, et posuerunt in Hibernia, dum eum inhabitarent. of-Africa and placed in Ireland while it they-inhabited Erat autem causa, ut balnea intra illos conficerent, cum was moreover the-cause that baths within them they-might-make when infirmitate gravarentur. Lavabant namque lapides, et intra by-sickness they-were-weighed-down they-washed for the-stones and into balnea diffundebant: unde ægroti curabantur. Miscebant etiam the-baths poured whence the-sick were-cured they-mixed also cum herbarum confectionibus, unde vulnerati sanabantur. Non with of-herbs preparations whence the-wounded were-healed not est lapis ibi, qui medicamento careat.” Cum hoc audissent is a-stone there which of-medicine lacks when this had-heard Britones, censuerunt pro lapidibus mittere, populumque the-Britons they-judged for the-stones to-send and-the-people Hiberniæ prælio infestare, si eos detinerent. Postremo of-Ireland with-battle to-harass if them they-should-withhold finally eligitur Utherpendragon frater regis, et quindecim milia is-chosen Uther-Pendragon brother of-the-king and fifteen thousand armatorum, ut huic negotio parerent. Eligitur et ipse of-armed-men so-that to-this business they-might-attend is-chosen also he-himself Merlinus, ut ipsius ingenio et consilio agenda Merlin so-that his by-wit and counsel the-things-to-be-done tractarentur. Paratis deinde navibus, mare ingrediuntur, might-be-handled prepared then the-ships the-sea they-enter prosperisque ventis Hiberniam adeunt. and-with-favorable winds Ireland they-reach Gillomanus, rex Hiberniæ profligatur, Britanni choream giganteam secum reportant

XII · THE GIANTS' DANCE BROUGHT TO BRITAIN

The Irish king Gillomanus mocks the Britons and swears they will not take a single stone, but Uther routs him. At Killaraus the Britons fail to move the stones with cables and ladders, until Merlin laughs and takes them down with his own devices. At a Pentecost crown-wearing on Mount Ambrius, Aurelius makes Samson archbishop of York and Dubricius of the City of the Legions, and Merlin raises the stones around the graves.

Ea tempestate regnabat in Hibernia Gillomanus, juvenis at-that time reigned in Ireland Gillomanus a-youth miræ probitatis. Hic cum audisset, quod in Hiberniam of-wonderful prowess this-one when he-had-heard that in Ireland applicuissent Britones, collegit exercitum grandem, et eis had-landed the-Britons gathered an-army great and to-them obviam perrexit. Cumque didicisset causam adventus eorum, to-meet proceeded and-when he-had-learned the-cause of-the-coming of-them astantibus arrisit, et ait: "Non miror, si ignava gens at-the-bystanders he-smiled and says not I-wonder if the-cowardly people Saxonum, insulam Britonum devastare potuit, cum Britones of-the-Saxons the-island of-the-Britons to-lay-waste could since the-Britons bruti sint et stulti. Quis etenim hujusmodi stultitiam audivit? brutish are and foolish who for such folly has-heard Nunquid meliora sunt saxa Hiberniæ quam Britannicæ: surely-not better are the-rocks of-Ireland than of-Britain ut regnum nostrum pro ipsis ad præliandum provocetur? that kingdom our for them to fighting should-be-provoked Armate vos viri, et defendite patriam vestram, quia arm yourselves O-men and defend country your because dum mihi vita inerit, non auferent nobis etiam while in-me life will-be-present not they-will-take-away from-us even minimum lapidem choreæ.” Uther igitur, ut vidit ipsos ad the-least stone of-the-dance Uther therefore when he-saw them for præliandum paratos, festinato agmine in eos irruit. Nec fighting ready hastened column upon them rushed nor mora, prævaluerunt Britones: Hiberniensibusque laceratis ac delay prevailed the-Britons and-the-Irish torn and interfectis, Gillomanium in fugam pepulerunt. Potiti autem killed Gillomanius into flight they-drove having-gained moreover victoria, petierunt Killaraum montem, lapidumque structuram of-the-victory they-sought the-Killaraus mountain and-of-the-stones the-structure adepti, gavisī sunt, et admirati. Circumstantibus itaque having-reached rejoiced they-have and wondered standing-around and-so cunctis, accessit Merlinus, et ait: “Utimini viribus vestris, all approached Merlin and says use strengths your juvenes: ut in deponendo lapides istos, sciatis utrum O-youths so-that in taking-down stones these you-may-know whether ingenium virtuti, an virtus ingenio cedat.” Ad imperium igitur wit to-strength or strength to-wit yields at the-command therefore ejus indulserunt unanimiter multimodis machinationibus, his they-devoted-themselves with-one-mind to-manifold contrivances et aggressi sunt choream deponere. Alii funes, alii restes, and undertaken they-have the-dance to-take-down some cables others ropes alii scalas paraverunt, ut quod affectabant, perficerent: others ladders prepared so-that what they-desired they-might-complete nec ullatenus perficere valuerunt. Deficientibus cunctis, solutus nor in-any-way to-complete they-were-able failing all loosened est Merlinus in risum, et suas machinationes confecit. was Merlin into laughter and his-own contrivances made Denique cum omnia quæ necessaria erant apposisset: levius finally when all-things which necessary were he-had-applied more-easily quam credi potest lapides deposuit: depositos autem, than to-be-believed can the-stones he-took-down the-taken-down moreover fecit deferri ad naves, et introponi: et sic cum gaudio he-caused to-be-carried to the-ships and to-be-put-in and thus with joy in Britanniam reverti cœperunt. Et prosperantibus ventis into Britain to-return they-began and prospering winds applicant, sepulturasque virorum cum lapidibus apparant. they-land and-the-burials of-the-men with the-stones they-prepare Quod cum indicatum fuisset Aurelio, diversos nuncios which when shown had-been to-Aurelius various messengers per diversas partes Britanniae direxit: jussitque clerum ac through various parts of-Britain he-directed and-ordered the-clergy and populum submonere, submonitos vero, in montem Ambrii people to-summon the-summoned indeed on the-mountain of-Ambrius convenire, ut cum gaudio et honore prædictam sepulturam to-come-together so-that with joy and honor the-aforesaid burial repararent. Ad edictum ergo illius venerunt Pontifices ac they-might-restore at the-edict therefore his came the-Pontiffs and Abbates, et ex unoquoque ordine qui ei subditi fuerant: the-Abbots and from every order which to-him subject had-been et cum omnes convenissent, instante die quæ prædicta and when all had-come-together pressing the-day which foretold fuerat, imposuit Aurelius diadema capiti suo, festumque had-been put Aurelius the-diadem on-head his-own and-the-feast Pentecostes regaliter celebravit: tribusque sequentibus diebus of-Pentecost royally celebrated and-for-three following days continue celebrationi vacavit. Interea honores qui possessoribus continuously to-the-celebration attended meanwhile honors which owners carebant, domesticis suis largitur, ut eis obsequii sui lacked to-the-household his-own he-bestows so-that for-them of-service their-own laborem remuneraret. Evacuatae erant duæ Metropolitanæ the-labor he-might-repay emptied were the-two Metropolitan sedes, Eboraci videlicet et urbis Legionum, a pastoribus sees of-York namely and of-the-City of-the-Legions of shepherds suis: quibus communi populorum consilio consulere their-own for-which with-the-common of-the-peoples counsel to-provide volens, concessit Eboracum Samsoni illustri viro, summaque wishing he-granted York to-Samson a-renowned man and-for-highest religione famoso: urbem vero Legionum Dubricio, quem religion famous the-City indeed of-the-Legions to-Dubricius whom divina providentia in eodem loco profuturum elegerat. Cumque divine providence in the-same place about-to-profit had-chosen and-when hæc et cetera in regno suo statuisset: præcepit these-things and other-things in kingdom his-own he-had-set-up he-ordered Merlino lapides circa sepulturam erigere, quos ex Hibernia Merlin the-stones around the-burial to-raise which from Ireland asportaverat. At ille præceptis ejus obediens, eodem modo he-had-carried but he to-the-orders his obeying in-the-same manner quo in Killarao monte Hiberniæ positi fuerant, erexit illos in-which on the-Killaraus mountain of-Ireland placed they-had-been raised them circa sepulturam: et ingenium virtuti prævalere comprobavit. around the-burial and wit over-strength to-prevail proved Pascentius Saxones iterum in Britanniam introducit

XIII • PASCENTIUS BRINGS BACK THE SAXONS

Vortigern's son Pascentius, exiled in Germany, wins its youth with promises of gold and silver to avenge his father. He lands in the north and lays it waste. Aurelius meets him in battle and by God's will defeats him.

Eodem tempore Pascentius Vortegirni filius, qui in Germaniam at-the-same time Pascentius of-Vortigern son who into Germany diffugerat, commovebat omnem armatum militem illius regni had-fled stirred every armed knight of-that kingdom in Aurelium Ambrosium, patremque suum vindicare volebat.

against Aurelius Ambrosius and-father his-own to-avenge wished Promittebat autem infinitam copiam auri et argenti: si auxilio he-promised moreover an-infinite abundance of-gold and of-silver if with-the-help eorum Britanniam sibi subdidisset. Denique cum promissis of-them Britain to-himself he-had-subjected finally when with-promises suis universam juventutem corrupisset, paravit maximum his-own all the-youth he-had-corrupted he-prepared a-very-great navigium, applicuitque Aquilonaribus insulæ partibus, ac fleet and-landed on-the-northern of-the-island parts and eas vastare incœpit. Cumque illud regi nunciatum them to-lay-waste began and-when that to-the-king announced fuisse, collegit exercitum suum, obviamque eis perrexit atque had-been he-gathered army his-own and-to-meet them proceeded and sævientes hostes ad prælium provocavit. Qui ultro the-raging enemies to battle challenged who of-their-own-accord ad bellum venientes, commiserunt cum civibus pugnam: sed to war coming joined with the-citizens a-fight but volente Deo devicti fuerunt, et in fugam compulsi.

willing God defeated were and into flight driven Pascentius secundum cum Gillomanio revertitur. Mors Aurelii Ambrosii

XIV · THE DEATH OF AURELIUS AMBROSIIUS

Pascentius joins Gillomanus in Ireland, and they land at Menevia while Aurelius lies sick at Winchester. Pascentius promises the Saxon Eopa a thousand pounds of silver to kill the king, and Eopa, disguised as a monk and physician, gives Aurelius a poisoned potion, from which he dies in his sleep. A star appears with a fiery ball like a dragon, casting one ray toward Gaul and one toward the Irish Sea.

Pascentius ergo in fugam propulsus, non ausus est in Pascentius therefore into flight driven not dared has into Germaniam redire: sed retortis velis adivit Gillomanium in Germany to-return but turned-back sails went-to Gillomanus in Hiberniam, et ab illo receptus est. Et cum infortunium Ireland and by him received he-was and when misfortune suum notificasset, miseratus Gillomanius, pactus est ei bis-own he-had-made-known pitying Gillomanius pledged has to-him auxilium: conquerens de injuria quam Uther Aurelii frater help complaining about the-wrong which Uther of-Aurelius brother sibi intulerat, dum gigantum choream perquireret. Confirmato on-him had-brought while of-the-giants the-dance he-sought confirmed tandem inter ipsos fœdere, paraverunt sibi naves, et at-last between them the-pact they-prepared for-themselves ships and ingressi sunt eas, et in Meneviam urbem applicuerunt. entered they-have them and at Menevia the-city landed Quo divulgato, Utherpendragon excitata armatorum copia in which spread-abroad Uther-Pendragon roused of-armed-men a-host into Cambriam ivit, ut cum eis pugnaret. Frater etenim ejus Cambria went so-that with them he-might-fight the-brother for his Aurelius in Guintonia urbe morbo gravatus jacebat, nec Aurelius in Winchester the-city with-sickness weighed-down lay nor poterat ipse adire. Cumque id Pascentio et Gillomanio, could he-himself to-go and-when this to-Pascentius and to-Gillomanius Saxonibusque qui aderant compertum fuisset, gavisī sunt and-to-the-Saxons who were-present discovered had-been rejoiced they-have valde: quia existimabant propter infirmitatem ejus, regnum greatly because they-thought on-account-of the-sickness his the-kingdom Britanniae leviter subdendum. Et dum murmuratio inde per of-Britain easily to-be-subjected and while murmuring thence through populos fieret: accessit unus ex Saxonibus, nomine Eopa, ad the-peoples was-made approached one of the-Saxons by-name Eopa to Pascentium, et ait: "Quibus donariis ditabis hominem, qui Pascentius and says with-what gifts will-you-enrich the-man who Aurelium Ambrosium tibi interficiet?" Cui Pascentius: "O Aurelius Ambrosius for-you will-kill to-whom Pascentius O si quempiam reperirem, cui hoc in animo staret, darem if anyone I-found in-whom this in mind stood I-would-give illi mille argenti libras, familiaritatemque meam dum to-him a-thousand of-silver pounds and-intimacy my while viverem: et si fortuna permiserit ut regni diademate I-lived and if fortune will-have-permitted that of-the-kingdom with-the-diadem potiar, faciam illum centurionem, idque juramento I-may-gain-possession I-shall-make him a-centurion and-this by-oath confirmabo." Ad hæc Eopa: "Didici linguam Britannicam, I-shall-confirm at these-things Eopa I-have-learned the-tongue British moresque hominum scio: in medica arte peritus. Si igitur and-the-ways of-the-men I-know in the-medical art skilled if therefore ea quæ promittis, executus mihi fueris: fingam those-things which you-promise carried-out to-me you-will-have I-shall-pretend me Christianum esse, et Britannum: et quasi medicus myself a-Christian to-be and a-Briton and as-if a-physician præsentiam regis nactus, ei potionem qua obibit the-presence of-the-king having-got for-him a-potion by-which he-will-die conficiam. Et ut citius aditum reperiam, me monachum I-shall-make and that more-swiftly access I-may-find me a-monk religiosissimum, et omni dogmate eruditum fingam. Cumque most-religious and in-every doctrine learned I-shall-feign and-when hoc promississet, pepigit Pascentius fœdus cum illo, et ea this he-had-promised pledged Pascentius a-pact with him and those-things quæ spoponderat, juramento confirmavit. Rasit igitur Eopa which he-had-promised by-oath confirmed shaved therefore Eopa barbam suam, capiteque tonso, monachalem cepit habitum: beard his-own and-with-head tonsured the-monastic took habit et vasis medicamentorum suorum oneratus, iter and with-vessels of-medicines his-own loaded the-march Guintoniam versus arripuit. Urbem postremo ingressus, obtulit Winchester towards took the-city finally having-entered he-offered obsequium suum clientibus regis et gratiam in oculis service his-own to-the-retainers of-the-king and favor in the-eyes eorum invenit. Nihil enim desiderabilius expectabant quam of-them found nothing for more-desirable they-awaited than medicum. Exceptus itaque, et in præsentiam regis ductus, a-physician received and-so and into the-presence of-the-king led promisit se redditurum ei sanitatem, si potionibus suis promised himself about-to-restore to-him health if with-potions his-own foveretur. Nec mora, potionem conficere jussus, submiscuit he-were-cherished nor delay a-potion to-make ordered he-mixed-in venenum, regique porrexit. Quod cum cœpisset Aurelius et poison and-to-the-king held-out which when had-taken Aurelius and hausisset, jussus est confestim a nefando Ambrone sub had-drunk ordered he-was forthwith by the-abominable Ambron under coopertorio suo delitere, atque obdormire: ut magis potio coverlet his-own to-lie-bid and to-fall-asleep so-that more the-potion detestanda operaretur. Paruit illico rex monitis proditoris detestable might-work obeyed on-the-spot the-king the-warnings of-the-traitor illius, et quasi sanitatem recepturus obdormivit. Nec mora, that and as-if health about-to-receive fell-asleep nor delay illabente veneno per poros corporis et venas, consecuta gliding-in poison through the-pores of-the-body and the-veins followed est mors soporem, quæ nemini parcere consuevit. Interea has death the-sleep which to-no-one to-spare is-accustomed meanwhile nefandus proditor ille, inter unum et alium elapsus, in abominable traitor that between one and another having-slipped in curia nusquam comparuit. Hæc dum Guintoniæ agerentur, the-court nowhere appeared these-things while at-Winchester were-being-done apparuit stella miræ magnitudinis et claritatis, uno radio appeared a-star of-wonderful size and brightness with-one ray contenta: ad radium vero, erat globus igneus in similitudinem content at the-ray indeed was a-ball fiery into the-likeness draconis extensus, et ex ore illius procedebant duo of-a-dragon stretched and from the-mouth its proceeded two radii, quorum unus longitudinem suam ultra Gallicanum rays of-which one length its-own beyond the-Gallic clima videbatur extendere: alter vero versus Hibernicum region seemed to-stretch the-other but towards the-Irish mare vergens, in septem minores radios terminabatur. sea turning into seven lesser rays was-ended

Quomodo cometa Utheris regnum præsignificavit

XV · HOW THE COMET FORETOLD UTHER'S REIGN

The star terrifies all who see it, and Uther, marching into Cambria, asks Merlin its meaning. Weeping, Merlin announces that Aurelius is dead. Uther will win and be king of all Britain; the ray toward Gaul signifies a son of great power, and the other a daughter whose sons and grandsons will hold Britain.

Apparente vero præfato sidere, perculsi sunt omnes metu et appearing indeed the-aforsaid star struck were all with-fear and admiratione qui illud inspiebant. Uther etiam frater regis, wonder who it beheld Uther also the-brother of-the-king hostilem exercitum in Cambriam ducens, non minimo terrore a-hostile army into Cambria leading not by-the-least terror perculus, quosque sapientes adibat, ut quid portenderet struck all the-wise approached so-that what portended stella notificarent. Inter ceteros jussit vocare Merlinum: the-star they-might-make-known among the-others he-ordered to-call Merlin nam et ipse in exercitum venerat, ut consilio ipsius for also he-himself into the-army had-come so-that by-the-counsel his res præliorum tractarentur. Qui ut in præsentiam regis the-affairs of-battles might-be-handled who when into the-presence of-the-king ductus astitisset, jussus est significationem sideris enucleare. led he-had-stood ordered he-was the-meaning of-the-star to-unfold Mox ille in fletum erumpens, revocato spiritu exclamavit, soon he into weeping bursting recalled the-spirit cried-out et dixit: "O damnum irrecoverabile! O orbatum populum and said O loss irrecoverable O bereaved people Britanniæ! O nobilissimi regis migrationem! Defunctus est of-Britain O of-the-most-noble king the-departure died has inclytus Britonum rex Aurelius Ambrosius: cujus obitu the-renowned of-the-Britons king Aurelius Ambrosius whose by-death omnes obibimus, nisi Deus auxilium subvectet. Festina all we-shall-perish unless God help bring hurry ergo, dux nobilissime Uther, festina, et conflictum cum therefore O-leader most-noble Uther hurry and the-conflict with hostibus ne differas: victoria tibi in manu erit: et rex the-enemies do-not put-off the-victory for-you in hand will-be and king eris totius Britannia. Te enim sidus istud significat, you-will-be of-the-whole Britain you for star this signifies et igneus draco sub sidere. Radius autem qui versus and the-fiery dragon under the-star the-ray moreover which towards Gallicanam plagam porrigitur, portendit tibi filium futurum the-Gallic region is-stretched portends to-you a-son about-to-be potentissimum, cujus potestas omnia regna habebit quæ most-powerful whose power all kingdoms will-have which protegit. Alter vero radius filiam significat, cujus filii et it-protects the-other but ray a-daughter signifies whose sons and nepotes regnum Britannia successive habebunt.” grandsons the-kingdom of-Britain successively will-have Pascentius et Gillomanus in prælio occisi

XVI • PASCENTIUS AND GILLOMANIUS KILLED

Uther, still doubting Merlin, attacks the enemy near Menevia and wins, killing Gillomanus and Pascentius and cutting down the fleeing barbarians. Returning to Winchester, he finds that Aurelius has been buried. The bishops and clergy have laid him with royal rites within the Giants' Dance, as he ordered while he lived.

At Uther in dubio existens an verum protulisset Merlinus, but Uther in doubt being whether truth had-uttered Merlin in hostes tamen ut cœperat, progreditur. Advenerat against the-enemies yet as he-had-begun advances had-come namque prope Meneviam, ita ut iter medietatis diei restaret. for near Menevia so that a-march of-half a-day remained Cumque adventus ejus Gillomanio et Pascentio, Saxonibusque and-when the-arrival his to-Gillomanius and to-Pascentius and-to-the-Saxons qui aderant, relatus fuisset: egressi sunt ei obviam ut cum who were-present reported had-been gone-out they-have him to-meet so-that with ipso congredierentur. Porro ut sese adinvicem conspexerunt, him they-might-engage further when themselves each-other they-saw agmina sua in utraque parte statuerunt, cominusque columns their-own on each side they-set and-band-to-band accedentes pugnauerunt: pugnantes autem interficiuntur milites approaching they-fought fighting moreover are-killed knights hinc et inde, ut in tali eventu fieri solet. Denique cum on-this-side and on-that as in such event to-happen is-wont finally when multum diei præterisset, prævaluit Uther: interfectisque much of-the-day had-passed prevailed Uther and-killed Gillomanio et Pascentio, triumpho potitus est. Fugientes Gillomanius and Pascentius of-the-triumph gained he-has fleeing itaque Barbari, festinaverunt ad naves suas: sed fugiendo and-so the-barbarians hurried to ships their-own but in-fleeing a persequentibus civibus trucidabantur. Cessit prorsus victoria by the-pursuing citizens were-slaughtered fell utterly the-victory duci, favente Christo, qui post tantum laborem, quam to-the-leader favoring Christ who after so-great labor as citius potuit, regressus est Guintoniam. Advenerant more-swiftly he-could returned be-has to-Winchester had-come namque nuncii, qui regis casum indicaverant, ipsumque for messengers who of-the-king the-fate had-shown and-bim jam ab Episcopis patriæ sepultum esse prope Cœnobium already by the-Bishops of-the-country buried to-be near the-Monastery Ambrii, intra choream gigantum, quam vivens fieri of-Ambrius within the-dance of-the-giants which living to-be-made præceperat. Audito etenim ipsius obitu, convenerant in be-had-ordered heard for his death had-come-together into urbem Guintoniam Pontifices et Abbates, atque totus clerus the-city Winchester the-Pontiffs and Abbots and the-whole clergy ejusdem provinciæ, et ut tantum regem decebat funus of-the-same province and as so-great a-king befitted the-funeral ipsius procuraverunt. Et quia vivens adhuc præceperat, ut in his they-attended-to and because living still he-had-ordered that in cœmeterio quod ipse paraverat sepeliretur, tulerunt corpus the-cemetery which he-himself had-prepared he-should-be-buried they-carried the-body ejus eodem atque cum regalibus exequiis humaverunt. his to-the-same-place and with royal funeral-rites interred Utherpendragon fit rex Britanniae

XVII · UTHER PENDRAGON BECOMES KING OF BRITAIN

Uther is crowned with the assent of all. Remembering Merlin's reading of the star, he has two golden dragons made, offering one in the cathedral of Winchester and keeping the other to carry into battle. From then on he is called Pendragon, the dragon's head.

At Uther frater ejus, convocato regni clero et populo, but Uther brother his called-together of-the-kingdom the-clergy and people cepit diadema insulæ: annuentibusque cunctis sublimatus took the-diadem of-the-island and-with-assenting all raised est in regem. Reminiscens autem expositionis, quam he-was into king remembering moreover the-exposition which Merlinus de supradicto sidere fecerat: jussit fabricari duos Merlin about the-above-said star had-made he-ordered to-be-made two dracones ex auro, ad draconis similitudinem, quem ad radium dragons of gold to of-the-dragon the-likeness which at the-ray stellæ inspexerat. Qui ut mira arte fabricati fuerunt: of-the-star he-had-seen which when with-wonderful art made they-had-been obtulit unum in ecclesia primæ sedis Guintoniæ: alterum he-offered one in the-church of-the-first see of-Winchester the-other vero sibi ad ferendum in prælia retinuit. Ab illo ergo indeed for-himself for carrying into battles kept from that therefore die vocatus fuit Utherpendragon: quod Britannica lingua day called was Uther-Pendragon which in-the-British tongue caput draconis appellamus. Idcirco hanc appellationem recepit: the-head of-the-dragon we-call therefore this name he-received quia Merlinus eum in regem per draconem prophetaverat. because Merlin him into king through the-dragon had-protphesied

Octa et Eosa in prælio capiuntur

XVIII • OCTA AND EOSA ARE CAPTURED IN BATTLE

Released from their treaty by Aurelius' death, Octa and Eosa raise the Saxons and ravage the north as far as York. Uther is driven back to Mount Damen, but on Gorlois' advice the Britons descend at night and attack the Saxon camp. The Saxons are taken by surprise and slaughtered, and Octa and Eosa are captured.

Interea Octa Hengisti filius atque Eosa cognatus ejus, cum meanwhile Octa of-Hengist son and Eosa kinsman his since soluti essent a fœdere quod Aurelio Ambrosio pepigerant, loosed they-were from the-pact which with-Aurelius Ambrosius they-had-pledged moliti sunt inferre inquietudinem regi, atque nationes attempted have to-bring disturbance on-the-king and the-nations ejus dilacerare. Associabant namque sibi Saxones quos his to-tear-apart they-joined for to-themselves the-Saxons whom Pascentius conduxerat: nunciosque suos propter ceteros in Pascentius had-brought and-messengers their-own for the-others into Germaniam dirigebant. Maxima itaque multitudine stipatus, Germany directed with-greatest and-so multitude surrounded Aquilonares provincias invasit: nec sævitæ suæ indulgere the-northern provinces he-invaded nor to-savagery his-own to-indulge quievit, donec urbes et promontoria ab Albania usque ad rested until the-cities and strongholds from Albany all-the-way to Eboracum destruxit. Postremo cum urbem obsidere incepisset: York he-destroyed finally when the-city to-besiege he-had-begun supervenit Utherpendragon, cum tota regni fortitudine: came-up Uther-Pendragon with the-whole of-the-kingdom strength et cum illo præliatus est. Restiterunt viriliter Saxones, et and with him fought he-has resisted manfully the-Saxons and irruptiones Britonum tolerantes, ipsos in fugam pepulerunt. the-inroads of-the-Britons enduring them into flight drove Victoria autem potiti, insecuti sunt eos cadentes usque of-the-victory moreover having-gained pursued they-have them falling all-the-way ad montem Damen, dum sol diem stare permittebat. Erat to the-mount Damen while the-sun the-day to-stand permitted was autem mons ille arduus, in cacumine coryletum habens, moreover mountain that steep on the-top a-hazel-thicket having in medio vero saxa prærupta, latebris ferarum habilia. in the-middle indeed rocks sheer for-lairs of-wild-beasts fit Occupaverunt eum Britones totaque nocte intra saxa et seized it the-Britons and-the-whole night within the-rocks and coryleta commanserunt. At cum Arctos temonem vertere hazel-thickets stayed but when the-Bear its-pole to-turn cœpit: præcepit Uther consules suos, atque principes ad began ordered Uther consuls his-own and princes to se vocari, ut consilio eorum tractaret, qualiter in himself to-be-called so-that with-the-counsel their he-might-treat how upon hostes irruptionem facerent. Convenerunt ocyus cuncti the-enemies an-inroad they-might-make came-together more-swiftly all in præsentia regis: jussitque dicere quid consiliarentur: et in the-presence of-the-king and-he-ordered to-say what they-would-advise and Gorloi duci Cornubiæ primum sententiam suam proferre to-Gorlois the-duke of-Cornwall first opinion his-own to-put-forth præceperunt. Erat enim magni consilii et ætatis maturæ. they-ordered he-was for of-great counsel and of-age ripe ‘Non opus est’ (inquit) ambagibus vanis aut sermonibus, dum not need is he-says of-ambiguities vain or of-speeches while adhuc noctem restare conspiciamus. Utendum nobis est audacia still the-night to-remain we-see to-be-used by-us is boldness et fortitudine, si vita et libertate frui diutius volueritis. and strength if life and liberty to-enjoy longer you-will-wish Magna est Paganorum multitudo et pugnandi avida: nos vero great is of-the-Pagans the-multitude and for-fighting eager we indeed rariores existimus. Si autem diem supervenire expectaverimus: fewer are if moreover the-day to-come we-shall-have-awaited non censeo nobis utile, ut cum eis congrediamur. Eia ergo, not I-judge for-us useful that with them we-should-engage come therefore dum tenebræ durant, densatis turmis descendamus, ipsosque while the-darkness lasts thickened troops let-us-descend and-them intra castra sua subito impetu invadamus. Nam dum nihil within camp their-own with-sudden attack let-us-invade for while nothing hæsitaverint, nec nos venturos hoc modo existimaverint: they-will-have-hesitated nor us about-to-come in-this manner will-have-thought si unanimiter irruentes usi fuerimus audacia, triumpho if with-one-mind rushing used we-shall-have boldness of-the-triumph sine dubio potiemur. Placuit regi omnibusque illius without doubt we-shall-gain-possession pleased the-king and-all his sententia: monitisque ejus paruerunt. Statuti namque per opinion and-to-the-warnings his they-obeyed set for through turmas et armati, castra hostium petunt, et unanimi troops and armed the-camp of-the-enemies they-seek and with-one-minded affectu in ipsos irruere proponunt. At dum prope incederent, desire upon them to-rush they-propose but while near they-advanced compererunt vigiles eorum adventum, qui soporatos socios discovered the-watchmen their arrival who the-sleeping comrades sonitu lituorum evigilaverunt. Turbati itaque hostes, et with-the-sound of-trumpets awoke troubled and-so the-enemies and stupefacti, partim armare sese festinant, partim formidine stunned partly to-arm themselves hurry partly by-fear præoccupati, quo impetus ducebat, discurrebant. At Britones, seized-beforehand where the-impulse led ran-about but the-Britons densatis incedentes turmis, ocyus adeunt castra, et invadunt: thickened advancing troops more-swifly approach the-camp and attack repertoque aditu, nudatis ensibus in hostes concurrunt. Qui and-found an-entry bared swords upon the-enemies they-run who ita ex improviso occupati, non viriliter reddiderunt prælium: so from unforeseen seized not manfully returned battle cum ceteri audaciam cum præmeditatione recepissent. Porro since the-others boldness with forethought had-received further Britones acriter irruere intendunt, trucidare conantur: et the-Britons fiercely to-rush intend to-slaughter try and Paganos ad milia interficiunt: Denique capti sunt Octa et the-Pagans to thousands they-kill finally taken were Octa and Eosa, et Saxones penitus dissipati.

Eosa and the-Saxons utterly scattered Uther amore Igernæ captivatus, per artes Merlini magicas, ejus potitur

XIX · Uther and Igera

At an Easter feast in London, Uther falls in love with Igera, wife of Gorlois of Cornwall, who leaves the court in anger. Uther ravages Cornwall, and Gorlois puts Igera in Tintagel and shuts himself in Dimilioc. By Merlin's drugs Uther takes Gorlois' shape, enters Tintagel, lies with Igera that night, and Arthur is conceived.

Post illam vero victoriam, petivit urbem Alclud, provinciæque after that indeed victory he-sought the-city Alclud and-for-the-province illi disposuit: pacemque ubique renovavit: circumvit etiam that he-arranged and-peace everywhere renewed he-went-round also omnes Scotorum nationes, rebellemque populum a feritate all of-the-Scots the-nations and-the-rebellious people from ferocity sua deposuit: tantam namque justitiam exercebat per its-own put-down so-great for justice he-exercised through patrias, quantam alter prædecessorum suorum non fecerat. the-countries as-great-as another of-predecessors his-own not had-done Tremebant ergo in diebus ejus quicumque perverse agebant, trembled therefore in the-days his whoever perversely acted cum sine misericordia plecterentur. Denique pacificatis since without mercy they-were-struck finally pacified Aquilonaribus provinciis, ivit Londoniam: jussitque ibidem the-northern provinces he-went to-London and-ordered there Octam atque Eosam in carcere servari. Festo etiam paschali Octa and Eosa in prison to-be-kept the-feast also of-Easter superveniente; præcepit proceribus regni in eandem coming-on he-ordered the-nobles of-the-kingdom into the-same urbem convenire, ut sumpto diademate tantum diem cum city to-come-together so-that taken the-diadem so-great a-day with honore celebraret. Paruerunt ergo cuncti, et diversi ex honor he-might-celebrate obeyed therefore all and various from diversis civitatibus venientes, instante festivitate convenerunt. various cities coming pressing the-festival came-together Celebravit itaque solennitatem rex ut proposuerat: et gaudio celebrated and-so the-solemnity the-king as he-had-proposed and to-joy cum proceribus suis indulsit. Lætitiā agebant cuncti: quia with nobles his-own gave-himself gladness made all because ipsos læto animo rex receperat. Advenerant namque them with-glad mind the-king had-received had-come for tot nobiles cum conjugibus et filiabus suis, læto so-many nobles with wives and daughters their-own of-the-glad convivio digni. Aderat inter ceteros Gorlois dux Cornubiæ, banquet worthy was-present among the-others Gorlois duke of-Cornwall cum Igerna conjugē suā, cuius pulcritudo mulieres omnes with Igerna wife his-own whose beauty the-women all totius Britannię superabat. Cumque inter alias inspexisset of-the-whole of-Britain surpassed and-when among others had-seen eam rex, subito amore illius incaluit: ita ut postpositis her the-king suddenly with-love of-her grew-hot so that set-aside ceteris, totam intentionem suam circa eam verteret. Hęc sola the-others the-whole intent his-own towards her he-turned she alone erat cui fercula incessanter dirigebat: cui aurea pocula was to-whom dishes unceasingly he-directed to-whom golden cups familiaribus internunciis mittebat: arridebat ei multotiens, by-intimate go-betweenes he-sent he-smiled at-her many-times jocosa verba interserebat. Quod cum comperisset maritus jesting words he-inserted which when had-discovered husband ejus, confestim iratus est, et ex curia sine licentia her forthwith angry was and from the-court without leave recessit. Non affuit qui eum revocare quivisset, cum withdrew not was-there-present who him to-recall could since id solum amittere timeret, quod super omnia diligebat. that alone to-lose he-feared which above all-things he-loved Iratus itaque Uther, præcepit ei redire in curiam suam, angry and-so Uther ordered him to-return to court his-own ut de illata injuria rectitudinem ab eo sumeret: so-that for the-inflicted wrong satisfaction from him he-might-take cui cum parere diffugisset Gorlois, admodum iratus est to-whom when to-obey had-shunned Gorlois greatly angry was rex, juravitque jurejurando, se vastaturum regionem the-king and-swore by-oath himself about-to-lay-waste the-region ipsius, nisi ad satisfactionem festinaret. Nec mora, prædicta his unless to satisfaction he-hurried nor delay the-aforesaid ira inter eos manente, collegit exercitum magnum rex, anger between them remaining he-gathered an-army great the-king petivitque provinciam Cornubiæ, atque ignem in urbes and-sought the-province of-Cornwall and fire upon the-cities et oppida accumulavit. At Gorlois non ausus est congregi and towns heaped but Gorlois not dared has to-engage cum eo, quia ejus minor erat armatorum copia. Unde with him because his smaller was of-armed-men the-host whence prælegit munire oppida sua, donec auxilium suum ab he-preferred to-fortify towns his-own until help his-own from Hibernia impetrasset: et cum magis pro uxore sua quam Ireland he-had-obtained and since more for wife his-own than pro se ipso anxietur: posuit eam in oppido Tintagol for him himself he-was-troubled he-placed her in the-town Tintagel in littore maris, quod pro tutiori refugio habebat. Ipse on the-shore of-the-sea which for a-safer refuge he-held he-himself vero ingressus est castellum Dimilioc, ne si infortunium but entered has the-castle Dimilioc lest if misfortune supervenisset, ambo simul periclitarentur. Cumque id regi had-come-upon both together might-be-imperiled and-when this to-the-king nunciatum fuisset, ivit ad oppidum in quo erat Gorlois, et announced had-been he-went to the-town in which was Gorlois and illud obsedit, omnemque aditum ipsius præcluserit. Emensa it besieged and-every approach its closed having-passed tandem hebdomada, reminiscens amoris Igernæ, dixit cuidam at-last a-week remembering the-love of-Igernæ he-said to-a-certain familiari suo, nomine Ulfin de Ricaradoch: 'Uror amore intimate his-own by-name Ulfin of Ricaradoch I-burn with-love Igernæ, nec gaudium habere, nec periculum corporis mei of-Igernæ nor joy to-have nor the-danger of-body my evadere me existimo, nisi ea potitus fuero. Tu ergo to-escape me I-think unless of-her gained I-shall-have you therefore adhibe consilium quo voluntatem meam expleam, aut aliter apply counsel by-which will my I-may-fulfill or otherwise internis anxietatibus interibo.' Ad hæc Ulfin: 'Et quis with-inward anxieties I-shall-perish at these-things Ulfin and who tibi consiliari valuerit: cum nulla vis accedere queat, qua to-you to-counsel may-be-able since no force to-approach can by-which eam intra oppidum Tintagol adeamus? Etenim situm est her within the-town Tintagel we-may-approach for situated it-is in mari, et undique circumclusum ab ipso, nec est alter in the-sea and on-all-sides enclosed by it nor is-there another introitus, nisi quem angusta rupes præbeat: ipsum tres armati entry except what a-narrow cliff offers it three armed milites prohibere queunt, licet cum toto regno Britannix knights to-forbid can though with the-whole kingdom of-Britain astiteris. Attamen si Merlinus vates operam insisteret you-may-have-stood yet if Merlin the-prophet effort should-press dare: arbitror te posse consilio ipsius desiderio tuo to-give I-think you to-be-able by-the-counsel his of-desire your potiri.' Credulus itaque rex, Merlinum vocari jussit: to-gain-possession credulous and-so the-king Merlin to-be-called ordered nam et ipse ad obsidionem venerat. Vocatus confestim for also he-himself to the-siege had-come called forthwith Merlinus, cum in præsentia regis astitisset, jussus est Merlin when in the-presence of-the-king he-had-stood ordered was consilium dare, quo rex desiderium in Igera expleret. counsel to-give by-which the-king desire in Igera might-fulfill Qui comperta anxietate quam rex patiebatur, pro ea who discovered the-anxiety which the-king suffered for her commotus est super tanto amore ipsius, et ait: 'Ut voto tuo moved was over so-great love his and says that of-wish your potiaris, utendum est tibi novis artibus et tempore you-may-gain-possession to-be-used is by-you new arts and in-time tuo inauditis. Scio medicaminibus meis dare figuram Gorlois, your unheard-of I-know with-medicines my to-give the-shape of-Gorlois ita ut per omnia ipse videaris. Si itaque parueris, so that in all-things him you-may-seem if and-so you-will-have-obeyed faciam te prorsus simulare eum: Ulfinum vero Jordanum I-shall-make you utterly to-resemble him Ulfin but Jordan de Tintagol familiarem ejus. Alia autem specie sumpta, of Tintagel intimate his another moreover form taken adero tertius, poterisque tuto oppidum adire ad I-shall-be-present third and-you-will-be-able safely the-town to-approach to Igernam, ac aditum habere. Paruit itaque rex, diligentemque Igera and access to-have obeyed and-so the-king and-a-diligent animum adhibuit. Postremo commissa familiaribus suis mind applied finally committed to-intimates his-own obsidione, se Merlini medicationibus commisit, et in the-siege himself of-Merlin to-the-medications be-committed and into speciem Gorlois transmutatus est. Mutatus est et Ulfin the-form of-Gorlois transformed he-was changed was also Ulfin in Jordanum, Merlinus in Bricelem: ita ut nemini quod into Jordan Merlin into Bricel so that to-no-one what fuerant comparerent: deinde aggressi sunt viam versus they-had-been they-appeared then undertaken they-have the-way towards Tintagol, et cum crepusculo ad oppidum venerunt. Indicato Tintagel and with twilight to the-town they-came shown ocyus janitori quod consul adveniret, apertæ sunt januæ, more-swiftly to-the-doorkeeper that the-consul was-coming opened were the-gates et intromissi sunt viri. Quid enim aliud accidisset, cum and let-in were the-men what for else would-have-happened since ipse Gorlois reputaretur adesse? Commansit itaque rex he-himself Gorlois was-reckoned to-be-present stayed and-so the-king ea nocte cum Igerna, et sese desiderata Venere refecit. that night with Igerna and himself with-desired love refreshed Deceperat namque illam falsa specie quam assumpserat: he-had-deceived for her by-the-false form which he-had-assumed deceperat etiam fictitiis sermonibus, quos ornate componebat. he-had-deceived also by-feigned speeches which ornately he-composed Dicebat enim se egressum esse ab obsesso oppido, ut he-said for himself gone-out to-be from the-besieged town so-that sibi tam dilectæ rei atque oppido disposeret: unde for-himself so beloved for-a-thing and for-the-town he-might-arrange whence ipsa credula nihil quod poscebatur abnegavit. Concepit itaque she credulous nothing which was-demanded denied she-conceived and-so eadem nocte celeberrimum illum Arturum, qui postmodum on-the-same night most-renowned that Arthur who afterward ut celebris esset, mira probitate promeruit. that famous he-might-be with-wonderful prowess deserved

Gorloi occiso, Uther Igernam matrimonio ducit

XX · GORLOIS IS KILLED, AND UTHER MARRIES IGERNA

In the king's absence his army attacks Dimilioc, and Gorlois is killed in a sortie. Messengers bring the news to Igera and are amazed to find their lord sitting beside her; but Uther, in Gorlois' shape, says he lives and leaves to make peace with the king. He takes Tintagel and marries Igera, and they have a son, Arthur, and a daughter, Anna.

Interea cum compertum esset per obsidionem, regem meanwhile when discovered it-had-been through the-siege the-king non adesse: exercitus ejus inconsulte agens, muros diruere not to-be-present army his unadvisedly acting the-walls to-pull-down conatur: et obsessum comitem ad prælium provocare. Qui tries and the-besieged count to battle to-challenge who etiam inconsulte faciens, egressus est cum commilitonibus also unadvisedly acting gone-out has with comrades suis, arbitrans parva manu tot armatis se posse his-own thinking with-a-small band so-many armed-men himself to-be-able resistere: pugnantes ergo hinc et inde inter primos to-resist fighting therefore on-this-side and on-that among the-first interfectus est Gorlois, et socii ejus dissipati. Captum est killed was Gorlois and the-comrades his scattered taken was quoque oppidum quod obsederant, et opes intus repertæ also the-town which they-had-besieged and the-wealth within found non æqua sorte divisæ: nam ut cuique administrabat fortuna not by-equal lot divided for as to-each-one supplied fortune et fortitudo, rapaci ungue rapiebat. Peracta tandem hujus and strength with-greedy claw he-snatched completed at-last of-this facti audacia: venerunt nuncii ad Igernam, qui et necem deed the-boldness came messengers to Igera who both the-death ducis, et obsidionis eventum indicarent. Sed cum regem in of-the-duke and of-the-siege the-outcome might-show but when the-king in specie consulis juxta eam residere inspexissent, erubescences the-form of-the-consul beside her sitting they-had-seen blushing admirabantur ipsum, quem in obsidione interfectum they-wondered him whom in the-siege killed deseruerant, ita incolumem pervenisse. Nesciebant enim quæ they-had-left so unharmed to-have-arrived they-did-not-know for what medicamenta Merlinus confecerat. Ad tales ergo rumores medicines Merlin had-made at such therefore rumors arridebat rex, atque cum his verbis Comitissam amplexabatur: smiled the-king and with these words the-Countess embraced ‘Non equidem interfectus sum: sed ut vides, vivo: doleo not indeed killed I-am but as you-see I-live I-grieve tamen oppidi mei destructionem, sociorumque meorum yet of-the-town my the-destruction and-of-comrades my cædem: unde nobis timendum est, ne superveniat rex: et the-slaughter whence for-us to-be-feared it-is lest may-come-upon the-king and nos in oppido isto intercipiat. Ibo ergo prius ei obviam, us in town this may-intercept I-shall-go therefore first to-him to-meet et me cum ipso pacificabo, ne nobis deterius contingat. and myself with him I-shall-reconcile lest to-us worse may-happen Egressus itaque petivit exercitum suum, et exuta specie having-gone-out and-so he-sought army his-own and stripped the-form Gorlois in Utherpendragon rediit. Cumque omnem eventum of-Gorlois into Uther-Pendragon returned and-when the-whole outcome didicisset, ob cædem Gorlois doluit: sed ob he-had-learned on-account-of the-slaughter of-Gorlois he-grieved but on-account-of Igernam a maritali copula solutam gavisus est. Reversus Igerna from the-marital bond loosed rejoiced he-has having-retuned itaque ad oppidum Tintagol, cepit illud. Cepitque Igernam and-so to the-town Tintagel he-took it and-took Igerna et voto suo potitus est. Commanserunt deinde pariter and of-wish his-own gained he-has stayed then together non minimo amore ligati: progenueruntque filium et filiam. not with-least love bound and-begot a-son and a-daughter Fuit autem filii nomen Arturus, filiæ vero, Anna. was moreover of-the-son the-name Artbur of-the-daughter indeed Anna

Octa et Eosa bellum renovant

XXI · OCTA AND EOSA RENEW THE WAR

While Uther lies sick, Octa and Eosa escape from prison to Germany and return with a great fleet, ravaging Albany. The king gives the army to Lot of Lothian, to whom he has married his daughter Anna. The war hangs in doubt, because the proud Britons refuse to obey the consul.

Cumque dies et tempora præterissent, occupavit infirmitas and-when days and times had-passed seized sickness regem: eumque multis diebus vexavit. Interim vero custodes the-king and-him for-many days troubled meanwhile indeed the-guards carceris, in quo Octa atque Eosa (quos supra memoravi) of-the-prison in which Octa and Eosa whom above I-mentioned tædiosam vitam ducebant, diffugerant cum eis in Germaniam, a-tedious life led had-fled with them into Germany terroremque per regnum intulerant. Asserebat namque rumor, and-terror through the-kingdom had-brought asserted for rumor ipsos jam commovisse Germaniam, classemque maximam them already to-have-stirred Germany and-a-fleet greatest paravisse in exitium insulæ redituros: quod et factum est. to-have-prepared for the-ruin of-the-island about-to-return which also done was Redierunt enim cum maxima classe sociisque innumerabilibus, they-retuned for with a-very-great fleet and-comrades innumerable et partes Albanīæ ingressi, civitates atque cives igne ac and the-parts of-Albany having-entered the-cities and the-citizens with-fire and cæde affecerunt. Committitur itaque exercitus Britannīæ Lot slaughter afflicted is-committed and-so the-army of-Britain to-Lot de Londonesia, ut hostes longius arceret. Erat autem of Lotbian so-that the-enemies farther he-might-keep-off was moreover consul ille Leir, eques strenuissimus, sapientia et ætate consul that Leir a-knight most-vigorous in-wisdom and in-age maturus. Probitate ergo ipsius acclamante, dederat ei rex ripe prowess therefore his acclaiming had-given to-him the-king Annam filiam suam, regnique sui curam, dum infirmitati Anna daughter his-own and-of-kingdom his-own the-care while to-sickness subjaceret. Hic cum in hostes progressus esset, multoties he-lay-subject this-one when against the-enemies advanced had many-times repulsus est ab eis, ita ut sese intra civitates reciperet: repulsed was by them so that himself within the-cities he-withdrew sæpius autem fugabat atque dissipabat illos, et nunc ad more-often moreover he-put-to-flight and scattered them and now to nemora nunc ad naves diffugere cogebat. Fuit inter eos the-forests now to the-ships to-flee he-forced there-was between them dubia præliorum decertatio, ita ut nesciretur utri a-doubtful of-battles contest so that it-was-not-known to-which-of-two victoria proveniret. Superbia enim civibus nocebat: quia victory would-come pride for the-citizens harmed because dedignabantur præceptis consulis obedire. Unde debiliores they-disdained to-the-orders of-the-consul to-obey whence weaker exeuntes nequibant imminentes hostes superare. going-out they-could-not the-threatening enemies to-overcome

Uther, morbo conflictatus, feretro contra hostes vehitur

XXII · Uther CARRIED TO BATTLE IN A LITTER

Hearing that the island is almost laid waste, Uther rebukes his nobles for their pride and weakness. He swears to lead them against the enemy himself. Since he cannot walk, he has a litter made to carry him.

Vastata ita fere tota insula, cum id regi nunciaretur:

laid-waste so almost the-whole island when this to-the-king was-announced ultra quam infirmitas expetebat iratus est: jussitque beyond what the-sickness demanded angry he-was and-ordered cunctos proceres convenire, ut ipsos de superbia et all the-nobles to-come-together so-that them for pride and debilitate sua corriperet. Et cum omnes in præsentia weakness their-own he-might-rebuke and when all in the-presence sua conspexisset: convicia cum castigantibus verbis intulit, his-own he-bad-seen insults with chastising words he-brought juravitque quod ipsemet eos in hostes conduceret.

and-swore that he-himself them against the-enemies would-lead Præcepit itaque fieri sibi feretrum quo asportaretur, he-ordered and-so to-be-made for-himself a-litter in-which he-might-be-carried cum ingressum alterius modi abnegaret infirmitas. Præcepit since going of-another manner denied the-sickness he-ordered etiam cunctos paratos esse, ut cum opportunitas accideret, also all ready to-be so-that when opportunity befell in inimicos progredierentur. Nec mora, paratum est against the-enemies they-should-advance nor delay prepared was feretrum: parati sunt omnes, diesque opportunus instabat.

the-litter prepared were all and-the-day fitting pressed

Octa et Eosa, cum multis suorum, occiduntur

XXIII · OCTA AND EOSA KILLED

The Saxons at Verulam scorn to fight a half-dead king in a litter and leave the gates open, but the Britons nearly storm the walls. The next day the Saxons come out to battle, and Octa and Eosa are killed. Uther sits up in his litter laughing and declares it better to conquer half-dead than to be conquered in health, and better to die with honor than live in shame.

Imposito itaque rege, Verolamium perrexerunt, ubi prædicti put-in and-so the-king to-Verulam they-proceeded where the-aforsaid Saxones universum populum affligebant. Cumque edocti essent Saxons the-whole people afflicted and-when taught had-been Octa et Eosa adventum Britonum, regemque in feretro Octa and Eosa the-arrival of-the-Britons and-the-king in a-litter advectum, dedignati sunt cum eo præliari, quia in vehiculo carried disdained they-have with him to-fight because in a-vehicle advenerat. Aiebant enim ipsum semimortuum esse, nec tantos he-had-come they-said for him half-dead to-be nor so-great viros cum huiusmodi homine pugnare decere. Receperunt men with such a-man to-fight to-befit they-withdrew itaque sese intra urbem: et valvas, quasi nihil timentes, and-so themselves within the-city and the-gates as-if nothing fearing deseruerunt apertas. At Uther, cum id sibi relatum fuisset: they-left open but Uther when this to-him reported had-been iussit ocyus obsidere civitatem, ac mœnia undique invadere. ordered more-swiftly to-besiege the-city and the-walls on-all-sides to-attack Paruerunt itaque cives, et urbem obsederunt, mœniaque obeyed and-so the-citizens and the-city besieged and-the-walls invaserunt. Stragem autem Saxonibus dantes, fere dirutis muris attacked slaughter moreover to-the-Saxons giving almost ruined walls ingressi sunt: nisi Saxones ad ultimum resistere incœpissent.

entered they-had unless the-Saxons at the-last to-resist had-begun Prævalentibus namque civibus, piguerat eos incœptæ superbiæ:

prevailing for the-citizens it-irked them of-the-begun pride unde se defendere instituerunt. Scandantes itaque muros whence themselves to-defend they-set-about climbing and-so the-walls omnimodis telis Britones repellebant. Denique cum utrinque with-every-sort-of weapons the-Britons they-repelled finally when on-both-sides decertarent: supervenit nox, quæ singulos ab armis they-contended came-up the-night which each-one from arms ad quietem invitavit. Quietem desiderabant multi: plures to rest invited rest desired many more vero consilium quo adversarios suos perderent. At indeed counsel by-which adversaries their-own they-might-destroy but Saxones cum inspexissent superbiam suam sibi nocuisse, the-Saxons when they-had-seen pride their-own to-them to-have-harmed Britones vero triumphasse: proposuerunt cum diluculo egredi, the-Britons indeed to-have-triumped proposed with dawn to-go-out inimicosque suos ad campestre prælium provocare, quod and-the-enemies their-own to an-open-field battle to-challenge which factum est. Nam ut diem protulit Titan, dispositis catervis done was for when the-day brought-forth Titan arranged the-bands egressi sunt, ut propositum exequerentur suum. Quod gone-out they-have so-that the-purpose they-might-carry-out their-own which videntes Britones, diviserunt milites suos per turmas, atque seeing the-Britons divided knights their-own through troops and obviam venientes prius invadere cœperunt. Resistunt ilico to-meet coming first to-attack began resist on-the-spot Saxones, invadunt Britones, et mutuam cædem utroque the-Saxons attack the-Britons and mutual slaughter on-both-sides conficiunt. Postremo cum multum diei præterisset: cessit they-make finally when much of-the-day had-passed fell victoria regi Britonum, interfectisque Octa et Eosa, the-victory to-the-king of-the-Britons and-killed Octa and Eosa terga dederunt Saxones. Tanta inde lætitia cepit regem, ita their-backs gave the-Saxons so-great thence joy seized the-king so ut cum prius sine iuvamine alterius sese erigere nequiret, that though before without help of-another himself to-raise he-could-not levi conamine erectus, resedit in feretro, ac si subitam with-slight effort raised he-sat-up in the-litter as if sudden sanitatem recepisset. Solutus etiam in risum, hilari voce health he-had-received loosened also into laughtr with-cheerful voice in hunc sermonem prorupit: "Vocabunt me Ambrones isti, into this speech burst will-call me Ambrones these regem semimortuum, quia infirmitate gravatus in feretro the-king half-dead because by-sickness weighed-down in a-litter jacebam. Sic equidem eram. Malo tamen semimortuus ipsos I-lay so indeed I-was I-prefer yet half-dead them superare, quam sanus et incolumis superari, sequenti to-overcome than healthy and unharmed to-be-overcome with-the-following vita perfuncturus. Præstantius enim est mori cum honore, life about-to-be-done-with more-excellent for it-is to-die with honor quam cum pudore vivere." than with shame to-live

Uther haustu aquæ venenato diem obit

XXIV · Uther dies from a poisoned spring

The Saxons ravage the north and, unable to reach the king by force, plot to poison him. Their spies learn that Uther drinks only from a spring near his hall at Verulam and poison it, and he dies, with a hundred others. He is buried within the Giants' Dance beside Aurelius Ambrosius.

Devicti autem Saxones, non idcirco a malitia sua defeated moreover the-Saxons not therefore from malice their-own destiterunt: sed Aquilonares provincias ingressi, populos desisted but the-northern provinces having-entered the-peoples incessanter infestabant. Quos Uther rex (ut proposuerat) unceasingly they-harassed whom Uther the-king as he-had-proposed affectabat insequi: sed dissuaserunt principes, quia eum desired to-pursue but dissuaded the-princes because him gravior infirmitas post victoriam occupaverat. Unde audaciores a-graver sickness after the-victory had-seized whence bolder insistentes hostes, omnibus modis regnum subdere nituntur. pressing-on the-enemies by-all means the-kingdom to-subject strive Proditioni etiam solitæ indulgentes, machinantur qualiter to-treachery also accustomed giving-themselves they-contrive how regem dolo interficiant. Et cum alter aditus defecisset, the-king by-guile they-may-kill and when another approach had-failed statuerunt eum veneno perdere: quod factum est. Nam cum they-decided him with-poison to-destroy which done was for when in urbe Verolamio jaceret, direxerunt in paupere cultu legatos, in the-city Verulam he-lay they-directed in poor garb envoys qui statum curiæ addicerent: qui cum totum didicissent, who the-state of-the-court should-learn who when the-whole they-had-learned inter cætera compererunt unum, quod proditioni ipsius among other-things they-found one-thing which for-treachery his prælegerunt. Erat namque prope aulam fons nitidissimæ they-chose there-was for near the-hall a-spring of-most-clear aquæ, quam rex solitus fuerat potare, cum ceteros liquores water which the-king accustomed had-been to-drink since the-other liquors propter infirmitatem abhorreret. Fontem namque aggressi sunt on-account-of sickness he-shrank-from the-spring for attacked have nefandi proditores, ipsumque undique veneno infecerunt, the-abominable traitors and-it on-all-sides with-poison infected ita ut manans aqua tota corrumperetur. Ut ergo potavit ex so that the-flowing water whole was-corrupted when therefore drank from ea rex, festinæ morti succubuit. Succubuerunt etiam centum it the-king to-a-swift death he-succumbed succumbed also a-hundred homines post illum, donec comperta fraude, cumulum terræ men after him until discovered the-fraud a-heap of-earth superposuerunt. Cum autem obitus regis divulgatus fuisset, they-placed-over-it when moreover the-death of-the-king spread-abroad had-been advenerunt pontifices cum clero regni: tuleruntque came the-pontiffs with the-clergy of-the-kingdom and-carried corpus ejus ad Cœnobium Ambrii: et intra choream gigantum the-body his to the-Monastery of-Ambrius and within the-dance of-the-giants juxta Aurelium Ambrosium more regio humaverunt. beside Aurelius Ambrosius in-manner royal interred

BOOK IX

Arturus filius succedit, et Colgrinum circumscedit

I · ARTHUR BESIEGES COLGRIN

With the Saxons under Colgrin holding everything from the Humber to Caithness, the nobles have Dubricius crown Arthur, a youth of fifteen loved for his valor and generosity. Arthur defeats Colgrin by the Douglas and besieges him in York. Colgrin's brother Baldulph, routed by Cador, poses as a harper and is hauled over the walls; when Cheldric reaches Albany with six hundred ships, Arthur's counselors urge him to lift the siege.

Defuncto igitur Utherpendragon, convenerunt ex diversis having-died therefore Uther-Pendragon came-together from various provinciis proceres Britonum in civitatem Cilcestrîæ: Dubricio provinces the-nobles of-the-Britons into the-city of-Silchester to-Dubricius urbis Legionum Archiepiscopo suggerentes, ut Arturum of-the-City of-the-Legions Archbishop suggesting that Arthur filium regis in regem consecraret. Angebat enim eos son of-the-king into king he-should-consecrate pressed for them necessitas: audito namque prædicti regis obitu, Saxones necessity heard for of-the-aforsaid king the-death the-Saxons concives suos ex Germania invitaverant: et duce fellow-countrymen their-own from Germany had-invited and as-leader Colgrino ipsos exterminare nitebantur. Subjugaverant etiam Colgrin them to-exterminate strove they-had-subjugated also sibi totam partem insulæ, quæ a flumine Humbri, to-themselves all the-part of-the-island which from the-river Humber usque ad mare Catanesium extenditur Dubricius ergo all-the-way to the-sea of-Caithness stretches Dubricius therefore calamitatem patriæ dolens, associatis sibi Episcopis the-calamity of-the-country grieving joined to-himself the-Bishops Arturum regni diademate insignivit. Erat autem Arthur of-the-kingdom with-the-diadem marked was moreover Arturus quindecim annorum juvenis, inauditæ virtutis atque Arthur of-fifteen years a-youth of-unheard-of valor and liberalitatis: in quo tantam gratiam innata bonitas præstiterat, liberality in whom so-great grace inborn goodness had-offered ut a cunctis fere populis amaretur. Insignibus ergo that by all almost peoples he-was-loved with-the-insignia therefore regiis initiatus, solitum morem servans, largitati indulisit. royal installed the-accustomed custom keeping to-largess he-gave-himself Confluebat ad eum tanta multitudo militum, ut eis quod flowed-together to him so-great a-multitude of-knights that for-them what dispensaret, deficeret. Sed cui naturalis inest largitio cum he-might-dispense was-lacking but in-whom natural is-present largess with probitate licet ad tempus indigeat, nullatenus tamen prowess although for a-time he-may-be-in-need by-no-means yet continua paupertas ei nocebit. Arturus ergo quia in illo continual poverty to-him will-harm Arthur therefore because in him probitas largitionem comitabatur: statuit Saxones inquietare, prowess largess accompanied decided the-Saxons to-harass ut eorum opibus quæ ei famulabatur ditaret so-that their with-wealth which to-him served he-might-enrich familiam. Commonebat etiam illud rectitudo, cum totius the-household urged also it rightness since of-the-whole insulæ monarchiam debuerat hereditario jure obtinere. Collecta island the-monarchy he-ought by-hereditary right to-hold gathered deinde sibi subdita juventute, Eboracum petivit. Cumque then to-him subject the-youth York he-sought and-when id Colgrino compertum esset, collegit Saxones, Scotos et this to-Colgrin discovered had-been he-gathered Saxons Scots and Pictos, venitque ei obviu cum multitudine maxima, juxta Picts and-came to-him meeting with a-multitude greatest beside flumen Douglas: ubi facto congressu, utriusque exercitus the-river Douglas where made an-engagement of-each army in majori parte periclitatus est. Victoria tamen potius in the-greater part imperiled was of-the-victory yet having-gained Arturus, Colgrinum fugientem insecutus est: ingressumque Arthur Colgrin fleeing pursued has and-him-having-entered intra Eboracum obsedit. Audita itaque fratris sui fuga within York he-besieged heard and-so of-brother his-own the-flight Baldulphus, cum sex milibus virorum obsidionem petivit, ut Baldulph with six thousand of-men the-siege sought so-that ipsum inclusum liberaret. Erat autem tunc ipse, quando him shut-in he-might-free was moreover then he-himself when frater pugnaverat, expectans adventum Cheldrici ducis juxta the-brother had-fought awaiting the-arrival of-Cheldric the-duke beside maritima, qui eis ex Germania in auxilium venturus the-coast who to-them from Germany for help about-to-come erat. Cum itaque esset spatio decem miliariorum ab urbe, was when and-so he-was at-a-distance of-ten miles from the-city statuit nocturnum iter arripere, ut furtivam irruptionem he-decided a-nightly march to-take so-that a-stealthy inroad faceret. Quod edoctus Arturus, jussit Cadorem ducem he-might-make which informed Arthur ordered Cador duke Cornubiæ, cum sexcentis equitibus et tribus milibus peditum of-Cornwall with six-hundred horsemen and three thousand footmen eadem nocte illi obviare. Qui viam qua hostes præteribant on-the-same night him to-meet who the-way by-which the-enemies were-passing nactus, inopinum impetum fecit: dilaceratisque atque interfectis having-got an-unexpected attack made and-torn and killed Saxonibus fugam facere coegit. Qui ultra modum anxius, the-Saxons flight to-make forced who beyond measure anxious quod fratri suo auxilium subvectare nequiret: deliberavit that to-brother his-own help to-bring he-could-not deliberated apud se qualiter colloquio ipsius frueretur. Existimabat with himself how of-the-conversation his he-might-enjoy he-thought enim aditum salutis utrorumque consilio machinari posse: for an-approach of-safety of-both by-counsel to-contrive to-be-able si illius præsentiā adire quivisset. Cum ergo alterius if his presence to-approach he-had-been-able since therefore of-another modi aditum non haberet: rasis capillos suos et barbā, manner approach not he-had he-shaved hair his-own and beard cultumque joculatoris cum cythara cepit. Deinde intra and-the-garb of-a-jester with a-harp took then within castra deambulans, modulis quos in lyra componebat, the-camp walking-about with-melodies which on the-lyre he-composed sese cytharistam exhibebat. Cumque nulli suspectus esset, himself a-harper he-showed and-when to-no-one suspect he-was accessit ad mœnia urbis paulatim ceptam simulationem he-approached to the-walls of-the-city little-by-little the-begun pretense faciens. Postremo cum ab inclusis compertus esset, tractus making finally when by the-shut-in discovered he-had-been drawn est funiculis intra muros, et ad fratrem conductus. Ex tunc he-was with-ropes within the-walls and to the-brother led from then viso germano, osculis et amplexibus desideratis sese refecit. seen the-brother with-kisses and embraces desired himself he-refreshed Denique cum post multimodas deliberationes, in desperationem finally when after manifold deliberations into despair egrediendi incidissent, remeabant jam legati ex Germania, of-going-out they-had-fallen were-returning already the-envoys from Germany qui duce Cheldrico sexcentas naves milite forti oneratas who as-leader Cheldric six-hundred ships with-knights strong loaded in Albaniam conduxerant. Quo audito, dissuaserunt consiliarii into Albany had-brought which heard dissuaded counselors sui Arturo obsidionem diutius tenere, ne si tanta multitudo his-own to-Arthur the-siege longer to-hold lest if so-great a-multitude hostium supervenisset, dubium certamen committerent. of-enemies had-come-up a-doubtful contest they-should-join

Hoelus quindecim millia militum, in auxilium Arturo, mittit

II · HOEL COMES TO HELP ARTHUR

Arthur withdraws to London and takes counsel with the clergy and nobles. Messengers go to Hoel, king of the Armorican Britons and son of Arthur's sister. Hoel lands at Hamo's port with fifteen thousand men and is received with embraces.

Paruit igitur Arturus domesticorum suorum consilio, et sese obeyed therefore Arthur of-household his-own the-counsel and himself intra urbem Londoniarum recepit. Ubi convocato clero et within the-city of-London withdrew where called-together the-clergy and totius potestatis suæ primatibus, consilium quærit, quid of-the-whole power his-own the-primates counsel he-seeks what optimum, quidve saluberrimum contra Paganorum irruptionem best or-what most-wholesome against of-the-Pagans the-inroad faceret. Communi tandem assensu illato, mittuntur in he-should-do common at-last assent brought are-sent into Armoricam nuncii ad regem Hoelum, qui ei calamitatem Armorica messengers to the-king Hoel who to-him the-calamity Britanniae notificarent. Erat autem Hoelus filius sororis of-Britain should-make-known was moreover Hoel son of-the-sister Arturi ex Dubricio rege Armoricanorum Britonum generatus. of-Arthur by Dubricius king of-the-Armorican Britons begotten Unde audita inquietatione quæ avunculo ingerebatur, jussit whence heard the-harassment which on-the-uncle was-beaped he-ordered navigium suum parari, collectisque quindecim millibus fleet his-own to-be-prepared and-gathered fifteen thousand armatorum, proximo ventorum flatu ad portum Hamonis of-armed-men with-the-next of-the-winds breath at the-port of-Hamo applicuit. Excepit eum Arturus quo honore decebat, landed received him Arthur with-what honor befitted mutuos amplexus sæpissime innectens. mutual embraces most-often weaving

Arturus Saxones subjectat et sibi tributarios facit

III · ARTHUR SUBDUES THE SAXONS

Arthur and Hoel relieve Lincoln, killing six thousand Saxons, and pursue the rest into the forest of Caledon, where Arthur fences them in with felled trees until hunger forces them to surrender. They leave their gold, give hostages, and promise tribute, but at sea they turn back, land at Totnes, ravage the land, and besiege Bath. Arthur hangs the hostages and, leaving Hoel sick at Alclud, marches to Bath, swearing to keep faith with God as the Saxons broke faith with him.

Emensis postmodum paucis diebus, urbem Kaerliudcoit having-passed afterward a-few days the-city Kaerliudcoit petunt a Paganis, quos supra memoravi, obsessam: hæc they-seek by the-Pagans whom above I-mentioned besieged this autem in Lindiseinensi provincia inter duo flumina super moreover in the-Lindsey province between two rivers upon montem locata, alio nomine Lindocolinum nuncupatur. a-mountain placed by-another name Lincoln is-called Ut igitur cum omni multitudine sua convenerunt, when therefore with all multitude their-own they-came-together præliati sunt cum Saxonibus, inauditam cædem inferentes. fought they-have with the-Saxons unheard-of slaughter inflicting Ceciderunt namque ex eis ea die sex milia, qui partim fell for of them on-that day six thousand who partly fluminibus submersi, partim telis percussi vitam amiserunt. in-the-rivers drowned partly by-weapons struck life lost Unde ceteri stupefacti, relicta obsidione fugerunt: quos whence the-others stunned left the-siege fled whom Arturus insequi non cessavit, donec in nemus Caledonis Arthur to-pursue not ceased until into the-forest of-Caledon venerunt. Ibi undique ex fuga confluentes, conati sunt they-came there from-everywhere from flight flowing-together tried they-have Arturo resistere. Conserto itaque prælio, stragem Britonibus Arthur to-resist joined and-so the-battle slaughter on-the-Britons faciunt, sese viriliter defendentes. Ibi etenim arborum they-make themselves manfully defending there for of-the-trees auxilio, tela Britonum vitabant. Quod Arturus intuens, with-the-help the-weapons of-the-Britons they-avoided which Arthur seeing iussit arbores circa illam partem nemoris incidi, et truncos ordered the-trees around that part of-the-forest to-be-cut and the-trunks ita in circuitu locari, ut egressus eis abnegaretur. so in a-circuit to-be-placed that exit to-them might-be-denied Volebat namque illos inclusos tam diu obsidere, donec he-wished for them shut-in so long to-besiege until fame interirent. Quo facto, iussit turmas ambire nemus, by-hunger they-perished which done he-ordered the-troops to-surround the-forest mansitque tribus diebus ibidem. Cum igitur Saxones quo and-be-stayed for-three days there when therefore the-Saxons wherewith vescerentur indigerent, ne subita fame perirent, petierunt eo they-might-feed lacked lest by-sudden hunger they-perish they-sought on-this pacto egressum, ut relicto omni auro et argento, cum solis condition an-exit that left all gold and silver with only navibus in Germaniam redire sinerentur. Promiserunt ships into Germany to-return they-might-be-allowed they-promised quoque se daturus ei tributum ex Germania, also themselves about-to-give to-him tribute from Germany obsidesque inde mansuros. Tunc Arturus quæsito consilio, and-hostages thence about-to-remain then Arthur sought counsel eorum petitioni acquievit. Retinuit namque ipsorum opes, their to-petition assented he-kept for their wealth reddendique vectigalis obsides, solumque abscessum largitus and-to-be-rendered of-the-tax hostages and-only departure bestowed est. Cumque illi in redeundo domum æquora sulcarent, he-has and-when they in returning home the-seas were-furrowing piguit peractæ pactionis, retortisque velis in Britanniam it-irked-them of-the-completed agreement and-turned-back sails into Britain redierunt, et Totonesium littus adiverunt. Nacti deinde they-returned and the-Totnes shore went-to having-got then patriam tellurem usque ad Sabrinum mare depopulantur, the-native land all-the-way to the-Severn sea they-ravage colonos letiferis vulneribus afficientes. Inde arrepto itinere the-farmers with-deadly wounds afflicting thence taken the-march versus pagum Badonis, urbem obsident. Idque cum regi towards the-district of-Bath the-city they-besiege and-this when to-the-king nunciatum esset, admirans ultra modum ipsorum facinus, announced had-been marveling-at beyond measure their crime jussit fieri iudicium de illorum obsidibus brevi he-ordered to-be-made judgment about their hostages with-short mora suspendendis. Prætermissa etiam inquietatione, qua delay to-be-hanged left-aside also the-harassment with-which Scotos et Pictos opprimere incœperat, obsidionem dispergere the-Scots and Picts to-crush he-had-begun the-siege to-disperse festinavit. Maximis vero angustiis est cruciatus, quoniam he-hurried with-greatest indeed anguish he-was tormented since Hoelum nepotem suum morbo gravatum in civitatem Alclud Hoel nephew his-own by-sickness weighed-down in the-city Alclud deserebat. Postremo Sumersetensem provinciam ingressus, visa he-was-leaving finally the-Somerset province having-entered seen cominus obsidione, in hæc verba locutus est: “Quoniam close-at-hand the-siege in these words spoken he-has since impiissimi atque invisi nominis Saxones fidem mihi dedignati most-impious and of-bated name the-Saxons faith to-me disdained sunt servare: ego fidem Deo meo conservans, sanguinem have to-keep I faith to-God my keeping the-blood concivium meorum in ipsos hodie vindicare conabor. Armate of-fellow-citizens my on them today to-avenge shall-try arm vos viri, armate, et proditores istos viriliter invadite, yourselves O-men arm and traitors these manfully attack quos proculdubio auxiliante Christo triumphabimus.” whom without-doubt helping Christ we-shall-triumph-over Dubricius contra Saxones concionatur: Arturi res gestæ: Colgrini et Baldulphi mors

IV • THE BATTLE OF BATH

From a hilltop Dubricius promises absolution to every Briton who dies for his country. Arthur arms himself with his golden dragon helmet, the shield Priwen painted with the Virgin, the sword Caliburn forged in Avalon, and the lance Ron. The Saxons hold out for a day and take a hill; the next day the Britons fight their way up, and Arthur, calling on Mary, kills 470 men with Caliburn alone; Colgrin and Baldulph fall, and Cheldric flees.

Hæc eo dicente, sanctus Dubricius urbis Legionum these-things him saying holy Dubricius of-the-City of-the-Legions Archiepiscopus, ascenso cujusdam montis cacumine, in Archbishop climbed of-a-certain mountain the-top in hunc modum celsa voce exclamavit: “Viri Christiana this manner with-lofty voice cried-out O-men with-the-Christian professione insigniti, maneat in vobis concivium vestrorum profession marked may-remain in you of-fellow-citizens your pietas et patriæ, qui proditione Paganorum exterminati, the-dutifulness and of-the-country who by-the-treachery of-the-Pagans exterminated vobis sempiternum erunt opprobrium, nisi ipsos defendere to-you an-everlasting will-be reproach unless them to-defend institeritis. Pugnat ergo pro patria vestra, et mortem you-will-have-set-about fight therefore for country your also death si supervenerit pro eadem ultro patimini: ipsa enim if it-will-have-come-upon for the-same willingly suffer it-itself for victoria est, et animæ remedium. Quicunque etenim pro victory is and of-the-soul the-remedy whoever for for confratribus suis interierit, vivam hostiam se præstat brethren his-own will-have-perished a-living sacrifice himself offers Deo, Christumque insequi non ambigitur, qui pro fratribus to-God and-Christ to-follow not is-doubted who for brothers suis animam suam dignatus est ponere. Si aliquis igitur his-own soul his-own deigned has to-lay-down if any-one therefore vestrum in hoc bello mortem subierit. fiet ei mors illa of-you in this war death will-have-undergone will-be to-him death that omnium delictorum suorum pœnitentia et absolutio, dum eam of-all sins his-own the-penance and absolution while it hoc modo recipere non diffugerit.” Nec mora: beati viri in-this manner to-receive not he-will-have-shunned nor delay of-the-blessed man benedictione hilarati festinavit quisque armare se, et præceptis by-the-blessing cheered hurried each-one to-arm himself and to-the-orders ejus parere: ipse vero Arturus lorica tanto rege digna his to-obey he-himself but Arthur in-a-breastplate of-so-great a-king worthy indutus, auream galeam simulacro draconis insculptam capiti clothed a-golden helmet with-the-image of-a-dragon engraved to-head adaptat. Humeris quoque suis clypeum vocabulo Priwen: fits on-shoulders also his-own a-shield by-the-word Priwen in quo imago sanctæ Mariæ Dei genitricis impicta, ipsam on which an-image of-holy Mary of-God the-mother painted her in memoriam ipsius sæpissime revocabat. Accinctus etiam into memory of-him most-often recalled girded also Caliburno gladio optimo, et in insula Avallonis fabricato: with-Caliburn a-sword best and in the-island of-Avalon forged lancea dexteram suam decorat, quæ nomine Ron vocabatur: with-a-lance right-hand his-own adorns which by-name Ron was-called hæc erat ardua lataque lancea, cladibus apta. Deinde dispositis this was a-tall and-broad lance for-slaughters fit then arranged catervis, Saxones in cuneos more suo dispositos, audacter the-bands the-Saxons in wedges in-fashion their-own arranged boldly invasit. Ipsi vero tota die viriliter resistebant, Britones usque he-attacked they but the-whole day manfully resisted the-Britons continually insequentes. Vergente tandem ad occasum sole, proximum pursuing sloping at-last to the-west the-sun the-nearest occupant montem, pro castris eum habituri. Multitudine they-seize mountain for camp it about-to-have with-the-multitude etenim sociorum confisis, solus mons sufficere videbatur. for of-comrades having-trusted alone the-mountain to-suffice seemed At ut posterum sol diem reduxit: ascendit Arturus cum but when the-next the-sun day brought-back climbed Arthur with exercitu suo cacumen: sed in ascendendo suorum multos army his-own the-top but in climbing of-his-own many amisit. Saxones namque ex summitate occurrentes, facilius lost the-Saxons for from the-summit running-against more-easily ingerebant vulnera, dum ipsos citior cursus in descensu ageret, heaped-on wounds while them a-swifter course in descent drove quam eos in ascensu. Britones tamen cacumen maxima vi than them in ascent the-Britons yet the-top with-greatest force adepti, dextris hostium dextras suas confestim having-reached with-the-right-hands of-the-enemies right-hands their-own forthwith conferunt. Quibus Saxones pectora prætendentes, omni nisu they-join to-whom the-Saxons breasts holding-out with-all effort resistere nituntur. Cumque multum diei in hunc modum to-resist strive and-when much of-the-day in this manner præteriisset, indignatus est Arturus, ipsis ita successisse: nec had-passed indignant was Arthur to-them so to-have-succeeded nor sibi victoriam advenire. Abstracto igitur Caliburno gladio, to-himself victory to-come drawn therefore Caliburn the-sword nomen sanctæ Mariæ proclamat, et sese cito impetu the-name of-holy Mary he-proclaims and himself with-swift attack intra densas hostium acies immisit. Quemcunque attingebat, within the-dense of-the-enemies lines thrust whomever he-reached Deum invocando, solo ictu perimebat: nec requievit God by-calling-upon with-a-single blow he-destroyed nor rested impetum suum facere, donec quadringentos et septuaginta attack his-own to-make until four-hundred and seventy viros, solo Caliburno gladio peremit. Quod videntes men with-single Caliburn the-sword he-destroyed which seeing Britones, densatis turmis illum sequuntur, stragem undique the-Britons thickened troops him follow slaughter on-all-sides facientes. Ceciderunt ilico Colgrinus et Baldulphus ejus making fell on-the-spot Colgrin and Baldulph his frater, et multa milia aliorum. At viso sociorum periculo brother and many thousands of-others but seen of-the-comrades the-danger Cheldericus continuo in fugam versus est.

Cheldric at-once into flight turned was Saxones post Cheldrici mortem, Cadori se reddunt

V · THE SAXONS SURRENDER TO CADOR

Arthur hurries north to relieve Hoel, besieged by the Scots and Picts at Alclud, and orders Cador to pursue the Saxons. Cador first seizes their ships to cut off escape, then hunts them through forests and caves to the island of Thanet. There he kills Cheldric and takes the surrender of the rest.

Rex igitur potitus victoria, Cadorem ducem Cornubiæ the-king therefore having-gained of-the-victory Cador duke of-Cornwall jussit illos persequi, dum ipse Albaniam petere festinaret. ordered them to-pursue while he-himself Albany to-seek hurried Denunciatum namque illi fuerat, Scotos atque Pictos announced for to-him it-had-been the-Scots and Picts obsedissee Hoelum in urbe Alclud, in qua ipsum supra to-have-besieged Hoel in the-city Alclud in which him above dixi infirmitate gravatum. Quocirca properabat ei in I-said by-sickness weighed-down wherefore he-bastened to-him to auxilium, ne a Barbaris occuparetur. Dux itaque Cornubiæ help lest by the-barbarians he-should-be-seized the-duke and-so of-Cornwall decem milibus comitatus, fugientes Saxones nondum insequi by-ten thousand accompanied the-fleeing Saxons not-yet to-pursue voluit: immo naves eorum festinanter exigebat, ut ipsis wished nay the-ships their hastily he-sought-out so-that to-them ingressum prohiberet. Mox ut ipsis potitus est, munivit entry he-might-forbid soon when of-them gained he-has he-fortified eas militibus optimis, qui introitum Paganis abnegarent, si them with-knights best who entry to-the-Pagans should-deny if ad eas confugerent. Deinde festinavit hostes sequi, sectatos to them they-should-flee then he-hurried the-enemies to-follow the-followed sine pietate trucidare: præceptum Arturi facturus. Qui modo without pity to-slaughter the-order of-Arthur about-to-do who lately gemina feritate fulminabant, nunc timido corde fugientes, with-twin ferocity thundered now with-timid heart fleeing aliquando occulta nemorum, aliquando montes et cavernas sometimes the-bidden-parts of-the-forests sometimes mountains and caverns petebant, ut spatium vivendi haberent. Postremo cum nihil sought that a-space of-living they-might-have finally when nothing eis tutamini accessisset, insulam Tanet lacero agmine to-them for-protection had-come the-island Thanet with-torn column ingrediuntur. Insequitur eos eodem dux Cornubiæ, they-enter pursues them to-the-same-place the-duke of-Cornwall solitam cædem inferens: nec requievit, donec perempto accustomed slaughter inflicting nor rested until destroyed Cheldrico, cunctos ad deditionem compulit, receptis obsidibus.

Cheldric all to surrender he-drove received hostages

De lacu Lumond: Arturus veniam Pictis et Scotis qui eo fugerant, concedit

VI · LOCH LOMOND

The Scots and Picts take refuge on the islands of Loch Lomond, a lake of sixty islands and sixty rivers with an eagle's nest on each rock. Arthur besieges them with a fleet for fifteen days, then routs the Irish king Guillamurius, who comes to their aid. When he begins to wipe out the Scots and Picts, their bishops come barefoot with relics, and he weeps and pardons them.

Pace itaque firmata, petivit urbem Alclud, quam Arturus peace and-so established he-sought the-city Alclud which Arthur jam ab oppressione barbarica liberaverat. Deinde duxit already from oppression barbarian had-freed then he-led exercitum suum Mureif, ubi obsidebantur Scoti et Picti, qui army his-own to-Moray where were-besieged the-Scots and Picts who tertio contra regem nepotemque ejus præliati, usque for-the-third-time against the-king and-nephew his having-fought all-the-way ad eandem provinciam diffugerant. Ingressi autem stagnum to the-same province had-fled having-entered moreover the-lake Lumond, occupaverunt insulas quæ intra erant, securum Lomond they-seized the-islands which within were safe refugium quærentes: hoc autem stagnum sexaginta insulas refuge seeking this moreover lake sixty islands continens, sexaginta flumina recipit: nec ex eo nisi unum containing sixty rivers receives nor from it except one solum ad mare decurrit. In insulis vero sexaginta rupes alone to the-sea runs-down on the-islands indeed sixty rocks manifestum est esse, totidem aquilarum nidos sustentantes: evident it-is to-be as-many of-eagles nests sustaining quæ singulis annis convenientes, prodigium quod in regno which in-each years coming-together the-prodigy which in the-kingdom venturum esset, celso clamore communiter edito notificabant. about-to-come was with-lofty cry in-common uttered made-known Ad has itaque insulas confugerant prædicti hostes ut to these and-so islands had-fled the-aforesaid enemies so-that stagni præsidio fruerentur: sed parum illis profuit. Nam of-the-lake the-protection they-might-enjoy but little to-them it- profited for Arturus collecto navigio flumina circuivit, ipsosque per Arthur gathered a-fleet the-rivers went-round and-them through quindecim dies obsidendo tanta afflixit fame, ut ad fifteen days by-besieging with-so-great afflicted hunger that to millia morerentur. Dumque illos in hunc modum opprimeret, thousands they-died and-while them in this manner he-was-crushing Guillamurius rex Hiberniæ cum maxima Barbarorum copia Guillamurius king of-Ireland with greatest of-barbarians host classe supervenit, ut ipsis oppressis auxilium subvectaret. with-a-fleet came-up so-that to-them oppressed help he-might-bring Prætermissa itaque obsidione, cœpit Arturus arma vertere left-aside and-so the-siege began Arthur arms to-turn in Hibernienses: quos sine pietate laceratos coegit ad against the-Irish whom without pity torn be-forced to patriam remeare. Potitus itaque victoria, vacavit iterum the-country to-return having-gained and-so the-victory was-busy again delere gentem Scotorum atque Pictorum, incomparabili to-wipe-out the-people of-the-Scots and of-the-Picts to-incomparable sævitix indulgens. Cumque nulli prout reperiebatur parceret, savagery giving-himself and-when to-no-one as-each was-found be-spared convenerunt omnes Episcopi miserandæ patriæ, cum omni came-together all the-Bishops of-the-pitiable country with all clero sibi subdito, reliquias sanctorum et ecclesiastica clergy to-them subject the-relics of-the-saints and the-ecclesiastical sacramenta nudis ferentes pedibus, misericordiam regis pro sacraments with-bare carrying feet the-mercy of-the-king for salute populi sui implorantes. Mox ut præsentiam ejus the-safety of-the-people their-own imploring soon when the-presence his habuerunt, flexis genibus deprecati sunt, ut pietatem super they-had bent knees prayed they-have that pity upon contrita gente haberet. Satis etenim periculi intulerat, nec the-crushed people he-might-have enough for of-danger be-had-brought nor erat opus perpaucos qui remanserant, usque ad unum delere. was need the-very-few who had-remained all-the-way to one to-wipe-out Sineret illos portiunculam patriæ habere, perpetuæ be-should-allow them a-little-portion of-the-country to-have of-perpetual servitutis jugum ultro congestaturos. Cumque regem in servitude the-yoke willingly about-to-bear and-when the-king in hunc modum rogavissent, commovit eum pietas in lacrimas, this manner they-had-asked moved him pity into tears sanctorumque virorum petitioni acquiescens, veniam donavit.

and-of-the-holy men to-the-petition assenting pardon be-granted

Arturus Hoelum de mirabilibus stagnorum instruit

VII · ARTHUR TELLS HOEL OF THE WONDERFUL LAKES

Hoel marvels at Loch Lomond, and Arthur tells him of another lake nearby, twenty feet square and five deep, with a different kind of fish in each corner. He describes a third in Wales near the Severn, called Linligwan, which swallows the sea without filling and then spews it up like a mountain. Anyone who stands facing it is drawn in, but one who turns his back is safe.

His itaque gestis, explorat Hoelus prædicti stagni situm, these-things and-so done explores Hoel of-the-aforesaid lake the-situation admiraturque tot flumina, tot insulas, tot rupes, and-wonders so-many rivers so-many islands so-many rocks tot numero aquilarum nidos adesse. Cumque ad mirum so-many in-number of-eagles nests to-be-present and-when into wonder contulisset, accessit Arturus, dixitque illi: aliud stagnum he-had-turned approached Arthur and-said to-him another lake magis esse mirandum in eadem provincia. Erat quippe haud more to-be to-be-wondered-at in the-same province it-was indeed not longe illinc, latitudinem habens viginti pedum, eademque far from-there breadth having twenty of-feet and-with-the-same mensura longitudinem, cum quinque pedum altitudine. In measure length with five of-feet height in quadrum vero, sive hominum arte, sive natura constitutum, a-square indeed whether of-men by-art or by-nature set-up quatuor genera piscium intra quatuor angulos procreabat: nec four kinds of-fishes within four corners it-produced nor in aliqua partium pisces alterius partis reperiabantur. Adjecit in any of-the-parts fishes of-another part were-found he-added etiam aliud stagnum in partibus Gualliarum prope Sabrinam also another lake in the-parts of-Wales near the-Severn esse, quod Pagenses Linligwan appellant: quod cum mare to-be which the-countrymen Linligwan call which when the-sea in ipsum fluctuat, in modum voraginis recipitur, sorbendoque into it surges in the-manner of-a-whirlpool it-is-received and-by-swallowing fluctus nullatenus repletur, ut riparum marginem operiat. the-waves by-no-means is-filled so-that of-the-banks the-edge it-may-cover At dum mare decrescit, instar montis eructat absorptas aquas, but when the-sea decreases like a-mountain it-belches the-absorbed waters quibus demum ripas tegit et aspergit. Interim si gens with-which at-last the-banks it-covers and sprinkles meanwhile if the-people totius patriæ illius facie versa prope astaret, recepta intra of-the-whole country of-that face turned near should-stand received within vestes undarum aspergine, vel vix vel nunquam elabi the-clothes of-the-waves the-spray either scarcely or never to-slip-away valeret, quin a stagno voraretur. Tergo autem verso, they-could but-that by the-lake they-should-be-devoured back moreover turned non est irroratio timenda, etiam si in ripis astaret. not is the-sprinkling to-be-feared even if on the-banks one-should-stand

Arturus Eboracum renovat

VIII • ARTHUR RESTORES YORK

Arthur goes to York for Christmas and grieves at the ruined churches, whose archbishop Samson has been driven out. He makes his chaplain Pyramus archbishop, rebuilds the churches, and fills them with religious communities. He restores the nobles whom the Saxons had driven from their ancestral lands.

Data venia Scotorum populo, petivit rex Eboracum, instantis given pardon of-the-Scots to-the-people sought the-king York of-the-pressing natalis domini festum celebraturus. Cumque urbem intrasset, nativity of-the-Lord the-feast about-to-celebrate and-when the-city he-had-entered visa sacrarum ecclesiarum desolatione, condoluit. Expulso seen of-the-holy churches the-desolation he-grieved driven-out namque beato Samsone Archiepiscopo, cunctisque sanctæ for blessed Samson the-Archbishop and-all of-holy religionis viris, templa semiusta ab officio dei cessabant. Tanta religion men the-temples half-burned from the-office of-God ceased so-great etenim Paganorum insania prævaluerat. Exin convocato clero for of-the-Pagans madness had-prevailed thence called-together the-clergy et populo Pyramum capellanum suum Metropolitanæ sedi and people Pyramus chaplain his-own to-the-Metropolitan see destinavit. Ecclesias usque ad solum destructas renovat: atque he-destined the-Churches all-the-way to the-ground destroyed he-renews and religiosis cœtibus virorum ac mulierum exornat. Proceres autem with-religious gatherings of-men and of-women he-adorns the-nobles moreover inquietudine Saxonum expulsos, patriis honoribus restituit. by-the-disturbance of-the-Saxons driven-out to-ancestral honors he-restored

Arturus sceptrum Scotorum Auguselo, Uriano Murefensium, Lot vero consulatum Londonesiæ donat

IX · ARTHUR RESTORES AUGUSELUS, URIAN, AND LOT

Arthur restores three royal brothers to their inheritance. Auguselus becomes king of the Scots, Urian of Moray, and Lot, who in Aurelius' time married Arthur's sister and fathered Gawain and Mordred, receives Lothian. Arthur then marries Guinevere, of noble Roman descent, raised in Cador's household and the most beautiful woman in the island.

Erant ibi tres fratres regali prosapia orti, Lot videlicet there-were there three brothers from-royal lineage sprung Lot namely atque Urianus, necnon et Auguselus: qui antequam Saxones and Urian nor-not also Auguselus who before the-Saxons prævaluissent, principatum illarum partium habuerant. Hos had-prevailed the-principality of-those parts had-had these igitur ut ceteros paterno jure donare volens, reddidit therefore as the-others by-paternal right to-present wishing he-restored Auguselo regiam potestatem Scottorum: fratremque ejus to-Auguselus the-royal power of-the-Scots and-brother his Urianum sceptrum Murefensium insignivit: Lot autem, Urian with-the-scepter of-the-men-of-Moray he-marked Lot moreover qui tempore Aurelii Ambrosii sororem ipsius duxerat: ex who in-the-time of-Aurelius Ambrosius the-sister of-him had-married of qua Walgannum et Modedrium genuerat: ad consulatum whom Gawain and Mordred he-had-begotten to the-consulship Londonesiæ ceterarumque comprovinciarum, quæ ad eum of-Lothian and-of-the-other neighboring-provinces which to him pertinebant, reduxit. Denique cum totius patriæ statum in belonged he-restored finally when of-the-whole country the-state into pristinam dignitatem reduxisset, duxit uxorem Guanhumaram former dignity he-had-restored he-married as-wife Guinevere ex nobili genere Romanorum editam: quæ in thalamo Cadoris from a-noble race of-the-Romans born who in the-chamber of-Cador ducis educata, totius insulæ mulieres pulcritudine superabat.

the-duke brought-up of-the-whole island the-women in-beauty surpassed Arturus Hiberniam, Islandiam, Gothlandiam, et Orcades imperio addit

X · ARTHUR CONQUERS IRELAND AND THE ISLANDS

The next summer Arthur sails to Ireland, defeats and captures King Guillamurius, and subdues the island. He conquers Iceland, and the kings of Gothland and the Orkneys submit of their own accord. He returns to Britain and keeps the peace for twelve years.

Adveniente deinde sequenti æstate, paravit classem suam, coming then the-following summer he-prepared fleet his-own adivitque Hiberniæ insulam, quam sibi subdere desiderabat. and-went-to of-Ireland the-island which to-himself to-subject he-desired Applicanti autem ipsi, prædictus rex Guillamurius cum to-landing moreover him the-aforesaid king Guillamurius with innumerabili gente obviam venit, contra illum dimicaturus. innumerable people to-meet came against him about-to-fight Cumque prælium incepisset, confestim gens ejus nuda et and-when the-battle had-begun forthwith the-people his naked and inermis, mire lacerata confugit quo ei locus refugii patebat. unarmed wonderfully torn fled where to-it a-place of-refuge lay-open Nec mora, captus est etiam Guillamurius et ad deditionem nor delay taken was also Guillamurius and to surrender coactus. Unde ceteri principes patriæ stupefacti, exemplo forced whence the-other princes of-the-country stunned by-the-example regis deditionem fecerunt. Subjugatis itaque totius Hiberniæ of-the-king surrender made subjugated and-so of-the-whole of-Ireland partibus, classem suam direxit in Islandiam, eamque debellato the-parts fleet his-own he-directed into Iceland and-it subdued populo subjugavit. Exin divulgato per ceteras insulas rumore the-people subjugated thence spread-abroad through the-other islands the-rumor quod ei nulla provincia resistere poterat, Doldavius rex that to-him no province to-resist could Doldavius king Gothlandiæ, et Gunfasius rex Orcadum ultro venerunt: of-Gothland and Gunfasius king of-the-Orkneys of-their-ownaccord came promissoque vectigali subjectionem fecerunt. Emensa deinde and-promised a-tax subjection made having-passed then hyeme, reversus est in Britanniam, statumque regni in the-winter returned he-has into Britain and-the-state of-the-kingdom into firmam pacem renovans, moram duodecim annis ibidem fecit. firm peace renewing a-stay for-twelve years there he-made Norvegiam, Daciam, Aquitaniam et Galliam subjicit

XI · ARTHUR CONQUERS NORWAY AND GAUL

Arthur's court becomes the model of courtliness for distant peoples. He conquers Norway for his brother-in-law Lot, and Denmark, then besieges the tribune Frollo in Paris. Frollo proposes single combat and wounds Arthur, who splits his head with Caliburn; Hoel conquers Aquitaine and Gascony, and after nine years Arthur gives Normandy to Bedevere and Anjou to Kay.

Tunc invitatis probissimis quibusque ex longe positis regnis, then invited the-most-valiant all from far placed kingdoms cœpit familiam suam augmentare: tantamque urbanitatem he-began household his-own to-increase and-so-great courtliness in domo sua habere, ut æmulationem longe manentibus in house his-own to-have that emulation far dwelling populis ingereret. Unde nobilissimus quisque incitatus, nihili peoples he-heaped whence most-noble each-one roused at-nothing pendebat se, nisi sese sive in induendo, sive in arma valued himself unless himself whether in dressing or in arms ferendo, ad modum militum Arturi haberet. Denique bearing after the-manner of-the-knights of-Arthur he-held finally fama largitatis atque probitatis illius per extremos mundi the-fame of-largess and of-prowess his through the-farthest of-the-world cardines divulgata, reges transmarinorum regnorum nimius binges spread-abroad the-kings of-overseas kingdoms excessive invadebat timor, ne inquietatione ejus oppressi, nationes sibi invaded fear lest by-the-harassment his oppressed the-nations to-them subditas amitterent. Mordacibus ergo curis anxiiati, urbes subject they-might-lose with-biting therefore cares troubled the-cities atque urbium turres renovabant: oppida in congruis locis and of-the-cities the-towers they-renewed towns in fitting places ædificabant: ut si impetus Arturum in illos duceret, they-built so-that if impulse Arthur against them should-lead refugium, si opus esset, haberent. Cumque id Arturo a-refuge if need were they-might-have and-when this to-Arthur notificatum esset, extollens se quia cunctis timori erat, made-known had-been lifting-up himself because to-all for-fear he-was totam Europam sibi subdere affectat. Paratis deinde the-whole Europe to-himself to-subject he-desires prepared then navigiis Norwegiam prius adivit, ut illius diademate Lot fleets Norway first he-went-to so-that its with-diadem Lot sororium suum insigniret. Erat autem Lot nepos Sichelini brother-in-law his-own he-might-mark was moreover Lot nephew of-Sichelin regis Norwegensium, qui ea tempestate defunctus, regnum king of-the-Norwegians who at-that time having-died kingdom suum eidem destinaverat. At Norwegenses indignati illum his-own to-the-same had-destined but the-Norwegians indignant him recipere, erexerant jam quendam Riculfum in regiam to-receive had-raised already a-certain Riculf into royal potestatem, munitisque urbibus, Arturo se posse power and-fortified the-cities to-Arthur themselves to-be-able resistere existimabant. Erat tunc Walvanus filius prædicti to-resist thought was then Gawain son of-the-aforsaid

Lot duodecim annorum juvenis, obsequio Sulpicii Papæ Lot of-twelve years a-youth to-the-service of-Sulpicius the-Pope ab avunculo traditus: a quo arma recepit. Ut ergo by the-uncle handed-over from whom arms he-received when therefore Arturus (sicut dicere incœperam) in Norwegense littus Arthur as to-say I-had-begun on the-Norwegian shore applicuit: obviavit ei rex Riculfus cum universo patriæ landed met him king Riculf with all of-the-country populo, præliumque commisit: et cum multum cruoris in the-people and-battle joined and when much of-gore on utraque parte diffusum esset, prævaluerunt tandem Britones: each side poured-out had-been prevailed at-last the-Britons factoque impetu Riculfum cum multis peremerunt. Victoria and-made an-attack Riculf with many destroyed of-the-victory igitur potiti, civitates accumulata flamma invaserunt: therefore having-gained the-cities with-beaped flame they-attacked dispersisque pagensibus, sævitix indulgere non cessaverunt, and-scattered the-countrymen to-savagery to-indulge not they-ceased donec totam Norwegiam, necnon et Daciam, dominio until all Norway nor-not also Dacia to-the-dominion Arturi submiserunt. Quibus subactis, cum Lot in regem of-Arthur they-subjected which subdued when Lot into king Norwegix promovisset, navigavit Arturus ad Gallias, factisque of-Norway he-had-advanced sailed Arthur to the-Gauls and-made turmis patriam undique vastare incœpit. Erat tunc provincia troops the-country on-all-sides to-lay-waste began was then the-province Gallia Romæ Flolloni tribuno commissa, qui eam sub Leone Gaul of-Rome to-Frollo tribune committed who it under Leo Imperatore regebat. Qui cum Arturi adventum comperisset, the-Emperor ruled who when of-Arthur the-arrival he-had-discovered collegit omnem armatum militem qui potestati suæ parebat, gathered every armed knight who to-power his-own was-obedient et cum Arturo præliatus est, sed minime resistere quivit. and with Arthtur fought he-has but by-no-means to-resist could Nam Arturum iuventus insularum omnium quas subjugaverat, for Arthtur the-youth of-the-islands of-all which he-had-subjugated comitabatur. Unde tantum perhibebatur habere exercitum, accompanied whence so-great he-was-held to-have an-army quantum erat difficile ab ullo posse superari. Famulabatur as-great-as was difficult by anyone to-be-able to-be-overcome was-servant quoque ei melior pars Gallicanæ militiæ, quam sua also to-him the-better part of-the-Gallic knightbood which by-his-own largitate sibi obnoxiam fecerat. Frollo igitur cum sese in largess to-himself bound he-had-made Frollo therefore when himself into deteriorem prælii partem incidere vidisset, relicto confestim the-worse of-the-battle part to-fall he-had-seen left forthwith campo Parisios cum paucis diffugit. Ibi resociato dilapso the-field to-Paris with a-few fled there regathered the-scattered populo, munivit urbem: et iterum affectavit cum Arturo people he-fortified the-city and again desired with Arthtur dimicare. At dum exercitum suum vicinorum auxilio to-fight but while army his-own of-the-neighbors with-the-help roborare intenderet, ex improvise venit Arturus, ipsumque to-strengthen he-intended from unforeseen came Arthtur and-him intra civitatem obsedit. Emenso denique mense, cum Frollo within the-city besieged having-passed finally a-month when Frollo gentem suam fame perire doluisset, mandavit Arturo, ut people his-own by-hunger to-perish had-grieved he-sent-word to-Arthur that ipsi soli duellum inirent: et cui victoria provenisset, they-themselves alone a-duel should-enter and to-whom victory had-come alterius regnum obtineret. Erat enim ipse staturæ, of-the-other the-kingdom should-hold was for he-himself of-stature et audaciæ, et fortitudinis magnæ: quibus ultra modum and of-boldness and of-strength great in-which beyond measure confisus, ita mandaverat, ut hoc modo salutis aditum having-trusted so be-had-sent-word that in-this manner of-safety an-approach haberet. Quod cum Arturo nunciatum esset, placuit ei he-might-have which when to-Arthur announced had-been pleased him vehementer Flollonis affectus. Renuntiavitque sese paratum vehemently of-Frollo the-disposition and-he-announced-back himself ready fore prædictam conventionem tenere. Dato igitur ab utraque to-be the-aforesaid agreement to-hold given therefore on each parte fœdere, conveniunt uterque in insulam quæ erat extra side the-pact come-together each into an-island which was outside civitatem, populo expectante quid de eis futurum erat. the-city the-people waiting what about them about-to-be was Ambo erant decenter armati: super equos etiam miræ both were becomingly armed upon horses also of-wonderful velocitatis sedentes: nec erat promptum dinoscere utri swiftness sitting nor it-was plain to-discern to-which-of-two triumphus proveniret. Ut itaque erectis lanceis in adversis triumph would-come when and-so raised lances on opposite partibus steterunt, confestim subdentes equis calcaria, sides they-stood forthwith putting to-the-horses the-spurs sese maximis ictibus percusserunt. At Arturus gestans themselves with-greatest blows they-struck but Arthur carrying cautius lanceam, Flollonem in summitate pectoris infixit, more-cautiously the-lance Frollo on the-top of-the-chest pierced ejusque telo vitato, quantum vigor sinebat, illum in terram and-his weapon avoided as-far-as strength allowed him on the-earth prostravit. Evaginato quoque ense festinabat eum ferire, cum laid-low drawn also the-sword he-hurried him to-strike when Frollo velocius erectus, prætensa lancea occurrit: illatoque intra Frollo more-swiftly raised with-beld-out lance ran-up and-brought within pectus equi Arturi letifero vulnere, utrumque concidere the-chest of-the-horse of-Arthur a-deadly wound both to-fall coegit. Britones ut prostratum regem viderunt, timentes he-forced the-Britons when the-felled king they-saw fearing eum peremptum esse, vix potuerunt retineri, quin rupto him destroyed to-be scarcely could to-be-held-back but-that broken fœdere in Gallos unanimiter irruerent. At dum metam the-pact upon the-Gauls with-one-mind they-should-rush but while the-bound pacis jam egredi meditarentur, erectus est ocyus Arturus: of-peace already to-pass they-considered raised was more-swiftly Arthur prætensoque clypeo imminentem sibi Flollonem cito cursu and-with-held-out shield the-threatening to-him Frollo with-swift course petivit. Instantes igitur cominus, mutuos ictus ingeminant, sought pressing therefore hand-to-hand mutual blows they-redouble alter neci alterius insistens. Denique Frollo invento aditu, one on-the-death of-the-other pressing finally Frollo found an-opening percussit Arturum in frontem, et nisi collisione cassidis struck Artur on the-forehead and unless by-the-collision of-the-helmet mucronem hebetasset, mortiferum vulnus forsitan intulisset. the-blade he-had-blunted a-deadly wound perhaps he-would-have-dealt Manante ergo sanguine, cum Arturus lorica et clypeum flowing therefore the-blood when Arthur the-breastplate and the-shield rubere vidisset, ardentiori ira succensus est, atque erecto to-redden had-seen with-more-burning anger inflamed he-was and raised totis viribus Caliburno, impressit eum per galeam in with-all strength Caliburn he-drove it through the-helmet into caput Flollonis, quod in duas partes dissecuit. Quo vulnere the-head of-Frollo which into two parts he-cut-apart by-which wound cecidit Frollo, tellurem calcaneis pulsans, et spiritum in fell Frollo the-earth with-heels beating and the-spirit into auras emisit. Cumque id per exercitum divulgatum fuisset, the-airs sent-forth and-when this through the-army spread-abroad had-been concurrerunt cives, apertisque valvis civitatem Arturo ran-together the-citizens and-opened the-gates the-city to-Arthur tradiderunt. Qui deinde victoria potitus, divisit exercitum handed-over who then of-the-victory having-gained divided army suum in duas partes, et unam Hoelo duci commisit: his-own into two parts and one to-Hoel the-duke committed præcepitque illi ut ad expugnandum Guitardum Pictavensium and-ordered him that for storming Guitard of-the-Poitevins ducem iret: ipse vero cum reliqua parte ceteras duke he-should-go he-himself but with the-remaining part the-other provincias sibi subjugare vacavit. Mox Hoelus Aquitaniam provinces to-himself to-subjugate was-busy soon Hoel Aquitaine ingressus, urbes patriæ invasit, Guitardumque pluribus having-entered the-cities of-the-country attacked and-Guitard by-many præliis anxiatum, ad deditionem coegit. Guasconiam quoque battles troubled to surrender forced Gascony also ferro et flamma depopulans, principes ejusdem subjugavit. with-sword and flame ravaging the-princes of-the-same subjugated Emensis iterum novem annis, cum totius Galliæ partes having-passed again nine years when of-the-whole of-Gaul the-parts potestati suæ submisisset, venit iterum Arturus Parisios, to-power his-own he-had-subjected came again Arthur to-Paris tenuitque ibidem curiam: ubi convocato clero et populo, and-held there a-court where called-together the-clergy and people statum regni pace et lege confirmavit. Tunc largitus the-state of-the-kingdom with-peace and law confirmed then bestowed est Beduero pincernæ suo Neustriam, quæ nunc Normannia he-has on-Bedevere butler his-own Neustria which now Normandy dicitur: Caioque dapifero, Andegavensium provinciam. Plures is-called and-on-Kay the-steward of-the-Angevins the-province many quoque alias provincias nobilibus viris, qui in obsequio suo also other provinces on-noble men who in service his-own fuerant. Denique pacificatis quibusque civitatibus et populis, had-been finally pacified all cities and peoples incipiente vere in Britanniam est reversus. beginning spring into Britain he-has returned Arturus concilium regum sibi subditorum in urbe Legionum convocat

XII · THE COURT AT THE CITY OF THE LEGIONS

As Pentecost nears, Arthur resolves to hold court and be crowned at the City of the Legions on the Usk, a rich city with golden roofs like Rome's, two churches, and a school of two hundred philosophers who read the stars. His envoys summon kings, archbishops, consuls, and nobles from all Britain, the islands, and Gaul, and no prince of any worth this side of Spain stays away, so far has Arthur's generosity spread.

Cum igitur solennitas Pentecostes advenire inciperet, post when therefore the-solemnity of-Pentecost to-come began after tantum triumphum maxima lætitia fluctuans Arturus, so-great a-triumph with-greatest joy surging Arthur affectavit curiam ilico tenere, regnique diadema capiti desired a-court on-the-spot to-bold and-of-the-kingdom the-diadem on-head suo imponere. Reges etiam et duces sibi subditos ad bis-own to-place the-kings also and dukes to-him subject to ipsam festivitatem convenire: ubi et illam venerabiliter the-same festival to-come-together where both it reverently celebraret, et inter procures suos firmissimam pacem he-might-celebrate and among the-nobles his-own most-firm peace renovaret. Indicato autem familiaribus suis quod affectaverat: he-might-renew shown moreover to-intimates his-own what he-had-desired consilium cepit, ut in urbe Legionum suum exequeretur counsel he-took that in the-City of-the-Legions his-own he-should-carry-out propositum. In Glamorgantia etenim super Oscam fluvium, purpose in Glamorgan for upon the-Usk river non longe a Sabrino mari, amœnissimo situ locata, præ not far from the-Severn sea in-a-most-pleasant situation placed before ceteris civitatibus divitiis abundans, tantæ solennitati apta the-other cities in-riches abounding for-so-great a-solemnity fit erat. Ex una namque parte prædictum nobile flumen juxta it-was on one for side the-aforesaid noble river beside eam fluebat, per quod transmarini reges et principes, qui it flowed through which the-overseas kings and princes who venturi erant navigio advehi poterant: ex alia vero about-to-come were by-ship to-be-carried could on the-other indeed parte pratis atque nemoribus vallata, regalibus præpollebat side by-meadows and forests walled in-royal it-excelled palatiis: ita ut aureis tectorum fastigiis Romam imitaretur. palaces so that with-the-golden of-the-roofs gables Rome it-imitated Duabus autem eminebat Ecclesiis, quarum una in honore with-two moreover it-stood-out Churches of-which one in honor Julii martyris erecta, virgineo Deo dicatarum puellarum of-Julius the-martyr raised with-a-virginal to-God dedicated of-girls choro perpulcre ornabatur: altera vero in beati Aaron choir most-beautifully was-adorned the-other indeed in of-blessed Aaron ejusdem socii nomine fundata, canonicorum conventu of-the-same the-comrade name founded of-canons by-a-convent subnixa, tertiam metropolitanam sedem Britanniae habebat. supported the-third metropolitan see of-Britain held Præterea gymnasium ducentorum philosophorum habebat: qui besides a-school of-two-hundred philosophers it-had who astronomia atque ceteris artibus eruditi, cursus stellarum in-astronomy and other arts learned the-courses of-the-stars diligenter observabant, et prodigia eo tempore ventura diligently observed and the-prodigies at-that time about-to-come regi Arturo veris argumentis prædicebant. Tot ergo to-the-king Arthur with-true arguments foretold with-so-many therefore delitiarum copiis præclara, festivitati edictæ disponitur. of-delights abundances famous for-the-festival proclaimed it-is-arranged Missis deinde in diversa regna legatis, invitantur tam sent then into various kingdoms envoys are-invited as-well ex Galliis quam ex collateralibus insulis Oceani, qui from the-Gauls as from the-neighboring islands of-the-Ocean those-who ad curiam venire deberent. Venerunt ergo Augustelus rex to the-court to-come ought came therefore Augustelus king Albanix, quæ nunc Scotia dicitur, Urianus rex Murefensium: of-Albany which now Scotland is-called Urian king of-the-men-of-Moray Caduallo Leuirh rex Venedotorum, qui nunc Nortgualenses Cadwallo Lewirh king of-the-Venedotians who now North-Welsh dicuntur: Sater rex Demetorum, id est Suthgualensium: are-called Sater king of-the-Demetians that is of-the-South-Welsh Cador rex Cornubiæ: trium etiam metropolitanarum sedium Cador king of-Cornwall of-the-three also metropolitan sees Archipræsules, Londoniensis videlicet, Eboracensis, nec non ex the-Archbishops of-London namely of-York nor not from urbe Legionum Dubricius. Hic Britannix primus Apostolicæ the-City of-the-Legions Dubricius this-one of-Britain the-first of-the-Apostolic sedis legatus tanta religione clarebat, ut quemque languore see legate with-so-great religion shone that each-one by-sickness gravatum orationibus suis sanaret. Venerunt nobilium civitatum weighed-down with-prayers his-own he-bealed came of-noble cities consules, Morvid consul Claudiocestriæ: Mauron Guigornensis: the-consuls Morvid consul of-Gloucestre Mauron of-Worcester Anaraut Saleberiensis; Arthgal Cargueitensis, quæ Warguit Anaraut of-Salisbury Arthgal of-Cargueit which Warwick appellatur: Jugein ex Legecestria: Cursalem ex Kaicestria: is-called Jugein from Leicester Cursalem from Kaicester

Kimmare dux Doroberniæ: Galluc Saleberiensis: Urgennius Kimmare duke of-Dorobernia Galluc of-Salisbury Urgennius ex Badone: Jonathal Dorocestrensis: Boso Ridocensis, id est, from Bath Jonathal of-Dorchester Boso of-Ridoc that is Oxenefordiæ. Præter consules venerunt non minoris dignitatis of-Oxford besides the-consuls came not of-lesser dignity heroes, Danaut, Mappapo: Cheneus, Mapcoil, Pereder, heroes Danaut Mappapo Cheneus Mapcoil Pereder Maberidur, Guisul, Mapnogoit, Regin, Mapclaut, Eddelein, Maberidur Guisul Mapnogoit Regin Mapclaut Eddelein
 Mapeledauc, Kincar, Mabbagan, Kimmare, Gorbioniam, Mapeledauc Kincar Mabbagan Kimmare Gorbioniam Mapgoit, Clofaut, Rupmaneton, Kimbelim, Maptrunat, Mapgoit Clofaut Rupmaneton Kimbelim Maptrunat Cathleus, Mapcatel, Kinlich, Mapneton, plures quoque alii, Cathleus Mapcatel Kinlich Mapneton many also others quorum nomina longum est enumerare. Ex collateralibus whose names long it-is to-enumerate from the-neighboring etiam insulis, Guillamurius rex Hiberniæ: Maluasius rex also islands Guillamurius king of-Ireland Malvasius king Islandiæ: Doldavius rex Godlandiæ: Gunvasius rex Orcadum: of-Iceland Doldavius king of-Gotland Gunvasius king of-the-Orkneys Lot rex Norwegiæ: Aschillius rex Dacorum. Ex transmarinis Lot king of-Norway Aschil king of-the-Danes from overseas quoque partibus, Holdinus rex Rutenorum: Leodegarius also parts Holdin king of-the-Ruteni Leodegar consul Boloniæ: Beduerus pincerna, dux Normanniæ: Borellus consul of-Boulogne Bedevere the-butler duke of-Normandy Borel Cenomanensis: Caius dapifer, dux Andegavensis: Guitardus of-Le-Mans Kay the-steward duke of-Anjou Guitard Pictavensis: duodecim quoque Galliarum pares, quos Guerinus of-Poitou the-twelve also of-the-Gauls peers whom Guerin Carnotensis conducebat. Hoelus dux Armoricanorum Britonum of-Chartres led Hoel duke of-the-Armorican Britons cum proceribus sibi subditis, qui tanto apparatu with the-nobles to-him subject who with-so-great an-array ornamentorum, mularum et equorum incedebant, quantum of-ornaments of-mules and of-horses advanced as-great-as difficile est describere. Præter hos non remansit princeps difficult it-is to-describe besides these not remained a-prince alicujus precii citra Hispaniam, qui ad istud edictum of-any worth on-this-side-of Spain who to this edict non veniret. Nec mirum: largitas namque Arturi per not should-come nor wonder the-largess for of-Arthur through totum mundum divulgata, cunctos in amorem illius illexerat. the-whole world spread-abroad all into love of-him had-enticed

De Arturi coronatione

XIII · THE CROWNING OF ARTHUR

The archbishops crown Arthur, and four kings bear golden swords before him, while four queens carry white doves before Guinevere. The music in the two churches is so sweet that the knights run from one to the other. Following the Trojan custom, the men feast with the king and the women with the queen, and Britain surpasses all kingdoms in wealth and elegance, its ladies loving only knights proven three times in battle.

Omnibus denique in urbe congregatis, solennitate instante, all finally in the-city gathered the-solemnity pressing archipræsules ad palatium ducuntur, ut regem diademat the-archbishops to the-palace are-led so-that the-king with-the-diadem regali coronarent. Dubricius ergo, quoniam in sua diœcesi royal they-might-crown Dubricius therefore since in his-own diocese curia tenebatur, paratus ad celebrandum obsequium, hujus the-court was-held ready for celebrating the-service of-this rei curam suscepit. Rege tandem insignito, ad templum matter the-care took-up the-king at-last marked to the-temple Metropolitanæ sedis ornate conducitur: a dextro enim of-the-Metropolitan see ornately is-led on the-right for et a lævo latere duo Archipontifices ipsum tenebant. and on the-left side two Archpontiffs him held Quatuor autem reges, Albania videlicet atque Cornubiæ, four moreover kings of-Albany namely and of-Cornwall Demetiæ et Venedociæ, quorum illud jus fuerat, quatuor of-Demetia and of-Venedotia whose that right had-been four aureos gladios ferentes ante ipsum, præbant. Conventus golden swords carrying before him went-before the-assembly quoque multimodorum ordinatorum, miris modulationibus also of-manifold ordained-men with-wonderful melodies præcinebat. Ex alia autem parte reginam suis sang-before on the-other moreover side the-queen with-her-own insignibus laureatam Archipræsules atque Pontifices ad insignia laured the-Archbishops and Pontiffs to templum Deo dicatarum puellarum conducebant. Quatuor the-temple to-God dedicated of-girls led the-four quoque prædictorum regum reginæ, quatuor albas columbas also of-the-aforesaid kings queens four white doves de more præferebant. Mulieres autem quæ aderant, according-to custom carried-before the-women moreover who were-present illam cum maximo gaudio sequebantur. Postremo peracta her with greatest joy followed finally completed processione, tot organa, tot cantus fiunt in utrisque the-procession so-many organs so-many songs are-made in both templis, ita ut præ nimia dulcedine milites qui aderant temples so that for excessive sweetness the-knights who were-present nescirent quod templorum prius peterent. Catervatim ergo did-not-know which of-the-temples first they-should-seek in-crowds therefore nunc ad hoc, nunc ad illud ruebant: nec si totus dies now to this now to that they-rushed nor if the-whole day celebrationi deditus esset, tædium aliquod ipsis generaret. to-the-celebration given had-been weariness any to-them would-beget Divinis tandem obsequiis in utroque celebratis, rex et divine at-last services in both celebrated the-king and regina diademata sua deponunt: assumptisque levioribus the-queen diadems their-own lay-down and-taken lighter ornamentis, ille ad suum palatium cum viris: hæc ad ornaments he to his-own palace with the-men she to aliud cum mulieribus epulatum incedunt. Antiquam namque another with the-women to-feast proceed the-ancient for consuetudinem Trojæ servantes Britones, consueverant mares custom of-Troy keeping the-Britons were-accustomed males cum maribus, mulieres cum mulieribus festivos dies separatim with males women with women festive days separately celebrare. Collocatis postmodum cunctis, ut singulorum to-celebrate placed afterward all as of-the-single-ones dignitas expetebat, Caius dapifer Herminio ornatus, mille the-dignity demanded Kay the-steward with-ermine adorned by-a-thousand vero nobilissimis juvenibus comitatus est: qui omnes indeed most-noble youths accompanied was who all Herminio induti, fercula cum ipso ministrabant. Ex alia with-ermine clothed the-dishes with him served from the-other vero parte, Beduerum pincernam totidem vario amicti indeed side Bedevere the-butler as-many in-vair clothed sequuntur: qui in scyphis diversorum generum, multimoda follow who in cups of-various kinds manifold pocula cum ipso distribuebant. In palatio quoque reginæ drinks with him distributed in the-palace also of-the-queen innumerabiles ministri diversis ornamentis induti, obsequium innumerable servants in-various ornaments clothed service suum præstabant, morem suum exercentes: quem si omnino their-own offered the-custom their-own exercising which if wholly describere pergerem nimiam historiæ prolixitatem generarem.

to-describe I-were-to-proceed excessive of-the-history length I-would-beget

Ad tantum etenim statum dignitatis Britannia tunc provecta to so-great for a-state of-dignity Britain then advanced erat, quod copia divitiarum, luxu ornamentorum, was that by-abundance of-riches by-luxury of-ornaments facetia incolarum, cetera regna excellebat. Quicumque by-the-elegance of-the-inhabitants the-other kingdoms it-excelled whoever ergo famosus probitate miles in eadem erat, unius coloris therefore famous for-prowess knight in the-same was of-one color vestibus atque armis utebatur. Facete etiam mulieres consimilia clothes and arms used elegantly also the-women similar indumenta habentes, nullius amorem habere dignabantur, nisi garments having of-no-one the-love to-have deigned unless tertio in militia approbatus esset. Efficiebantur ergo three-times in knightood approved he-had-been were-made therefore castæ mulieres, et milites amore illarum meliores.

chaste the-women and the-knights by-love of-them better Arturus omnes muneribus ditat

XIV · ARTHUR ENRICHES ALL WITH GIFTS

After the feasts the knights hold mock battles on horseback while the women watch from the walls. Others compete with javelins, spears, stones, and dice, and Arthur rewards the winners with gifts. On the fourth day he gives cities, castles, sees, and abbeys to all who serve him.

Refecti tandem epulis, diversi diversos ludos composituri refreshed at-last with-feasts different-ones different games about-to-arrange campos extra civitatem adeunt. Mox milites simulacrum praelii the-fields outside the-city they-go-to soon the-knights a-likeness of-battle ciendo, equestrem ludum componunt: mulieres in edito by-stirring-up an-equestrian game arrange the-women on the-height murorum aspicientes, in furiales amoris flammas amore joci of-the-walls watching into furious of-love flames by-love of-the-sport irritant. Alii cum Celtibus, alii cum hasta, alii ponderosorum they-rouse others with javelins others with the-spear others of-heavy lapidum jactu, alii cum saxis, alii cum aleis ceterorumque stones with-the-throw others with stones others with dice and-of-other jocorum diversitate contendentes, quod diei restabat, sports with-variety contending what of-the-day remained postposita lite, prætereunt. Quicunque vero ludi sui set-aside quarrel pass whoever indeed of-game his-own victoriam adeptus erat, ab Arturo largis muneribus ditabatur. the-victory obtained had by Arthur with-large gifts was-enriched Consumptis ergo primis in hunc modum tribus diebus, spent therefore the-first in this manner three days instante quarto vocantur cuncti, qui ei propter honores pressing the-fourth are-called all who to-him on-account-of honors obsequium præstabant, et singuli singulis possessionibus, service offered and single-ones with-single possessions civitatibus videlicet atque castellis, Archiepiscopatibus, with-cities namely and castles with-Archbishops Episcopatibus, Abbatiis, ceterisque honoribus donantur.

with-Bishops with-Abbeys and-with-other honors are-presented Lucius Tiberius ad Arturum epistolam mittit

XV · LUCIUS TIBERIUS SENDS A LETTER TO ARTHUR

Dubricius retires to a hermit's life, and David, the king's uncle, succeeds him. Twelve envoys bearing olive branches bring a letter from Lucius, procurator of the Republic, demanding the tribute Britain owes Rome and summoning Arthur to Rome by mid-August for judgment. Climbing the giants' tower to deliberate, Cadwr laughs that God has sent the Romans to rouse the Britons from five years of dice and women.

Beatus igitur Dubricius in eremiticam vitam anhelans, sese blessed therefore Dubricius for the-hermit life panting himself ab Archiepiscopali sede deposuit: in cujus locum sacratur from the-Archiepiscopal see deposed in whose place is-consecrated David regis avunculus, cujus vita exemplum totius bonitatis

David of-the-king the-uncle whose life an-example of-all goodness erat, his quos doctrina imbuerat. In loco vero sancti was to-those whom with-teaching he-had-imbued in the-place indeed of-holy Samsonis Dolensis Archipræsulis, destinatur Chelianus illustris

Samson of-Dol Archbishop is-destined Chelian a-renowned Presbyter Landaviæ, annuente Hoelo rege Armoricanorum

Priest of-Llandaff assenting Hoel king of-the-Armorican Britonum: cujus vita et boni mores virum commendaverant.

Britons whose life and good ways the-man had-commended Episcopatus vero Silcestriæ Mauganio: et Guintoniæ Diwanio the-Bishopric indeed of-Silchester to-Maugannius and of-Winchester to-Diwanus decernitur: decernitur quoque pontificalis insula Alclud is-decreed is-decreed also the-pontifical island Alclud Eledanio. Dum hæc inter eos distribueret: ecce duodecim to-Eledanious while these-things among them be-distributed behold twelve viri maturæ ætatis, reverendi vultus, ramos olivæ, in signum men of-ripe age of-venerable countenance branches of-olive as a-sign legationis in dextris ferentes, moderatis vocibus et passibus of-embassy in right-hands carrying with-measured voices and steps ad regem ingrediuntur: et eo salutato, literas ipsi ex parte to the-king enter and him greeted letters to-him from the-side Lucii Tiberii in hæc verba obtulerunt: "Lucius Reipublicæ of-Lucius Tiberius in these words they-offered Lucius of-the-Republic procurator, Arturo regi Britannix quod meruit. Admirans procurator to-Arthur king of-Britain what he-has-deserved wondering vehementer admiror super tuæ tyrannidis protervia. Admiror, vehemently I-wonder at your of-tyranny the-insolence I-wonder inquam, et injuriam quam Romæ intulisti. Recolligens I-say and the-wrong which to-Rome you-have-brought recalling indignor quod extra te egressus, eam cognoscere diffugas: I-am-indignant that outside yourself having-gone it to-recognize you-shun nec animadvertere festines, quid sit injustis actibus senatum nor to-notice you-hasten what it-is by-unjust acts the-senate offensus, cui totum orbem famulatum debere non to-have-offended to-which the-whole world service to-owe not ignoras. Etenim tributum Britannix quod Senatus tibi you-are-ignorant for the-tribute of-Britain which the-Senate to-you præceperat: quia Caius Julius, ceterique Romanæ dignitatis had-ordered because Gaius Julius and-the-other of-the-Roman dignity viri illud multis temporibus habuerunt: neglecto tanti ordinis men it for-many times had neglected of-so-great an-order imperio detinere præsumpsisti: eripuisti quoque Galliam: the-command to-withhold you-have-presumed you-have-snatched also Gaul eripuisti Allobrogum provinciam: eripuisti omnes you-have-snatched of-the-Allobroges the-province you-have-snatched all Oceani insulas: quarum reges, dum Romana potestas in of-the-Ocean the-islands whose kings while the-Roman power in illis partibus prævaluit, vectigal majoribus nostris reddiderunt. those parts prevailed tax to-forefathers our rendered Quia ergo de tantis injuriarum tuarum cumulis senatus because therefore for so-great of-wrongs your heaps the-senate rectitudinem petere decrevit, mediantem Augustum proximi justice to-seek has-decided mid August of-the-next anni terminum præfigens, Romam te venire jubeo: ut year as-the-limit fixing to-Rome you to-come I-order so-that dominis tuis satisfaciens, sententiæ quam eorum dictavit to-lords your giving-satisfaction to-the-sentence which their has-dictated justitia, acquiescas. Sin autem, ego ipse partes tuas adibo, justice you-may-assent if-not moreover I myself parts your shall-approach et quicquid vesania tua Reipublicæ eripuit, eidem and whatever madness your from-the-Republic has-snatched to-the-same mediantibus gladiis restituere conabor.” Quæ ut in præsentia mediating swords to-restore I-shall-try which when in the-presence regum et consulum recitata fuerunt: secessit Arturus cum of-kings and consuls recited they-had-been withdrew Arthur with eis in giganteam turrin, quæ in introitu erat, tractaturus them into the-giant tower which at the-entrance was about-to-treat quæ contra talia mandata disponi deberent. At dum what-things against such commands to-be-arranged ought but while gradus ascendere inceperant, Cadur dux Cornubiæ, ut erat the-steps to-climb they-had-begun Cadur duke of-Cornwall as he-was læti animi, in hunc sermonem cum risu coram rege of-glad mind into this speech with laughter before the-king solutus est: Hucusque in timore fueram, ne Britones longa loosened was hitherto in fear I-had-been lest the-Britons by-long pace quietos, otium quod ducunt ignavos faceret: famamque peace quiet the-idleness which they-lead towards should-make and-the-fame militiæ, qua ceteris gentibus clariores censentur, in of-knighthood by-which than-other peoples more-famous they-are-thought in eis omnino deleret. Quippe ubi usus armorum videtur them altogether should-wipe-out indeed where the-use of-arms seems abesse; alearum vero et mulierum inflammationes, ceteraque to-be-absent of-dice indeed and of-women the-inflammations and-other oblectamenta adesse: dubitandum non est, quin id quod delights to-be-present to-be-doubted not it-is but-that that which erat virtutis, quod honoris, quod audaciæ, quod famæ, was of-valor what of-honor what of-boldness what of-fame ignavia commaculet. Fere namque transacti sunt quinque sloth may-stain almost for passed have five anni, ex quo prædictis delitiis dediti exercitio Martis years since when to-the-aforesaid delights given the-exercise of-Mars caruimus. Deus igitur ut nos segnitia liberaret, Romanos we-have-lacked God therefore that us from-sloth he-might-free the-Romans in hunc affectum induxit, ut in pristinum statum nostram into this disposition has-led that into the-former state our probitatem reducerent. Hæc et his similia illo cum prowess they-might-lead-back these and to-these similar-things him with ceteris dicente, venerunt tandem ad sedilia, ubi collocatis the-others saying they-came at-last to the-seats where placed singulis, Arturus illos in hunc modum affatus est. the-single-ones Arthur them in this manner addressed has Arturus, concilio habito, singulis dat veniam quid sentiant dicendi

XVI · ARTHUR TAKES COUNSEL

Arthur argues that what Caesar took by force gives no right to tribute. By the same reasoning Rome owes tribute to him, since Belinus and Brennius took Rome and Constantine and Maximianus, his kinsmen, ruled the empire. As for Gaul and the islands, Rome did not defend them when he took them.

Consocii (inquit) adversitatis et prosperitatis, quorum O-companions he-says of-adversity and of-prosperity whose probitates hactenus et in dandis consiliis, et in militiis prowesses hitherto both in giving counsels and in knight-hoods agendis expertus sum: adhibete nunc unanimiter sensus doing tested I-have apply now with-one-mind senses vestros, et sapienter praevidete quæ super talibus mandatis your and wisely foresee what-things upon such commands nobis esse agenda noveritis. Quicquid enim a sapiente for-us to-be to-be-done you-will-have-known whatever for by a-wise-man diligenter praevidetur, cum ad actum accedit, facilius toleratur. diligently is-foreseen when to act it-comes more-easily is-borne Facilius ergo inquietationem Lucii tolerare poterimus, si more-easily therefore the-harassment of-Lucius to-bear we-shall-be-able if communi studio præmeditati fuerimus, quibus modis eam with-common zeal premeditated we-shall-have by-what means it debilitare instemus. Quam non multum nobis timendam esse to-weaken we-may-press which not much by-us to-be-feared to-be existimo: cum ex irrationabili causa exigat tributum, quod I-think since from an-unreasonable cause he-demands the-tribute which ex Britannia habere desiderat. Dicit enim ipsum sibi from Britain to-have he-desires he-says for it to-himself dari debere, quia Julio Cæsari ceterisque successoribus to-be-given to-be-owed because to-Julius Caesar and-to-the-other successors suis redditum fuerit: qui dissidio veterum Britonum his-own rendered it-has-been who by-the-dissension of-the-old Britons invitati cum armata manu in Britanniam applicuerunt: atque invited with an-armed band into Britain landed and patriam domesticis motibus vacillantem suæ potestati the-country with-domestic disturbances tottering to-their-own power vi et violentia submiserunt. Quia vero hoc modo eam by-force and violence subjected because indeed in-this manner it adepti fuerunt, vectigal ex ea injuste ceperunt. Nihil enim obtained they-have the-tax from it unjustly they-took nothing for quod vi et violentia acquiritur, juste ab ullo possidetur which by-force and violence is-acquired justly by anyone is-possessed qui violentiam intulit. Irrationabilem ergo causam prætendit, who violence has-brought an-unreasonable therefore cause he-pretends qua nos jure sibi tributarios esse arbitratur, Quoniam by-which us by-right to-himself tributaries to-be he-thinks since autem id quod injustum est, a nobis præsumit exigere: moreover that which unjust is from us he-presumes to-demand consimili ratione petamus ab illo tributum Romæ: et qui with-similar reasoning let-us-seek from him tribute of-Rome and who fortior supervenerit, ferat quod habere exoptavit. Nam stronger will-have-come-upon let-him-carry-off what to-have he-has-longed for si quia Julius Cæsar ceterique Romani reges Britanniam olim if because Julius Caesar and-the-other Roman kings Britain once subjugaverunt, vectigal nunc debere sibi ex illa reddi subjugated a-tax now to-be-owed to-himself from it to-be-rendered decernit: similiter nunc ego censeo, quod Roma mihi he-decides likewise now I judge that Rome to-me tributum reddere debet, quia antecessores mei eam antiquitus tribute to-render ought because predecessors my it of-old obtinuerunt. Belinus etenim serenissimus ille Britonum held Belinus for most-serene that of-the-Britons rex, usus auxilio fratris sui, Brenni videlicet ducis king having-used the-help of-brother his-own Brennius namely duke Allobrogum, suspensis in medio foro viginti nobilioribus of-the-Allobroges hanged in the-middle forum twenty more-noble Romanis, urbem ceperunt, captamque multis temporibus Romans the-city they-took and-the-taken for-many times possederunt. Constantinus etiam Helenæ filius, nec non et possessed Constantine also of-Helena son nor not also Maximianus, uterque mihi cognatione propinquus, alter post Maximianus both to-me by-kinship near one after alterum diademate Britanniae insignitus, thronum Romani the-other with-the-diadem of-Britain marked the-throne of-the-Roman Imperii adeptus est. Censetisne ergo vectigal a Romanis Empire obtained has do-you-judge therefore a-tax from the-Romans petendum? De Gallia autem, sive de collateralibus insulis to-be-sought about Gaul moreover or about the-neighboring islands Oceani, non est respondendum: cum illas diffugeret defendere, of-the-Ocean not is to-be-answered since them be-shunned to-defend quando easdem potestati eorum subtrahebamus.” Hæc et when the-same from-power their we-were-taking-away these and his similia eo dicente, Hoelus rex Armoricanorum to-these similar-things him saying Hoel king of-the-Armorican Britonum, ceteros præcedere exorsus, in hæc verba respondit.

Britons the-others to-precede having-begun in these words answered

Hoelus sententiam suam de bello Romano prodit

XVII • HOEL GIVES HIS OPINION ON THE ROMAN WAR

Hoel praises Arthur's reasoning as Ciceronian and is sure of victory. He cites the Sibyl's prophecy that three Britons will rule the Roman empire; Belinus and Constantine have done so, and Arthur is the third. He promises ten thousand armed men.

Licet unusquisque vestrum totus in se reversus, omnia although each-one of-you wholly into himself having-turned all-things et de omnibus animo tractare valeret, non existimo eum and about all-things in-mind to-handle were-able not I-think him præstantius consilium posse invenire, quam istud quod modo more-excellent counsel to-be-able to-find than that which just-now discretio solertis prudentiæ tuæ recoluit. Provide etenim the-discretion of-the-skillful prudence your has-recalled foresightedly for providit nobis tua deliberatio Tulliano liquore lita. Unde has-provided for-us your deliberation with-Tullian liquor smeared whence constantis viri affectum: sapientis animi effectum: optimi of-a-constant man the-disposition of-a-wise mind the-effect of-best consilii profectum laudare indesinenter debemus. Nam si counsel the-progress to-praise unceasingly we-ought for if juxta prædictam rationem Romam adire volueris, non according-to the-aforesaid reasoning Rome to-approach you-will-wish not dubito quin triumpho potiamur: dum libertatem nostram I-doubt but-that of-the-triumph we-may-gain while liberty our tueamur: dum juste ab inimicis nostris exigamus, quod a we-defend while justly from enemies our we-demand what from nobis injuste petere incœperunt. Quicumque enim sua us unjustly to-seek they-have-begun whoever for their-own-things alteri eripere conatur, merito quæ sua sunt, per from-another to-snatch tries deservedly the-things-which his-own are through eum quem impetit, amittit. Quia ergo Romani nostra him whom he-attacks loses because therefore the-Romans our-things nobis demere affectant: sua illis procul dubio from-us to-take-away desire their-own-things from-them far from-doubt auferemus, si licentia nobis congregandi præstabitur. En we-shall-take-away if leave to-us of-engaging will-be-offered behold congressus cunctis Britonibus desiderandus: En vaticinia an-engagement by-all Britons to-be-desired behold the-prophecies Sibyllæ, quæ veris auguriis testantur, ex Britannico genere of-the-Sibyl which with-true auguries testify from the-British race tertio nasciturum, qui Romanum obtinebit imperium. De a-third-time to-be-born-one who the-Roman will-hold empire about duobus autem adimpleta sunt oracula: cum manifestum sit, two moreover fulfilled have-been the-oracles since manifest it-is præclaros (ut dixisti) principes Belinum atque Constantinum the-famous as you-said princes Belinus and Constantine imperii Romani gessisse imperia. Nunc vero te tertium of-the-empire Roman to-have-wielded the-commands now indeed you as-the-third habemus, cui tantum culmen honoris promittitur. Festina we-have to-whom so-great a-peak of-honor is-promised hurry ergo recipere, quod Deus non differt largiri: Festina therefore to-receive what God not delays to-bestow hurry subjugare, quod ultro vult subjugari: Festina nos omnes to-subjugate what willingly wishes to-be-subjugated hurry us all exaltare, qui ut exalteris, nec vulnera recipere, nec to-exalt who that you-may-be-exalted neither wounds to-receive nor vitam amittere diffugimus, ut autem hoc perficias, decem life to-lose shun that moreover this you-may-complete with-ten millibus armatorum præsentiam tuam comitabor.” thousand of-armed-men the-presence your I-shall-accompany Augusteli sententia

XVIII · AUGUSELUS' OPINION

Augustelus, king of Albany, rejoices that at last they can avenge their fathers on the Romans and Germans. He thirsts for their blood like a man kept from a spring for three days. He promises two thousand horsemen besides foot soldiers.

Augustelus etiam rex Albanīæ, ut Hoelus finem dicendi Augustelus also king of-Albany when Hoel an-end of-speaking fecerat, quod super hac re affectabat, in hunc modum had-made what about this matter he-desired in this manner manifestare perrexit. “Ex quo dominum meum ea to-make-plain proceeded from which lord my those-things quæ dixit affectare conjeci: tanta lætitia animo meo which he-said to-desire I-gathered so-great joy into-mind my illapsa est, quantam nequeo in præsentia exprimere. Nihil slipped has as-great-as I-cannot in the-present to-express nothing enim in transactis debellationibus, quas tot et tantis for in the-past warrings which on-so-many and so-great regibus intulimus, egisse videmur, dum Romani et kings we-have-brought to-have-done we-seem while the-Romans and Germani illæsi permaneant: nec in illos clades, quas Germans unharmed remain nor on them the-disasters which olim nostratibus ingesserunt, viriliter vindicemus. At nunc once on-our-countrymen they-heaped manfully we-avenge but now quoniam nobis licentia congregiendi permittitur, gaudens since to-us leave of-engaging is-permitted rejoicing admodum gaudeo, et desiderio diei quo conveniemus greatly I-rejoice and with-desire of-the-day on-which we-shall-come-together æstuans, sitio cruorem illorum, quemadmodum fontem, burning I-thirst-for the-gore of-them just-as a-spring si triduo prohiberer ne biberem. O si illam lucem if for-three-days I-were-prevented lest I-should-drink O if that light videbo, quam dulcia erunt vulnera, quæ vel recipiam vel I-shall-see how sweet will-be the-wounds which either I-shall-receive or inferam, quando dextras conferemus? Ipsa etiam mors dulcis I-shall-inflict when right-bands we-shall-join itself also death sweet erit, dum eam in vindicando patres nostros, in tuendo will-be while it in avenging fathers our in defending libertatem nostram, in exaltando regem nostrum perpressus liberty our in exalting king our suffered fuero. Aggrediamur ergo semiviros illos, et aggrediendo I-shall-have let-us-attack therefore half-men those and by-attacking perstemus, ut devictis ipsis, eorum honoribus cum læta let-us-persevere so-that defeated them of-them honors with glad potiamur victoria. Exercitum autem nostrum duobus we-may-gain-possession victory the-army moreover our by-two milibus armatorum equitum, exceptis peditibus, augebo.” thousand of-armed horsemen excepted the-footmen I-shall-increase Omnes de bello consentiunt

XIX • ALL AGREE ON WAR

The others promise their service. Britain alone gives sixty thousand armed men, the six island kingdoms 120,000 foot, and the duchies of Gaul eighty thousand. The twelve peers of Gaul bring twelve hundred more, in all 183,200 besides the uncounted foot.

Postquam etiam ceteri ad hoc, quæ dicenda erant, after also the-others to this what-things to-be-said were dixerunt; promiserunt ei singuli quod in obsequium ejus had-said promised to-him each-one what into service his debebant: ita ut præter eos quos promiserat dux Armoricæ, they-owed so that besides those whom had-promised the-duke of-Armorica ex sola insula Britannix sexaginta millia omnibus armis from the-sole island of-Britain sixty thousand with-all arms armatorum computarentur. At reges ceterarum insularum, of-armed-men were-counted but the-kings of-the-other islands quoniam non duxerant in morem equites habere: pedites since not they-had-led into custom horsemen to-have footmen quot quisque debebat, promittunt: ita ut ex sex insulis, as-many-as each-one owed they-promise so that from six islands videlicet Hibernix, Islandix, Gothlandix, Orcadum, Norwegix, namely of-Ireland of-Iceland of-Gotland of-the-Orkneys of-Norway atque Dacix, sexies viginti millia essent annumerata. Ex and of-Dacia six-times twenty thousand were counted from Gualliarum autem ducatibus, Rutenorum, Portuniensium, of-the-Gauls moreover the-dukedom of-the-Ruteni of-the-Portunians Estrusiensium, Cenomannorum, Andegavensium, Pictavensium, of-the-Etrusians of-the-Cenomani of-the-Angevins of-the-Poitevins octoginta millia. Ex duodecim autem consulatibus eorum eighty thousand from the-twelve moreover consulships of-those qui cum Guerino Carnotensi aderant, duodecies centum. Qui who with Guerin of-Chartres were-present twelve-times a-hundred who omnes simul erant, centum octoginta et tria millia et all together were a-hundred eighty and three thousand and ducenti, præter pedites, qui sub numero leviter non cadebant. two-hundred besides the-footmen who under number easily not fell Arturus bellum parat

XX · ARTHUR PREPARES FOR WAR

Arthur sends the kings home to raise their armies and meet him on the Kalends of August at the port of Barfleur, to march through the Allobroges against the Romans. He tells the emperors' envoys that he will pay no tribute. He will come to Rome to demand from them what they have demanded from him.

Rex igitur Arturus videns omnes in obsequium suum the-king therefore Arthur seeing all for service his-own unanimiter paratos, præcepit eis celeriter repatriare, et with-one-mind ready ordered them swiftly to-return-home and exercitum promissum disponere, et in Kalendis Augusti ad the-army promised to-arrange and on the-Kalends of-August to portum Barbæ fluvii festinare, ut illinc Allobrogum the-port of-the-Barbe of-the-river to-hurry so-that from-there of-the-Allobroges fines cum ipso adituri Romanis obviam venirent. the-borders with him about-to-approach to-the-Romans to-meet they-might-come Imperatoribus autem per eorundem legatos mandavit, se to-the-Emperors moreover through the-same envoys he-sent-word himself nequaquam eis redditurum tributum, nec ob illud ut by-no-means to-them about-to-render tribute nor for this that sententiæ eorum acquiesceret, Romam aditurum: immo ut to-the-sentence their he-might-assent to-Rome about-to-go nay so-that ex illis expeteret, quod ab illo iudicio suo expetere from them he-might-demand what from him by-judgment their-own to-demand decreverant. Digrediuntur ergo legati: digrediuntur reges; they-had-decided depart therefore the-envoys depart the-kings digrediuntur proceres: et quod eis præceptum fuerat, depart the-nobles and what to-them ordered had-been perficere non differunt. to-complete not they-delay

BOOK X

Lucius Tiberius orientales copias contra Britannos congregat

I · LUCIUS GATHERS THE EAST

On the Senate's order Lucius Tiberius summons the kings of the East to join him against Britain. The kings of Greece, Africa, Spain, Parthia, Media, Libya, Egypt, and Babylon come, with the dukes of Bithynia and Phrygia and others. With them come senators, Lucius Catellus, Marius Lepidus, Gaius Metellus Cotta, and more, until the host numbers 40,160.

Lucius ergo Tiberius, agnito hujus responsi edicto, jussu Lucius therefore Tiberius learned of-this answer the-edict by-the-order senatus Orientalibus edixit regibus; ut parato exercitu secum of-the-senate to-the-Eastern proclaimed kings that prepared an-army with-him ad subjugandam Britanniam venirent. Convenerunt ocyus, for subjugating Britain they-should-come came-together more-swiftly Epistrophius rex Græcorum: Mustensar rex Africanorum: Epistrophius king of-the-Greeks Mustensar king of-the-Africans Alifantinam rex Hispaniæ: Hirtacius rex Parthorum: Boccus Alifantinam king of-Spain Hirtacius king of-the-Parthians Boccus Medorum: Sertorius Libyæ: Serses rex Itureorum: Pandrasus of-the-Medes Sertorius of-Libya Xerxes king of-the-Ituraeans Pandrasus rex Ægypti: Micipsa rex Babylonîæ: Polytetes dux Bithyniæ: king of-Egypt Micipsa king of-Babylon Polytetes duke of-Bithynia Teucer dux Phrygiæ: Evander Syriæ: Aethion Bœotiæ: Teucer duke of-Phrygia Evander of-Syria Aethion of-Boeotia Hippolytus Cretæ, cum ducibus et proceribus sibi subditis.
Hippolytus of-Crete with dukes and nobles to-them subject Ex senatorio quoque ordine Lucius Catellus: Marius Lepidus: from the-senatorial also order Lucius Catellus Marius Lepidus Caius Metellus Cotta: Quintus Milvius Catulus: Quintus Gaius Metellus Cotta Quintus Milvius Catulus Quintus

Carutius: tot etiam alii quod inter totum quadraginta Carutius so-many also others that in all forty millia, et centum et sexaginta computati fuerunt.

thousand and a-hundred and sixty counted were Arturus nepoti suo Modredo Britanniam regendam committit: somnium ejus apud Hamonis portum

II · ARTHUR'S DREAM AT HAMO'S PORT

Arthur commits Britain to his nephew Mordred and Queen Guinevere and sails from Hamo's port. At midnight he dreams of a bear flying through the air and a dragon from the west that burns it and casts it to the ground. His men read it as a fight with a giant, but Arthur takes it for himself and the emperor, and they land at Barfleur to await the kings.

Dispositis itaque quibusque necessariis, incipientibus Kalendis arranged and-so all necessary-things beginning the-Kalends Augusti iter versus Britanniam arripiunt. Comperto of-August the-march towards Britain they-take discovered igitur adventu ipsorum Arturus, Modredo nepoti suo therefore the-arrival their Arthur to-Mordred nephew his-own ad conservandum Britanniam, atque Ganhumaræ reginæ for keeping Britain and to-Guinevere the-queen committens, cum exercitu suo portum Hamonis adivit, committing with army his-own the-port of-Hamo went-to ubi tempestivo ventorum afflatu mare ingressus est. Dum where with-timely of-the-winds breath the-sea entered he-has while autem innumeris navibus circumseptus, prospero cursu et moreover by-innumerable ships surrounded with-prosperous course and cum gaudio altum secaret, quasi media hora noctis with joy the-deep he-was-cutting about the-middle hour of-the-night instante, gravissimus somnus eum interceptit. Sopitus etenim pressing a-most-heavy sleep him overtook lulled for per somnum vidit ursum quendam in aere volantem, cujus through sleep he-saw a-bear certain in the-air flying whose murmure tota littora intremebant. Terribilem quoque draconem at-the-growl all the-shores trembled a-terrible also dragon ab occidente advolare, qui splendore oculorum suorum from the-west to-fly-towards which with-the-splendor of-eyes its-own patriam illuminabat. Alterum vero alteri occurrentem miram the-country lit the-one indeed the-other meeting a-wonderful pugnam committere. Sed præfatum draconem, in ursum fight to-join but the-aforesaid dragon upon the-bear sæpius irruentem, ignito anhelitu comburere, combustumque more-often rushing with-fiery breath to-burn and-the-burned in terram prosternere. Expergefactus ergo Arturus adstantibus to the-earth to-lay-low awakened therefore Arthur to-the-bystanders quod somniaverat indicavit, qui exponentes dicebant, draconem what he-had-dreamed showed who expounding said the-dragon significare ipsum: ursum vero aliquem gigantem, qui cum to-signify him the-bear indeed some giant who with ipso congredetur: pugnam autem eorum portendere bellum him should-engage the-fight moreover their to-portend the-war quod inter ipsos futurum erat: victoriam autem draconis, which between them about-to-be was the-victory moreover of-the-dragon illam quæ ipsi proveniret. At Arturus aliud conjectabat, that which to-him should-come but Arthur another-thing guessed existimans ob se et imperatorem, talem visionem thinking on-account-of himself and the-emperor such a-vision contigisse. Rubente tandem post cursum noctis aurora, to-have-happened reddening at-last after the-course of-the-night the-dawn in portum Barbæ fluvii applicuerunt. Mox tentoria into the-port of-the-Barbe of-the-river they-landed soon tents sua figentes, expectaverunt ibidem insulanos reges, cum their-own fixing they-awaited there the-island kings with provincialibus provinciarum ducibus venturis. the-provincial of-the-provinces dukes about-to-come

Arturus gigantem cædit

III · ARTHUR KILLS THE GIANT

A Spanish giant has carried Hoel's niece Helena to Saint Michael's mount. Arthur goes by night with Kay and Bedevere, and on the smaller peak Bedevere finds Helena's old nurse weeping over her grave; the girl died of terror in the giant's embrace, and he has ravished the nurse. Arthur finds the giant roasting pigs and wounds his brow, blinding him with blood; the giant forces Arthur to his knees, but Arthur drives his sword into his skull, and Hoel builds a church over the girl's tomb.

Interea nunciatur Arturo, quendam miræ magnitudinis meanwhile it-is-announced to-Arthur a-certain of-wonderful size gigantem ex partibus Hispaniarum advenisse, et Helenam giant from the-parts of-the-Spains to-have-come and Helena neptem ducis Hoeli custodibus ejusdem eripuisse, et in niece of-the-duke of-Hoel from-the-guards of-the-same to-have-snatched and onto cacumen montis, qui nunc Michaelis dicitur, cum illa the-top of-the-mountain which now of-Michael is-called with her diffugisse: milites vero patriæ insequutos, nihil adversus to-have-fled the-knights indeed of-the-country having-pursued nothing against eum profecisse: nam sive mari sive terra illum invadebant, him to-have-achieved for whether by-sea or by-land him they-attacked aut eorum naves ingentibus saxis obruebat, aut diversorum either their ships huge rocks he-overwhelmed or of-various generum telis interimebat: sed et plures capiebat quos kinds with-weapons destroyed but also many he-took whom semivivos devorabat. Nocte ergo sequenti in secunda hora, half-alive he-devoured at-night therefore following at the-second hour assumpto Caio dapifero et Beduero pincerna, clam ceteris taken Kay the-steward and Bedevere the-butler secretly from-the-others tentoria egressus, viam montem versus arripuit. Tanta the-tents having-gone-out the-way the-mountain towards he-took with-so-great namque virtute prævalendo, negligebat contra talia monstra for valor prevailing he-disdained against such monsters exercitum ducere: cum et ipsos hoc modo animaret, et an-army to-lead since both them in-this manner he-would-encourage and solus ad illa destruenda sufficeret. Ut igitur prope montem alone for them to-be-destroyed would-suffice when therefore near the-mountain venerunt, aspexerunt quendam rogum super eum ardentem: they-came they-saw a-certain pyre upon it burning alium vero super minorem qui non longe ab altero another indeed upon a-smaller which not far from the-other distabat. Dubitantes ergo, super quem eorum habitaret gigas: was-distant doubting therefore upon which of-them dwelt the-giant Beduerum dirigunt ut rei certitudinem exploret.

Bedevere they-direct so-that of-the-matter the-certainty he-may-search-out At ille inventa quadam navicula, prius ad minorem navigavit: but he found a-certain little-boat first to the-smaller sailed quem aliter nequibat adire, quoniam intra mare situs which otherwise he-could-not to-approach since within the-sea situated erat, Cuius cum cacumen incepisset ascendere, audito desuper it-was whose when the-top he-had-begun to-climb heard from-above fœmineo ululatu, primo inhorruit: quia dubitabat monstrum a-woman's wailing at-first he-shuddered because he-doubted monster illud adesse. Revocata ocyus audacia, gladium evaginavit, that to-be-present recalled more-swiftly boldness the-sword he-drew et ascenso culmine nihil aliud reperit præter rogum quem and climbed the-summit nothing else found except the-pyre which prospexerat. Inspexit quoque tumulum recenter factum, et be-had-seen-ahead he-saw also a-mound newly made and juxta eum, quandam anum flentem, et ejulantem: quæ beside it a-certain old-woman weeping and wailing who ut eum aspexit, confestim fletu impediēte, in hunc when him she-saw forthwith weeping hindering in this modum est profata: "O infelix homo, quod infortunium te manner has spoken O unhappy man what misfortune you in hunc locum subvectat! O inenarrabiles mortis pœnas into this place brings-up O unspeakable of-death the-penalties passure: miseret me tui: miseret, quia tam detestabile about-to-suffer it-pities me of-you it-pities because so detestable monstrum florem juventutis tuæ in hac nocte consumet. a-monster the-flower of-youth your on this night will-consume Aderit namque sceleratissimus ille inuisi nominis gigas will-be-present for most-wicked that of-hated name giant qui neptem ducis, quam modo hic intumulavi, et me who the-niece of-the-duke whom just-now here I-have-entombed and me altricem illius, in hunc montem advexit: qui inaudito the-nurse of-her onto this mountain carried who with-unheard-of mortis genere te absque cunctamine afficiet. Proh tristia fata! of-death kind you without hesitation will-afflict oh sad fates serenissima alumna, recepto intra tenerrimum pectus timore, the-most-serene nursling received within the-most-tender breast fear dum eam nefandus ille amplecteretur, vitam diuturniori while her abominable that-one was-embracing life with-longer luce dignam finivit. Ut igitur illam, quæ erat mihi alter light worthy ended when therefore her who was to-me another spiritus, altera vita, altera dulcedo jucunditatis, fœdo coitu spirit another life another sweetness of-delight with-foul intercourse suo deturpare nequivit, detestanda venere succensus, mihi his-own to-defile he-could-not with-detestable lust inflamed on-me invitæ (Deum et senectutem meam testor) vim et unwilling God and old-age my I-call-to-witness force and violentiam ingressit. Fuge, dilecte mi, fuge: ne si more violence he-heaped flee O-beloved my flee lest if in-manner suo mecum coiturus advenerit, te hoc modo repertum his-own with-me about-to-lie he-will-have-come you in-this manner found miserabili cæde dilaniet.” At ille, quantum humanæ with-miserable slaughter he-may-tear-apart but he as-much-as of-human naturæ possibile est, commotus, eam amicis sedavit verbis, nature possible is moved her with-friendly calmed words et promisso festinantis auxilii solamine, ad Arturum and with-the-promise of-bastening of-help comfort to Arthur reversus est, et omnia quæ invenerat indicavit. Arturus returned he-has and all-things which he-had-found showed Arthur autem casum ingemiscens puellæ, præcepit eis ut sibi soli moreover the-fate bewailing of-the-girl ordered them that to-him alone illum invadere permitterent: sed si necessitas accideret, in him to-attack they-should-permit but if necessity befall to auxilium procedentes, viriliter aggredierentur. Direxerunt inde help advancing manfully they-should-attack they-directed thence iter ad majorem montem, et equos suos armigeris the-march to the-greater mountain and horses their-own to-the-squires commiserunt, et cum Arturo præcedente ascenderunt. they-committed and with Arthur going-before climbed Aderat autem inhumanus ille ad ignem, illitus ora was-present moreover inhuman that-one at the-fire smeared the-mouth tabo semesorum porcorum, quos partim devoraverat, with-the-gore of-half-eaten pigs which partly he-had-devoured partim vero verubus infixos suppositis prunis torrebat. partly indeed on-spits fixed put-under coals he-roasted Mox ut illos, nihil tale præmeditatus, aspexit, festinavit soon when them nothing such having-foreseen he-saw he-hurried clavam suam sumere, quam duo juvenes vix a terra club his-own to-take which two youths scarcely from the-earth erigerent. Evaginavit ergo rex gladium suum, et prætenso could-raise drew therefore the-king sword his-own and held-out clypeo, quantum velocitas sinebat, properabat eum præpedire, shield as-much-as speed allowed hastened him to-binder antequam clavam cepisset. At ille non ignarus meditationis, before the-club he-had-taken but he not ignorant of-the-plan jam ceperat eam, regemque interposito clypeo tanto already had-taken it and-the-king interposed the-shield with-so-great percussit conamine, quod sonitu ictus et tota littora struck effort that with-the-sound of-the-blow both all the-shores replevit, et aures ejusdem ultra modum hebetavit. Arturus he-filled and the-ears of-the-same beyond measure he-dulled Arthur vero acri ignescens ira, erecto in frontem ipsius ense, but with-sharp blazing anger raised on the-forehead his the-sword vulnus intulit, tametsi non mortale, unde tamen sanguis in a-wound inflicted although not mortal whence yet blood into faciem et oculos ejus profluens, ejusdem excæcavit aciem. the-face and eyes his flowing of-the-same blinded the-sight Interposuerat namque clavam ictui, et frontem suam had-interposed for the-club to-the-blow and forehead his-own a letali vulnere muniverat. Excæcatus autem proficiente from a-deadly wound had-fortified blinded moreover by-flowing sanguine, acrior insurgit, et velut aper evadens per blood more-fiercely he-rises and like a-boar escaping through venabulum in venatorem, ita irruit per gladium in a-hunting-spear upon the-hunter so rushed through the-sword upon regem, et complectendo eum per medium, coegit eum the-king and by-embracing him through the-middle forced him genua humi flectere. Arturus itaque revocata virtute, knees on-the-ground to-bend Arthur and-so recalled valor ocyus elabatur: et celeriter nunc hinc nunc illinc more-swiftly slips-away and swiftly now on-this-side now on-that-side nefandum gladio diverberat: nec requievit, donec letali the-abominable-one with-the-sword strikes nor rested until a-deadly vulnere illato totum mucronem capiti impressit, qua wound inflicted the-whole blade into-the-head he-drove where cerebrum testa protegebatur. Exclamavit vero invisus ille, the-brain by-the-skull was-protected cried-out indeed bated that-one et velut quercus ventorum viribus eradicata, cum maximo and like an-oak of-the-winds by-the-force uprooted with greatest sonitu corruit. Rex illico in risum solutus, præcepit sound fell the-king on-the-spot into laughter loosened ordered Beduero amputare ei caput, et dare uni armigerorum ad Bedevere to-cut-off from-him the-head and to-give to-one of-the-squires for deferendum ad castra: ut spectaculum intuentibus fieret. carrying to the-camp so-that a-spectacle for-the-beholders it-might-be Præcepit intuentibus fieri silentium: dicebat autem se he-ordered to-the-beholders to-be-made silence he-said moreover himself non invenisse alium tantæ virtutis, postquam Rithonem not to-have-found another of-so-great valor after Ritho gigantem in Aravio monte interfecit, qui eum ad prælium the-giant on the-Aravian mountain he-killed who him to battle invitaverat. Hic namque ex barbis regum quos peremerat, had-challenged this-one for from the-beards of-the-kings whom he-had-destroyed fecerat sibi pelles, et mandaverat Arturo ut barbam had-made for-himself furs and had-sent-word to-Arthur that beard suam diligenter excoriaret, atque excoriatam sibi dirigeret: his-own diligently he-should-flay and the-flayed to-him should-direct ut quemadmodum ipse ceteris præerat regibus, ita so-that just-as he-himself over-the-other was-set kings so quoque in honorem ejus ceteris barbis ipsam superponeret. also in honor his above-the-other beards it he-would-place

Sin autem, provocabat eum ad prælium: et qui fortior if-not moreover he-challenged him to battle and who stronger supervenisset, pelles et barbam devicti tulisset. Inito had-come-out the-furs and the-beard of-the-defeated should-carry-off entered itaque certamine, triumphavit Arturus, et barbam alterius and-so the-contest triumphed Arthur and the-beard of-the-other cepit et spolium, et postea nulli fortiori isto obviaverat, took and the-spoil and afterward none stronger than-this-one he-had-met ut superius asserebat. Victoria igitur (ut prædictum est) as above he-asserted of-the-victory therefore as said-before it-has-been potitus, in secundo noctis diluculo ad tentoria sua having-gained in the-second of-the-night dawn to tents their-own cum capite remeaverunt: ad quod admirandum catervatim with the-head they-returned to which to-be-wondered-at in-crowds concurrebant, ei ascribentes laudes, qui patriam a tanta they-ran-together to-him ascribing praises who the-country from so-great ingluvie liberaverat. At Hoelus ob casum suæ neptis gluttony had-freed but Hoel on-account-of the-fate of-his-own niece tristis, præcepit ædificare basilicam super corpus ipsius in sad ordered to-build a-basilica over the-body her on monte quo jacebat, qui nomen ex tumulo puellæ nactus, the-mountain where she-lay which the-name from the-tomb of-the-girl having-got Tumba Helenæ, usque in hodiernum diem, vocatur. the-Tomb of-Helena all-the-way into today's day is-called

Initur pugna cum Romanis: Petreius Cotta et alii captivi liberantur

IV • PETREIUS COTTA CAPTURED

Arthur marches toward Autun and sends Boso, Guerin, and Gawain to order Lucius out of Gaul. When the emperor's nephew Quintilianus sneers that Britons boast more than they fight, Gawain beheads him, and the envoys fight their way back to a wood where six thousand Britons lie hidden. The senator Petreius Cotta drives them back until Boso seizes him by the neck and drags him down, and the Britons take him and many captives to Arthur, who sends them under guard to Paris.

Congregatis tandem cunctis quos expectaverat Arturus, illinc gathered at-last all whom he-had-awaited Arthur from-there Augustodunum progreditur, ubi imperatorem esse existimabat. to-Autun advances where the-emperor to-be he-thought Ut autem ad Albam fluvium venit, annunciatum est when moreover to the-Aube river he-came announced it-was ei, illum castra sua non longe posuisse, et tanto to-him him camp his-own not far to-have-placed and with-so-great incedere exercitu, quanto (ut aiebant) resistere nequiret. to-advance an-army as-great-as as they-said to-resist he-could-not Nec idcirco perterritus cœptis suis desistere voluit, nor therefore terrified from-undertakings his-own to-desist he-wished sed super ripam fluminis castra sua metatus est, unde but upon the-bank of-the-river camp his-own measured-out he-has whence posset exercitum suum libere conducere, et si opus he-might-be-able army his-own freely to-lead and if need esset, sese intra ea recipere. Duos autem consules, Bosonem were himself within it to-withdraw two moreover consuls Boso Devadoboum et Guerinum Carnotensem: Walganium etiam of-Oxford and Guerin of-Chartres Gawain also nepotem suum Lucio Tiberio direxit, ut suggererent ei nephew his-own to-Lucius Tiberius he-directed so-that they-might-suggest to-him quatenus recederet e finibus Galliæ, aut in postero die that he-should-withdraw from the-borders of-Gaul or on the-next day ad experiendum veniret, uter eorum majus jus in Galliam for testing he-should-come which of-them greater right over Gaul haberet. Juventus ergo curiæ maximo gaudio fluctuans, might-have the-youth therefore of-the-court with-greatest joy surging cœpit instimulare Walganium, ut intra castra imperatoris began to-goat Gawain that within the-camp of-the-emperor inciperet, quo occasionem haberent congregiendi cum he-should-begin by-which an-occasion they-might-have of-engaging with Romanis. Perrexerunt illi ad Lucium, et præceperunt illi a the-Romans proceeded they to Lucius and ordered him from Gallia recedere, aut in postero die ad pugnandum venire.

Gaul to-withdraw or on the-next day for fighting to-come At dum responderet eis, quod non deberet recedere: immo but while he-answered them that not he-ought to-withdraw nay ad regendum illam accedere: interfuit Caius Quintilianus for ruling it to-approach was-present Gaius Quintilianus ejusdem nepos, qui dicebat, Britones magis jactantia atque of-the-same the-nephew who said the-Britons more in-boasting and minis abundare, quam audacia et probitate valere. Iratus in-threats to-abound than in-boldness and in-prowess to-be-strong angry illico Walganus stricto ense, quo accinctus erat, on-the-spot Gawain drawn the-sword with-which girded he-was irruit in eum, et ejusdem capite amputato, ad equos rushed upon him and of-the-same the-head cut-off to the-horses cum sociis digreditur. Insequuntur Romani partim pede, with the-comrades goes-off pursue the-Romans partly on-foot partim equis, ut concivem suum in legatos omni nisu partly on-horses so-that fellow-citizen their-own on the-envoys with-all effort diffugientes vindicarent. At Guerinus Carnotensis, dum fleeing they-might-avenge but Guerin of-Chartres while quidam eorum ipsum attingere inciperet, ex improvise a-certain of-them him to-reach began from unforeseen reversus direxit lanceam suam, atque ipsum per arma et having-turned directed lance his-own and him through arms and per medium corpus perforatum humi, quantum potuit, through the-middle body pierced on-the-ground as-much-as he-could prostravit. Invidit ergo Boso Devadoboum, quoniam tantam laid-low envied therefore Boso of-Oxford because so-great probitatem fecisset Carnotensis: et retorquens equum suum, prowess had-done the-man-of-Chartres and turning-back horse his-own cui primo obviavit, ingessit illi lanceam in gulam, et whom first he-met he-drove-into him the-lance into the-throat and letaliter vulneratum coegit caballum deserere, quo eum mortally wounded forced the-horse to-desert by-which him insequabatur. Interea Marcellus Mutius maximo affectu he-pursued meanwhile Marcellus Mutius with-greatest desire volens Quintilianum vindicare, Walganio jam imminebat a wishing Quintilianus to-avenge on-Gawain already pressed from tergo, atque cœperat retinere: cum ipse reversus continuo the-back and had-begun to-hold-back when he-himself having-turned at-once galeam cum ipso capite usque ad pectus gladio quem the-helmet with the-head itself all-the-way to the-chest with-the-sword which tenebat abscidit. Præcepit etiam ei Walganus, quem intra he-held cut-off he-ordered also him Gawain whom within castra trucidaverat, in infernum renunciare, Britones minis the-camp he-had-slaughtered in hell to-report the-Britons in-threats et jactantia hoc modo abundare. Socii deinde resociatis, and in-boasting in-this manner to-abound the-comrades then regathered hortatur ut pari impetu reversi, quisque suum he-urges that with-equal attack having-turned each-one his-own-man prosternere laboraret. Acquiescentes ergo ei, revertuntur to-lay-low should-labor assenting therefore to-him they-turn-back et quisque unum prostrernit. At Romani usque insequentes, and each-one one lays-low but the-Romans continually pursuing quandoque lanceis, quandoque gladiis percutiebant eos: sed sometimes with-lances sometimes with-swords struck them but nec retinere nec prosternere valebant. Dum autem prope neither to-hold nor to-lay-low were-able while moreover near quandam silvam (ut dictum est) insequerentur: confestim a-certain wood as said it-has-been they-pursued forthwith congregiuntur ex illa circiter sex milia Britonum, qui engage from it about six thousand of-Britons who fuga consulum comperta, intra eam delituerant, ut eis the-flight of-the-consuls discovered within it had-lain-bid so-that to-them auxilium subvectarent. Egressi autem suffixere calcaria help they-might-bring having-gone-out moreover they-put spurs equis suis: et aera clamore complentes, et clypeos to-horses their-own and the-air with-shouting filling and shields pectoribus prætendentes, Romanos ex improvise invadunt: et to-the-breasts holding-out the-Romans from unforeseen they-attack and confestim in fugam propellunt. Sed ut unanimiter insequentes, forthwith into flight drive but as with-one-mind pursuing quosdam eorum ab equis suis cum lanceis sejungunt: some of-them from horses their-own with lances they-separate quosdam autem retinent: quosdam interficiunt. Quod cum some moreover they-hold some they-kill which when Petreio senatori nunciatum esset, decem milibus comitatus, to-Petreius the-senator announced had-been by-ten thousand accompanied subvenire sociis suis festinavit: coegitque Britones ad to-come-to-help comrades his-own he-burried and-forced the-Britons to silvam ex qua egressi fuerant recurrere, nec sine detrimento the-wood from which gone-out they-had to-run-back nor without loss suorum, diffugiendo etenim Britones revertebantur instructi of-their-own in-fleeing for the-Britons turned-back taught locis, atque insequentibus stragem ingerebant maximam. by-the-places and on-the-pursuing slaughter heaped greatest Quibus hoc modo cedentibus, Hiderus cum quinque milibus whom in-this manner yielding Hiderus with five thousand accelerabat, ut eisdem subveniret. Resistunt ergo hastened so-that to-the-same he-might-come-to-help resist therefore ipsi, et quibus terga paulo ante dederant, nunc pectora they and to-whom their-backs a-little before they-had-given now breasts opposcentes, validos ictus viriliter inferre elaborant. Resistunt opposing strong blows manfully to-deal they-labor resist etiam Romani et quandoque eos prosternunt: quandoque vero also the-Romans and sometimes them lay-low sometimes indeed ab illis prosternuntur. At Britones toto affectu desiderabant by them are-laid-low but the-Britons with-whole desire longed-for militiam: sed nec multum curabant in quem eventum knighthood but nor much cared into what outcome inciderent, dum eam incipiebant. Romani autem sapientius they-might-fall while it they-were-beginning the-Romans moreover more-wisely agebant, quos Petreius Cotta, more boni ducis, nunc ad acted whom Petreius Cotta in-the-manner of-a-good leader now for invadendum, nunc ad diffugiendum, sapienter edocebat: et ita attacking now for retreating wisely taught and so maximum damnum ceteris impendebat. Quod cum Bosoni greatest loss on-the-others he-inflicted which when to-Boso compertum esset, plures eorum quos audaciores noverat, discovered had-been many of-them whom bolder he-knew sejunxit a ceteris, et eos hoc modo affatus est: “Quoniam he-separated from the-others and them in-this manner addressed he-has since nesciente Arturo istud prælium incepimus, cavendum nobis not-knowing Artbur this battle we-have-begun to-be-taken-care-of by-us est, ne in pejorem partem incepti nostri decidamus. Nam it-is lest into the-worse part of-undertaking our we-fall for si in illam deciderimus, et maximum damnum militum if into it we-shall-have-fallen both greatest loss of-knights nostrorum incurremus, et regem nostrum ad execrandum nos our we-shall-incur and the-king our to cursing us commovebimus. Resumite audaciam: et sequimini me per we-shall-move resume boldness and follow me through catervas Romanorum: ut si fortuna faverit, Petreium the-bands of-the-Romans so-that if fortune will-have-favored Petreius interficiamus sive capiamus.” Subdixerunt itaque calcaria equis we-may-kill or we-may-take they-put and-so spurs to-horses suis, et cuneos hostium pari impetu penetrans, ad their-own and the-wedges of-the-enemies with-equal attack piercing to locum quo Petreius socios suos commonebat, venerunt. In the-place where Petreius comrades his-own was-exhorting came upon quem ocys Boso irruens, eundem per collum amplectitur, whom more-swiftly Boso rushing the-same by the-neck embraces et sicut præmeditatus fuerat, cum illo in terram corruit. and as planned-beforehand he-had with him to the-earth fell Concurrent ergo Romani, ut eum hostibus eripiant: run-together therefore the-Romans that him from-the-enemies they-may-snatch concurrerunt autem Britones, ut Bosoni auxilientur. Fit ran-together moreover the-Britons that to-Boso they-might-help is-made itaque inter eos maxima cædes: fit clamor: fit turbatio: and-so between them greatest slaughter is-made a-cry is-made confusion dum hi ducem suum liberare, illi eum retinere conantur, while these leader their-own to-free those him to-hold try Invicem ergo vulnerabant et vulnerabantur: prosternebant et in-turn therefore they-wounded and were-wounded laid-low and prosternebantur. Illic itaque videri poterat quis hasta, quis were-laid-low there and-so to-be-seen it-could who with-spear who gladio, quis telo prævaleret. Denique Britones densata with-sword who with-weapon prevailed finally the-Britons with-thickened caterva incidentes, impetumque Romanorum ferentes, sese band falling-on and-the-attack of-the-Romans bearing themselves intra fortitudinem prælii sui cum Petreio recipiunt. Sed within the-strength of-battle their-own with Petreius withdraw but confestim impetum fecerunt in illos, jam rectore suo forthwith an-attack they-made upon them now of-ruler their-own orbatos, jam in majori parte debilitatos, jam etiam dilapsos, bereft now in the-greater part weakened now also scattered atque terga eisdem ostendentes. Incumbentes igitur, and their-backs to-the-same showing pressing-on therefore ipsos a tergo cædunt: cæsos prosternunt: prostratos them from the-back they-cut-down the-cut-down they-lay-low the-laid-low dispoliant: dispoliatos prætereunt, ut ceteros insequantur. Sed they-despoil the-despoiled they-pass so-that the-others they-may-pursue but et plures capiunt, quos regi præsentare affectant. Postremo also many they-take whom to-the-king to-present they-desire finally postquam satis periculi ipsis ingesserunt, remeaverunt cum after enough of-danger on-them they-had-heaped they-returned with spoliis et captivis ad castra, et indicantes quod sibi spoils and captives to the-camp and showing what to-them contigerat, Petreium Cottam, et ceteros captivos Arturo had-happened Petreius Cotta and the-other captives to-Arthur cum victoriæ lætitia obtulerunt. Quibus ille congratulans, with of-victory joy offered to-whom he congratulating et honores, et honorum augmentationes promisit: quoniam both honors and of-honors increases promised since eo absente tantam probitatem egerant. Captivos autem in him absent so-great prowess they-had-done the-captives moreover into carcerem trudere volens, ad se vocavit quosdam qui eos in prison to-thrust wishing to himself he-called certain-men who them on crastinum Parisios ducerent, et custodibus oppidi servandos the-morrow to-Paris should-lead and to-the-guards of-the-town to-be-kept traderent, donec ex illis aliud fieri præcepisset.

should-hand-over until about them other to-be-done he-should-have-ordered Jussit etiam Cadorem ducem, Beduerumque pincernam, nec he-ordered also Cador the-duke and-Bedevere the-butler nor non et duos consules Borellum et Richerium cum famulis not also two consuls Borel and Richer with servants suis ipsos conducere, donec venirent eo, quo minime their-own them to-escort until they-came thither where least disturbationem Romanorum timuissent.

disturbance of-the-Romans they-would-have-feared Romani iterum Britannos adorti fugantur

V · THE ROMANS AMBUSH THE ESCORT

Fifteen thousand Romans under Vulteius Catellus, Quintus Carutius, and the kings of Syria and Libya lie in ambush for the escort. They fall on the Britons by surprise, and the escort is near to losing the captives when Guitard, duke of the Poitevins, arrives with three thousand men. Borel of Le Mans and four other nobles fall, but Vulteius and Evander are killed, and the Britons send the captives on to Paris.

At Romani forte comperientes istum apparatus, imperatore but the-Romans by-chance learning this preparation the-emperor jubente, elegerunt quindecim millia suorum, qui nocte illa commanding chose fifteen thousand of-their-own who on-night that iter eorum præcederent: atque cum ipsis congressuri suorum the-way of-them should-go-before and with them about-to-engage of-their-own liberationi instarent. Ipsis quoque præfecerunt Vulteium to-the-release should-press to-them also they-set-over Vulteius Catellum et Quintum Carutium senatores: Evandrum etiam Catellus and Quintus Carutius senators Evander also regem Syriæ, et Sertorium Libyæ regem: qui nocte illa cum king of-Syria and Sertorius of-Libya king who on-night that with prædictis militibus jussum iter arripuerunt, et latibulis the-aforesaid knights the-ordered way took-up and for-hiding-places convenientem locum adepti delituerunt, per quem ipsos fitting a-place having-gained lay-hidden through which them ituros arbitrabantur. Mane autem facto Britones viam about-to-go they-thought the-morning moreover made the-Britons the-road ineunt cum captivis: et jam prope locum incedunt, nescii enter with the-captives and now near the-place advance unaware quos dolos versuti hostes instituerant. Cum vero penetrare what tricks the-crafty enemies had-set-up when indeed to-pass-through inceperant: egressi ex improvise Romani, ipsos nihil tale they-had-begun having-come-out from unforeseen the-Romans them nothing such præmeditatos occupaverunt, et penetraverunt. At illi quamvis having-foreseen seized and broke-through but they although tam ex improvise occupati fuissent: tandem tamen resociati, so from unforeseen seized they-had-been at-last yet rallied viriliter resistunt, et quosdam circa captivos statuunt: quosdam manfully resist and some around the-captives they-station some autem per catervas distribuunt, qui cum hostibus congrediantur. moreover by companies they-distribute who with the-enemies should-engage Agmini autem illi quod ad conservandos statuerunt captivos, to-the-column moreover that which for to-be-kept they-appointed the-captives Richerium et Beduerum præferunt: Cador vero dux Cornubiæ Richer and Bedevere they-set-over Cador but duke of-Cornwall atque Borellus ceteris præponuntur. Sed Romani omnes sine and Borel to-the-rest are-put-in-charge but the-Romans all without ordine eruperant, nec curabant suos per turmas disponere: order had-burst-out nor cared their-own by troops to-dispose immo omni nisu præstantes, Britonibus stragem dabant, dum rather with-all effort pressing on-the-Britons slaughter they-dealt while turmas disponere, dum semet ipsos defendere elaborarent. troops to-dispose while them themselves to-defend they-labored Unde ultra modum debilitati, illos quos conducebant turpiter whence beyond measure weakened those whom they-were-escorting shamefully amisissent, nisi fortuna optatum auxilium eis accelerasset. they-would-have-lost unless fortune the-wished-for help to-them had-hastened Guitardus etenim dux Pictavensium comperto dolo prædicto, Guitard for duke of-the-Poitevins learned the-trick aforesaid cum tribus milibus advenerat, cujus freti auxilio tandem with three thousand had-arrived whose relying on-the-help at-last prævaluerunt: et vicem prædictæ stragis impudentibus they-prevailed and the-requital of-the-aforesaid slaughter to-the-shameless grassatoribus reddidere. Attamen multos suorum in primo raiders paid-back yet many of-their-own in the-first congressu amiserunt. Amiserunt etenim inclytum illum encounter they-lost they-lost for famous that Cenomanorum consulem Borellum: qui dum cum Evandro of-the-Cenomani consul Borel who while with Evander rege Syriæ congredereetur, lancea ipsius intra gulam infixam king of-Syria he-was-engaging by-the-lance of-him within the-throat fixed vitam cum sanguine eructavit. Amiserunt quoque quatuor life with blood belched-out they-lost also four proceres, Hirelgam Deperirum, Mauricium Cadorcensem, nobles Hirelgas of-Periron Maurice of-Cabors Aliduc de Tintagol, et filium Hider: quibus audaciores non Aliduc of Tintagel and the-son of-Hider than-whom bolder not facile reperiri poterant, nec tamen audaciæ suæ desistentes easily to-be-found could nor yet from-boldness their-own desisting sibi desperaverunt: sed omni nisu instantes, et captivos of-themselves despaired but with-all effort pressing and the-captives custodire, et inimicos prosternere intendebant. Romani tandem to-guard and the-enemies to-lay-low they-strove the-Romans at-last congressum eorum ferre non valentes, ocyus relinquere the-onset of-them to-bear not being-able more-swiftly to-leave campum, et castra sua petere cœperunt. At Britones the-field and camp their-own to-seek began but the-Britons usque insequentes stragem inferunt, complures capiunt, nec continually pursuing slaughter inflict very-many they-take nor requieverunt, donec Vultei Catello et Evandro rege Syriæ rested until Vultei Catellus and Evander king of-Syria peremptis, ceteros penitus dissipaverunt. Habita igitur victoria, slain the-rest utterly they-scattered had therefore the-victory captivos quos ducebant, miserunt Parisios: atque cum illis the-captives whom they-were-leading they-sent to-Paris and with those quos recenter ceperant, ad regem suum repedantes, spem whom recently they-had-taken to the-king their-own returning hope summæ victoriæ promittebant, cum admodum pauci de of-the-highest victory they-promised since very few over tot supervenientibus hostibus triumphum habuissent. so-many coming-upon enemies triumph they-had-had Lucius Tiberius Lengrias adit: Arturus vallem Suesianam ingreditur

VI · THE VALLEY OF SAUSSY

Lucius, wavering between battle and waiting for the emperor Leo, withdraws by night to Langres. Arthur goes ahead of him into the valley of Saussy and sets a legion under Morvid of Gloucester apart as a reserve. He draws up his army in companies of foot and horse, posts the kings and dukes over each, and stands with his own legion under the golden dragon.

Lucius autem Tiberius, tales casus moleste ferens, animum Lucius moreover Tiberius such misfortunes grievously bearing mind suum diversis cruciatibus vexatum, nunc huc, nunc illuc his-own by-various torments troubled now hither now thither revolvit, hæsitando an cœpta prælia cum Arturo committat, turns-over by-hesitating whether the-begun battles with Arthur he-should-join an intra Augustodunum receptus, auxilium Leonis imperatoris or within Autun received the-help of-Leo the-emperor expectet. Acquiescens tandem formidini nocte sequenti he-should-await yielding at-last to-fear on-night the-following prædictam civitatem aditurus Lengrias cum exercitibus suis the-aforesaid city about-to-approach Langres with armies his-own ingreditur. Quod ut Arturo compertum est, affectans iter he-enters which when to-Arthur learned was desiring the-way ejus præcedere, eadem nocte, relicta a læva civitate, quandam of-him to-go-before on-the-same night left on the-left the-city a-certain vallem, quam Lucius transgressurus erat, ingreditur, quæ Suesia valley which Lucius about-to-cross was he-enters which Saussy vocabatur. Commilitones ergo suos per catervas disponere was-called the-fellow-soldiers therefore his-own by companies to-dispose volens, legionem unam cui præfecerat Morvid consulem wishing legion one over-which he-had-set Morvid consul Claudiocestriæ jussit adesse, ut si opus accidisset, of-Gloucestre he-ordered to-be-present so-that if need should-have-befallen sciret quo posset sese recipere, et resociatis turmis iterum he-might-know where he-could himself to-withdraw and rallied the-troops again hostibus prælia ingerere. Ceteros etiam per catervas septenas on-the-enemies battles to-press the-rest also by companies seven distribuens, et in unaquaque caterva quinquies mille, quingentos distributing and in each company five-times thousand five-hundred et quinquaginta quinque viros omnibus armis instructos and fifty five men with-all arms equipped collocavit. Pars quoque statutarum turmarum disponitur, he-placed a-part also of-the-appointed troops is-disposed equestris: pars autem altera pedestris: daturque præceptum inter mounted a-part but other on-foot and-is-given an-order among eos, ut dum pedestris turma ad invadendum intendat: equestris them that while the-foot troop to attacking should-aim the-mounted illico ab obliquo superveniens, stricto agmine dissipare on-the-spot from the-flank coming-upon in-close column to-scatter hostes nitatur. Erant autem pedestres catervæ, Britannico the-enemies should-strive were moreover the-foot companies in-British more, cum dextro et sinistro cornu in quadrum statutæ: manner with right and left wing in a-square set quarum uni Auguselus rex Albanix, et Cadur dux Cornubiæ, of-which over-one Auguselus king of-Albany and Cadur duke of-Cornwall unus in dextro cornu, et alter in sinistro præficiuntur: one on the-right wing and the-other on the-left are-set-over alii vero, duo insignes consules, Guerinus videlicet over-another but two distinguished consuls Guerin namely Carnotensis, et Boso de Richiden, quæ lingua Saxonum of-Chartres and Boso of Richiden which in-the-tongue of-the-Saxons Oxineford nuncupatur: tertiæ vero turmæ Aschil rex Oxford is-called over-the-third but troop Aschil king Dacorum, atque Lot rex Norwegensium: quartæ Hoelus dux of-the-Danes and Lot king of-the-Norwegians over-the-fourth Hoel duke Armoricanorum atque Walguainus nepos regis. Post has autem of-the-Armoricans and Gawain nephew of-the-king after these moreover quatuor, fuerunt aliæ quatuor a dorso statutæ, quarum uni four were other four at the-back set of-which over-one præponuntur Caius dapifer, et Beduerus pincerna: alii are-set-over Kay the-steward and Bedevere the-butler over-another autem præficiuntur Holdinus dux Rutenorum, et Guitardus moreover are-set-over Holdin duke of-the-Ruteni and Guitard dux Pictavensium: tertiæ Vigenis de Legecestria, et Jonathal duke of-the-Poitevins over-the-third Vigenis of Leicester and Jonathal Dorecestrensis, atque Cursalem de Caicestria: quartæ vero of-Dorchester and Cursalem of Kaicester over-the-fourth but Urbgennius de Badone. Ipse quoque elegit post hos sibi Urbgennius of Bath he-himself also chose behind these for-himself et legioni uni quam sibi adesse affectaverat, locum and for-the-legion one which to-himself to-be-present he-had-wished a-place quendam, quo aureum draconem infixit, quem pro vexillo certain in-which the-golden dragon he-planted which for standard habebat, quo vulnerati et fatigati, si necessitas compelleret, he-had whither the-wounded and the-wearied if necessity should-compel quasi ad castra diffugerent. Aderant autem in legione illa as-if to the-camp might-flee were-present moreover in legion that quam secum habebat, sex milia, sexcenti sexaginta sex. which with-him he-had six thousand six-hundred sixty six

Arturus milites hortatur

VII · ARTHUR EXHORTS HIS KNIGHTS

Arthur reminds his men that they made Britain mistress of thirty kingdoms and have lost none of their valor in five years of peace. The Romans who think them sluggish have already fled from them once and will be caught in this valley like cattle. If they win, they will take Rome, and its gold, silver, palaces, and cities will be theirs, and all shout that they will die before they leave the field.

Dispositis itaque cunctis, commilitones suos in hæc verba disposed and-so all fellow-soldiers his-own in these words affatur: “Domestici mei, qui Britanniam terdenorum regnorum he-addresses O-household-men my who Britain of-thirty kingdoms fecistis dominam, vestræ congratulor probitati, quam nullatenus made mistress on-your I-congratulate prowess which in-no-way deficere, immo magis vigere considero: licet quinque annis to-fail rather more to-flourish I-consider although for-five years inexercitati, oblectamentis ocii potius, quam usui unexercised to-the-delights of-leisure rather than to-the-practice militiæ dediti fuistis hactenus: nequaquam tamen ab of-knighthood given you-have-been hitherto by-no-means yet from innata bonitate degeneravistis: sed in ipsa perseverantes, inborn goodness you-have-degenerated but in it persevering Romanos propulistis in fugam: qui instimulante superbia the-Romans you-drove into flight who goading the-pride suorum, libertatem vobis demere affectaverunt: qui ampliori of-their-own liberty from-you to-take-away sought who in-greater numero incedentes, ingerere prælia cœperunt: qui congressui number advancing to-press battles began who to-the-onset vestro resistere non valentes, sese turpiter intra civitatem your to-resist not being-able themselves shamefully within city istam receperunt, ex qua ad præsens egressuris, that withdrew from which at present to-them-about-to-come-out et per istam vallem, Augustodunum petituris, obviam and through that valley Autun about-to-seek in-the-way poteritis adesse: et nihil tale præmeditatos, veluti pecudes you-will-be-able to-be-present and nothing such having-foreseen like cattle occupare. Sane Orientalium gentium segnitiam in vobis to-seize truly of-the-Eastern peoples the-sluggishness in you esse existimabant: dum patriam vestram facere tributariam, to-be they-supposed when the-country your to-make tributary et vosmetipsos subjugare affectarent. Numquid noverunt and yourselves to-subjugate they-sought do-not they-know quæ bella Dacis atque Norwegensibus, Gallorumque what wars on-the-Danes and the-Norwegians and-of-the-Gauls ducibus intulistis? quos meæ subdidistis potestati, et on-the-dukes you-brought whom to-my you-subjected power and ab eorum pudendo dominio liberavistis: Qui igitur in from their shameful dominion you-freed who therefore in graviori decertatione valuimus: in hæc leviori sine dubio a-heavier contest we-were-strong in this lighter without doubt prævalebimus, si pari affectu semiviros illos elaboraverimus we-shall-prevail if with-equal zeal half-men those we-shall-have-labored opprimere. Quantos honores quisque vestrum possidebit, si to-crush how-great honors each of-you will-possess if voluntati meæ atque præceptis meis, ut fideles commilitones, to-will my and commands my as faithful fellow-soldiers acquieveritis? Subjugatis etenim ipsis, continuo Romam you-will-have-assented subjugated for them at-once Rome petemus, petitam capiemus, captam possidebimus: et sic we-shall-seek sought we-shall-take taken we-shall-possess and so aurum, argentum, palatia, turre, oppida, civitates, et ceteras gold silver palaces towers towns cities and the-other victorum divitias habebitis. Adhuc autem ipso dicente talia, of-the-victors riches you-will-have still moreover him saying such-things omnes uno clamore assentiunt: parati mortem prius recipere, all with-one shout assent ready death sooner to-receive quam vivente ipso campum diffugiendo relinquere. than living him the-field by-fleeing to-leave

Eodem modo Lucius Tiberius apud milites concionatur

VIII • LUCIUS ADDRESSES HIS SOLDIERS

Lucius learns of the ambush and resolves to fight rather than flee. He tells his leaders that their ancestors fought as if God had not foreseen their deaths and so conquered the world, and he urges them to stand firm through the first onset. The Romans draw up twelve wedges under Roman senators and the kings of the East, and Lucius sets the golden eagle in the middle as a rallying point.

At Lucius Tiberius comperiens insidias, quæ ipsi parabantur, but Lucius Tiberius learning the-ambush which for-him were-being-prepared noluit ut affectaverat diffugere: sed revocata audacia, was-unwilling as he-had-wished to-flee but recalled boldness ipsos in eadem valle aditurus, duces suos convocavit, them in the-same valley about-to-approach leaders his-own called-together atque his verbis allocutus est: “Patres venerandi, quorum and with-these words addressed has O-fathers venerable whose imperio et orientalia et occidentalia regna subijci to-the-command both the-eastern and the-western kingdoms to-be-subjected debuerant, majorum vestrorum memores estote: qui ut were-bound of-the-ancestors your mindful be who that adversarios Reipublicæ superarent, non abhorrescebant the-adversaries of-the-Republic they-might-overcome not shrank effundere sanguinem suum, sed exemplum probitatis et to-pour-out blood their-own but an-example of-prowess and militiæ posteris suis relinquentes, ita decertabant, ac si of-knighthood to-posterity their-own leaving so they-fought as if in prælio Deus non providisset eos morituros. Triumphabant in battle God not had-foreseen them about-to-die they-triumphed ergo sæpius, et triumphando mortem evadebant, quia therefore very-often and by-triumphing death they-escaped because nulli alia erant proventura, quam quæ ex providentia to-no-one other-things were about-to-come-forth than what from the-providence Dei condescendebant. Auebatur itaque Respublica: auebatur of-God came-down was-increased and-so the-Republic was-increased eorundem probitas: et quod honestatis, quod honoris, quod of-the-same the-prowess and what of-honesty what of-honor what largitatis in generosis esse solebat, in eis diutius vicens, of-generosity in the-noble to-be was-wont in them longer flourishing ipsos et ipsorum posteros in dominium totius orbis them and of-them the-descendants into dominion of-the-whole world promovebat. Id igitur in vobis excitare desiderans, hortor vos promoted that therefore in you to-arouse desiring I-exhort you ut pristinam bonitatem revocetis, atque in eadem perstantes, that the-former goodness you-recall and in the-same persisting inimicos nostros in valle qua nobis insidiantur, petentes, enemies our in the-valley in-which for-us they-lie-in-wait seeking quod nostrum est ab illis exigere contendatis. Ne existimetis what ours is from them to-exact you-strive do-not think me idcirco intra civitatem hanc receptum esse, ut me for-this-reason within city this withdrawn to-have-been that vel eos vel eorum congressum abhorruerim: immo arbitrans either them or their onset I-sbrank-from rather judging quod nos stulte prosequerentur, et ut prosequentibus ex that us foolishly they-would-pursue and that to-the-pursuers from improvise obviaremus, atque ipsos segregatim irruentes magna unforeseen we-might-meet and them separately rushing-in with-great strage infestaremus. Nunc autem quoniam aliter quam rati slaughter we-might-harass now moreover since otherwise than reckoned eramus fecerunt, et nos aliter faciamus. Petamus etenim we-had they-have-done also we otherwise let-us-do let-us-seek for illos, et audacter invadamus: vel si convaluerint, unanimiter them and boldly let-us-attack or if they-will-have-prevailed with-one-mind resistamus, et primum impetum toleremus, et sic proculdubio let-us-resist and the-first onset let-us-bear and so without-doubt triumphabimus. In pluribus etenim decertationibus, qui in we-shall-triumph in very-many for contests he-who in primo congressu perstare potuit, cum victoria sæpissime the-first encounter to-stand-firm could with victory most-often abivit. Ut his itaque et pluribus aliis finem dicendi went-away when to-these and-so and many others an-end of-speaking fecit, omnes uno assensu faventes, socias quoque manus he-made all with-one assent favoring allied also hands jurejurando promittentes, ad armandum sese festinant. by-oath promising to arming themselves hasten Armati tandem Lengrias egrediuntur, atque prædictam vallem armed at-last Langres they-go-out-of and the-aforesaid valley adierunt, ubi Arturus catervas suas statuerat. Porro et illi approached where Arthur companies his-own had-set further also they duodecim cuneata agmina, atque omnia pedestria fecerunt, twelve wedge-shaped columns and all on-foot made quæ Romano more ad modum cunei ordinata, sex millia which in-Roman manner to the-manner of-a-wedge ordered six thousand militum cum sexcentis sexaginta sex, exercitum suum of-knights with six-hundred sixty six army their-own disponentes continebant. Sed et unicuique suos ductores disposing contained but also to-each its-own leaders dederunt: ut monitu eorum et invaderent et ceteris they-gave that by-the-warning of-them both they-might-attack and to-the-others irruentibus resisterent. Uni etenim præfecerunt Lucium rushing-in might-resist over-one for they-set Lucius Catellum senatorem, et Alifantinam regem Hispaniæ. Alii Catellus the-senator and Alifantinam king of-Spain over-another vero Hirtacium regem Parthorum, et Marium Lepidum but Hirtacius king of-the-Parthians and Marius Lepidus senatorem: tertio Boccum regem Medorum, et Caium the-senator over-the-third Boccus king of-the-Medes and Gaius Metellum senatorem: quarto Sertorium regem Libyæ, Metellus the-senator over-the-fourth Sertorius king of-Libya et Quintum Milvium senatorem. Hæc quatuor agmina in and Quintus Milvius the-senator these four columns in prima acie statuta fuerunt. Post ipsa vero alia quatuor a the-first line set were behind them indeed other four at dorso, quorum uni Sersem regem Itureorum præfecerunt: the-back of-which over-one Xerxes king of-the-Ituraeans they-set alii vero Pandrasum regem Ægypti: tertio Polytetem over-another but Pandrasus king of-Egypt over-the-third Polytetes ducem Bithyniæ: quarto Teucrum ducem Phrygiæ. Post duke of-Bithynia over-the-fourth Teucer duke of-Phrygia after hæc quoque alia quatuor agmina, et cuidam illorum these also other four columns and to-a-certain-one of-them dederunt Quintum Carucium senatorem: alii autem they-gave Quintus Carutius the-senator to-another moreover Lælium Hostiensem: tertio Sulpitium Subuculum: quarto Laelius of-Ostia to-the-third Sulpicius Subuculus to-the-fourth Mauricium Silvanam. Ipse autem inter eos nunc hac Mauricius Silvanus he-himself moreover among them now this-way nunc illac incedebat, suggerendo et docendo, qualiter now that-way went-about by-prompting and by-teaching how sese habent. In medio etiam auream aquilam, quam themselves they-should-hold in the-middle also the-golden eagle which pro vexillo duxerat, iussit firmiter poni: et quoscunque for standard he-had-led he-ordered firmly to-be-placed and whomever casus segregasset, submonuit ut ad eam reverti conarentur. chance should-have-separated he-warned that to it to-return they-should-try

Pugna inter Britannos et Romanos commissa

IX · THE BATTLE WITH THE ROMANS

The armies clash and the Britons suffer first: Bedevere is killed by Boccus, king of the Medes, and Kay is mortally wounded. Bedevere's nephew Hirelgas charges with three hundred men, kills Boccus, and tears his body to pieces beside his uncle's. Kings and consuls fall on both sides until Hoel and Gawain, blazing like fire, drive the Romans back to the emperor's own column.

Postquam autem in adversa parte, hinc Britones, illinc after moreover on opposite side on-this-side the-Britons on-that-side Romani erectis steterunt telis: confestim (audito classicorum the-Romans raised stood weapons forthwith heard of-the-trumpets sonitu) agmen illud cui rex Hispaniæ et Lucius Catellus the-sound column that over-which the-king of-Spain and Lucius Catellus præerant, in catervam illam quam rex Scotiæ et dux were-in-command upon company that which the-king of-Scotland and the-duke Cornubiæ ducebant, audacter irruit: sed illam stricte irruentem of-Cornwall led boldly rushed but it closely rushing-in nequaquam disgregare potuit. Cui itaque sævissime invadenti by-no-means to-break-apart could which and-so most-fiercely attacking occurrit caterva quam Guerinus et Boso regebant, et dum ran-to-meet the-company which Guerin and Boso ruled and while alia, ut prædictum est, resisteret, subito cursu equorum, the-other as said-before it-has-been resisted with-sudden charge of-horses impetum in eandem fecit: et illa penetrata, obviavit agmini, an-onset upon the-same made and that pierced met the-column quod rex Parthorum ducebat contra turmam Aschillii regis which the-king of-the-Parthians led against the-troop of-Aschil king Dacorum. Nec mora, concurrunt hinc et inde catervæ, of-the-Danes nor delay they-clash on-this-side and on-that the-companies et mutuo sese penetrantes, maximam pugnam lacesunt. and mutually each-other piercing a-very-great fight provoke Fit itaque miseranda cædes inter eos cum supremo there-is-made and-so pitiable slaughter among them with the-utmost clamore, et terram vertice et calcaneis pulsantes, vitam in clamor and the-earth with-crown and with-heels beating life on utraque parte cum sanguine eructant. Sed primum damnum either side with blood they-belch-out but the-first loss Britonibus illatum est: quia Beduerus pincerna peremptus on-the-Britons inflicted was because Bedevere the-butler slain fuit: Caius dapifer letaliter vulneratus. Nam cum Beduerus was Kay the-steward mortally wounded for when Bedevere Bocco Medorum regi obviaret, lancea ejusdem confossus Boccus of-the-Medes the-king met by-the-lance of-the-same pierced inter hostiles catervas peremptus corruit. Caius autem dapifer, among the-hostile companies slain fell Kay moreover the-steward dum ipsum vindicare conaretur, intra Medorum turmas while him to-avenge he-tried within of-the-Medes the-troops circundatus, mortiferum vulnus recepit: qui tamen more surrounded a-deadly wound received who yet in-the-manner boni militis, cum ala quam ducebat viam aperiens, of-a-good knight with the-wing which he-led a-way opening cæsis et dissipatis Medis, sese intra suos, integra caterva slain and scattered the-Medes himself among his-own with-whole company recepisset, nisi obviam venisset agmini regis Libyæ, would-have-withdrawn unless in-the-way he-had-come to-the-column of-the-king of-Libya cujus irruptio illos quos ducebat omnes disgregavit: utcunque whose onrush those whom he-led all broke-apart somehow tamen cum paucis retrocedens, ad aureum diffugit Draconem yet with a-few retreating to the-golden he-fled Dragon cum corpore Bedueri. O quanta lamenta Neustriensium, with the-body of-Bedeve O how-great the-laments of-the-Neustrians dum corpus sui ducis tot vulneribus dilaniatum when the-body of-their-own duke by-so-many wounds torn aspicerent! O quantos Andegavensium planctus, dum Caii they-beheld O how-great of-the-Angevins the-wailings when of-Kay consulis sui vulnera pluribus modis tractarent! Sed non consul their-own the-wounds in-many ways they-handled but not opus erat querela, quia undique sanguinolentæ acies mutuo need was for-complaint because on-every-side the-bloody lines mutually irruentes, non permittebant eis spatium prædicti gemitus: ushing-in not permitted to-them room of-the-aforesaid groaning quin ipsos ad defendendum sese coegissent. Hirelgas but-that them to defending themselves they-had-compelled Hirelgas ergo nepos Bedueri ultra modum ob mortem ipsius therefore nephew of-Bedeve beyond measure on-account-of the-death of-him commotus, trecentos suorum associavit sibi, et velut aper moved three-hundred of-his-own joined to-himself and like a-boar intra turmam canum, sic per hostiles catervas subito cursu within a-pack of-dogs so through the-hostile companies with-sudden charge equorum, locum ubi vexillum regis Medorum aspexerat, of-horses the-place where the-standard of-the-king of-the-Medes he-had-seen petivit: parum cogitans quid sibi contingere posset, dum sought little thinking what to-himself to-befall might while avunculum suum vindicaret. Adeptus tandem locum quem uncle his-own he-avenged having-gained at-last the-place which affectaverat, prædictum regem peremit, peremptumque ad he-had-sought the-aforesaid king he-slew and-slain to socios suos deportavit, deportatumque juxta corpus pincernæ, comrades his-own carried-off and-carried-off beside the-body of-the-butler omnino dilaniavit. Deinde maximo clamore concivium utterly tore-apart then with-the-greatest shout of-fellow-citizens suorum turmas inanimando, hortabatur in hostes irruere, his-own the-troops by-animating he-urged on the-enemies to-rush crebrisque irruptionibus infestare, dum eis virtus recenter and-with-frequent onrushes to-harass while in-them valor freshly fervebat, dum illis formidolosis pectus tremebat, dum glowed while in-those fearful the-breast trembled while cominus imminentes, sapientius quam ceteri per catervas at-close-quarters pressing more-wisely than the-others by companies dispositi essent, atque crudelius damnum ingerere sæpius disposed they-were and more-cruelly loss to-inflict more-often valuissent. Inanimati igitur hortamine illius, impetum they-had-been-able animated therefore by-the-exhortation of-him an-onset in hostes undique fecerunt: quo maxima strages upon the-enemies on-every-side they-made by-which very-great slaughter utrinque facta fuit. In parte namque Romanorum, exceptis on-both-sides made was on the-side for of-the-Romans excepted innumerabilibus aliis, Alifantinam rex Hispaniæ, et Micipsa countless others Alifantinam king of-Spain and Micipsa Babyioniensis, Quintus quoque Milvius et Marius Lepidus of-Babylon Quintus also Milvius and Marius Lepidus senatores occubuerunt. Corruerunt etiam in parte Britonum, senators fell fell also on the-side of-the-Britons Holdinus rex Rutenorum et Leodegarius Boloniensis: tres Holdin king of-the-Ruteni and Leodegar of-Boulogne three etiam consules Britannia, Cursalem Caicestrensis: Galluc, also consuls of-Britain Cursalem of-Kaicester Galluc Salesberiensis, et Urbgennius de Badone. Unde turmæ of-Salisbury and Urbgennius of Bath whence the-troops quas conducebant, ultra modum debilitatæ, retrocesserunt, which they-led beyond measure weakened fell-back donec venerunt ad aciem Armoricanorum Britonum, quam until they-came to the-line of-the-Armorican Britons which Hoelus et Walgainus regebant. Quæ itaque velut flamma Hoel and Gawain ruled which and-so like a-flame ignescens, impetum fecit in hostes, et revocatis illis qui kindling an-onset made upon the-enemies and recalled those who retrocesserant, illos qui paulo ante sequebantur, diffugere had-fallen-back those who a-little before were-following to-flee coegit. Sed et usque insequens, nunc ipsos diffugientes compelled but also continually pursuing now them fleeing prosternit, nunc interficit: nec stragem ingerere cessat, donec lays-low now kills nor slaughter to-inflict ceases until ad turmam imperatoris venit: qui visa calamitate sociorum, to the-troop of-the-emperor it-comes who seen the-calamity of-his-allies properat ipsis succursum præstare. hastens to-them succor to-furnish Hoelus et Walgainus conspicuos se in pugna gerunt

X · HOEL AND GAWAIN

The consul Kimarcocus and three famous nobles fall with two thousand men. Hoel and Gawain, whom no age has bettered, charge the emperor's wedge from opposite sides, Gawain seeking always to meet Lucius himself. It cannot be said which of the two is the stronger.

Inito itaque congressu, debilitantur Britones. Kimarcocus begun and-so the-encounter are-weakened the-Britons Kimarcocus siquidem consul Trigeriæ, necnon et duo milia cum eo indeed consul of-Treguier nor-not also two thousand with him corruerunt. Corruerunt etiam tres inclyti proceres, Richomarcus fell fell also three famous nobles Richomarcus et Bloccovius atque Lagivius de Bodloano: qui si principes and Bloccovius and Lagivius of Bodloan who if princes fuissent regnorum, ob tantam probitatem quam they-had-been of-kingsdoms on-account-of so-great prowess which habebant, ventura ætas famam eorum celebraret. Nam et they-had the-coming age the-fame of-them would-celebrate for also dum prædictum impetum cum Hoelo et Walgaino facerent, while the-aforesaid onset with Hoel and Gawain they-made non evadebat hostis cui imminebant, quin ei vitam not escaped an-enemy on-whom they-pressed but-that from-him life vel gladio vel lancea eripuissent. Sed postquam intra aciem either with-sword or with-lance they-had-snatched but after within the-line Lucii ventum fuit, undique a Romanis circumsepti, cum of-Lucius come it-was on-every-side by the-Romans hemmed-in with prædicto consule et prædictis militibus conciderunt. Hoelus the-aforesaid consul and the-aforesaid knights they-fell Hoel ergo et Walgainus, quibus meliores præterita secula non therefore and Gawain than-whom better past ages not genuerant, comperta strage suorum, acriores institerunt: et had-begotten learned the-slaughter of-their-own fiercer pressed-on and nunc hac nunc illac, unus ex una parte, alter ex altera, now this-way now that-way one from one side the-other from the-other discurrentes, cuneum imperatoris infestabant. At Walgainus running-about the-wedge of-the-emperor harassed but Gawain semper recenti virtute exæstuous, nitebatur ut aditum always with-fresh valor seething strove that access congregiendi cum Lucio haberet: nitendo ut audacissimus of-engaging with Lucius he-might-have by-striving like a-most-daring miles irruebat: irruendo hostes prosternebat: prosternendo knight he-rushed-in by-rushing-in the-enemies he-laid-low by-laying-low cædebat. Hoelus quoque non inferior illo, ex alia parte he-slew Hoel also not inferior than-him from the-other side fulminabat. Socios etiam suos hortabatur, inimicos feriebat, thundered comrades also his-own he-urged the-enemies he-struck eorumque ictus haud timidus recipiebat: nec ulla hora deficiebat and-their blows not timid he-received nor any hour he-failed quin sæpissime et percuteretur et percuteret. Non facile but-that very-often both he-was-struck and he-struck not easily definiri poterat, uter eorum alterius vires excederet. to-be-determined it-could which of-them of-the-other the-strength exceeded

Lucio Tiberio occiso, Britones victoria potiuntur

XI · THE DEATH OF LUCIUS TIBERIUS

Gawain at last meets Lucius, who rejoices to test himself against so famous a knight, but the Romans rally and drive the Armoricans back. Arthur rushes in with drawn Caliburn, shouting to his men to remember their right hands and their liberty, and kills two kings. Morvid's hidden legion falls on the Romans from behind, Lucius is killed by an unknown lance, and the Britons win with great labor.

Porro Walgainus turmas (ut prædictum est) invadens, further Gawain the-troops as said-before it-has-been attacking invenit tandem aditum quem optabat: et in imperatorem found at-last the-access which he-wished and upon the-emperor irruit, et cum illo congressus est. At Lucius prima juventute rushed and with him engaged has but Lucius in-first youth florens, multum audaciæ, multum vigoris, multum probitatis flourishing much of-boldness much of-vigor much of-prowess habebat: nihilque magis desiderabat, quam congredi cum had and-nothing more desired than to-engage with milite tali, qui ipsum cogeret experiri, quantum in militia a-knight such who him should-compel to-test how-much in knight-hood valeret. Resistens itaque Walgano, congressum ejus inire he-was-worth resisting and-so Gawain the-onset of-him to-enter lætatur, et gloriatur, qui tantam famam de eo audierat. he-rejoices and he-glories who so-great fame of him had-heard Commisso diutius inter se prælio, dant ictus validos, joined for-long between themselves the-battle they-give blows strong et clypeos ictibus prætendendo, uterque neci alterius and shields to-the-blows by-holding-out each on-the-death of-the-other imminere elaborabat. Dum autem acrius in hunc modum to-press labored while moreover more-fiercely in this manner decertarent: ecce Romani subito vires recuperantes, impetum they-fought behold the-Romans suddenly strength recovering an-onset in Armoricanos faciunt, et imperatori suo subvenientes, upon the-Armoricans make and to-the-emperor their-own coming-to-help Hoelum et Walgainum cum suis turmis cædendo Hoel and Gawain with their-own troops by-slaying propulerunt, donec Arturo obviam et ejusdem agmini ex drove-back until to-Arthur in-the-way and of-the-same to-the-column from improvise venerunt: ipse etenim audita suorum strage, quæ unforeseen they-came he for heard of-his-own the-slaughter which paulo ante eisdem dabatur, cum legione irruerat, et a-little before to-the-same was-being-given with the-legion had-rushed-in and abstracto Caliburno gladio optimo, excelsa voce atque verbis drawn Caliburn sword best with-lofty voice and words commilitones suos inanimabat, inquires: “Quid facitis viri? fellow-soldiers his-own animated saying what do-you O-men Ut quid muliebres permittitis illæsos abire? Ne abscedat to what-end the-womanish do-you-permit unbarmed to-go-away let-not depart illorum ullus vivus. Mementote dextrarum vestrarum, quæ of-them any alive remember the-right-hands your which tot præliis exercitatæ, terdena regna potestati meæ in-so-many battles trained thirty kingdoms to-power my subdiderunt. Mementote avorum vestrorum, quos Romani, subjected remember the-grandfathers your whom the-Romans dum fortiores erant, tributarios fecerunt. Mementote libertatis while stronger they-were tributary made remember liberty vestræ, quam semiviri isti, et vobis debiliores, demere your which half-men these and than-you weaker to-take-away affectant. Ne abeat ullus vivus, ne abeat. Quid facitis?" seek let-not go-away any alive let-not go-away what do-you Hæc et plura alia vociferando, irruebat in hostes, these and many other-things by-shouting he-rushed upon the-enemies prosternebat, cædebat, et cuicumque obviabat, aut, ipsum he-laid-low he-slew and whomever he-met either him aut ipsius equum uno ictu interficiebat. Diffugiebant ergo or of-him the-horse with-one blow he-killed they-fled therefore ipsum velut pecudes ferocem leonem, quem sæva fames him like cattle a-fierce lion whom savage hunger instimulat ad devorandum quicquid casus subvectat. Arma goads to devouring whatever chance brings-up arms sua nihil eis proficiebant, quin Caliburnus dextera their-own nothing them profited but-that Caliburn by-the-right-hand tam virtuosus regis vibratus, cogeret ipsos animas eructare so of-valiant king brandished compelled them souls to-belch-out cum sanguine. Duos reges, Sertorium Libyæ, Bithyniæque with blood two kings Sertorius of-Libya and-of-Bithynia Polytetem infortunium illi obtulit, quos abscissis capitibus, Polytetes misfortune to-him offered whom cut-off heads ad tartara direxit. Viso igitur rege suo in hunc modum to Tartarus he-sent seen therefore the-king their-own in this manner decertante, Britones majorem audaciam capessunt: Romanos fighting the-Britons greater boldness seize the-Romans unanimiter invadunt: densata caterva incedunt: et dum ex with-one-mind they-attack in-thickened company they-advance and while from una parte pedestres hoc modo infestarent, equestres ex one side the-foot in-this manner harassed the-horse from alia prosternere et penetrare conabantur. Resistunt tamen the-other to-lay-low and to-pierce tried resist yet acriter Romani: et monitu Lucii, illustris regis vicem fiercely the-Romans and by-the-warning of-Lucius of-the-illustrious king the-requit illatæ cladis Britonibus reddere elaborabant. Tanta igitur of-the-inflicted disaster to-the-Britons to-pay-back labored with-such therefore vi in utraque parte pugnatur, ac si tunc primum recenter force on either side it-is-fought as if then first freshly convenirent. Hinc autem Arturus sæpius ac sæpius (ut they-met on-this-side moreover Arthur often and often as prædictum est) hostes percutiens, Britones ad perstandum said-before it-has-been the-enemies striking the-Britons to standing-firm hortabatur: illinc vero Lucius Tiberius Romanos suos, et urged on-that-side indeed Lucius Tiberius Romans his-own both monebat, et in præclaras probitates multoties ducebat. Nec admonished and into splendid feats-of-prowess many-times led nor ipse cessabat ferire: sed in omnes partes turmas suas he-himself ceased to-strike but in all directions troops his-own circuiens, quemcunque hostem casus offerebat, vel lancea, vel going-round whatever enemy chance offered either with-lance or gladio perimebat. Fiebat itaque in utraque parte cædes with-sword he-slew there-was-made and-so on either side slaughter abhorrenda: quia quandoque Britones, quandoque Romani abhorrent because at-times the-Britons at-times the-Romans versa vice prævalebant. Postremo dum talis decertatio turned in-turn prevailed finally while such contest inter eos fieret, ecce Morvid consul Claudiocestriæ cum between them was-made behold Morvid consul of-Gloucester with legione, quam esse intra colles superius dixi, subito cursu the-legion which to-be among the-hills above I-said with-sudden charge occurrit: et hostes nihil tale præmeditatos a dorso ran-up and the-enemies nothing such having-foreseen from the-back invasit: invadens invasos penetravit: penetrans penetratos attacked attacking the-attacked pierced piercing the-pierced dissipavit, atque maximam stragem fecit. Tunc multa milia scattered and a-very-great slaughter made then many thousands Romanorum conciderunt. Tunc etiam Lucius imperator intra of-Romans fell then also Lucius the-emperor among turmas occupatus, cujusdam lancea confossus interiit. the-troops engaged of-a-certain-one by-the-lance pierced perished At Britones usque insequentes, victoriam, licet maximo but the-Britons continually pursuing the-victory though with-the-greatest labore, habuerunt.

labor bad

Romani partim fugiunt, partim se captivos reddunt

XII · SOME ROMANS FLEE AND OTHERS SURRENDER

The broken Romans scatter into woods, cities, and towns, and the Britons pursue and slaughter them. Most hold out their hands like women to be bound. Geoffrey sees in it divine providence, since the Romans' ancestors once harried the Britons' forebears with unjust tribute.

Disgregati igitur Romani, partim devia et nemora, cogente broken-apart therefore the-Romans partly byways and woods compelling timore, carpebant: partim ad civitates et oppida, et ad fear took partly to cities and towns and to quæque tutissima loca diffugiebant. Quos Britones omni nisu each safest places fled whom the-Britons with-all effort insequendo, miserabili cæde afficiunt, capiunt, despoliant. Ita by-pursuing with-wretched slaughter afflict take despoil so quod maxima pars eorum ultro protendebat manus that the-greatest part of-them of-its-own-accord held-out hands suas muliebriter vinciendas: ut pauxillum spatium ad their-own womanishly to-be-bound that a-little space for vivendum haberent. Quod divinæ providentiæ stabat loco, living they-might-have which of-divine providence stood in-the-place cum et veteres eorum priscis temporibus avos istorum since both the-old of-them in-ancient times the-grandfathers of-these injustis inquietationibus infestassent: et isti nunc libertatem, with-unjust disturbances had-harassed and these now the-liberty quam illi eisdem demere affectabant, tueri instarent, which those from-the-same to-take-away sought to-defend pressed abnegantes tributum, quod ab ipsis injuste exigebatur. refusing the-tribute which from them unjustly was-exacted

Corpora mortuorum sepeliuntur

XIII · THE DEAD ARE BURIED

Arthur has his nobles' bodies taken to nearby abbeys, Bedevere to Bayeux, Kay to Caen, and Holdin to Therouanne. He has the enemy dead buried and sends Lucius' body to the Senate, saying that no other tribute is owed from Britain. Wintering in Gaul, he subdues the Allobroges, but as he begins to cross the Alps for Rome, he learns that Mordred has seized the crown and taken Queen Guinevere.

Habita denique victoria illa, Arturus corpora procerum suorum had finally victory that Arthur the-bodies of-nobles his-own ab hostilibus cadaveribus separari jubet: separata autem, from the-hostile corpses to-be-separated orders separated moreover regio more parari: parata vero ad conprovinciales Abbantias in-royal manner to-be-prepared prepared indeed to the-neighboring Abbeys deferri, ut ibidem honorifice sepelirentur. At Beduerus to-be-carried that there honorably they-might-be-buried but Bedevere pincerna ad Bajocas civitatem suam, quam Beduerus primus et the-butler to Bayeux city his-own which Bedevere the-first and proavus ejus edificaverat, ab Neustriensibus cum maximis great-grandfather of-him had-built by the-Neustrians with the-greatest lamentis deportatur. Ibi in quodam cœmeterio quod in Australi laments is-carried there in a-certain cemetery which in the-Southern parte civitatis erat, juxta murum honorifice positus fuit: Cheudo part of-the-city was beside the-wall honorably laid was Kay autem ad Camum oppidum, quod ipse construxerat, graviter moreover to Caen the-town which he-himself had-built grievously vulneratus asportatur, et paulo post eodem vulnere defunctus, wounded is-carried and a-little after by-the-same wound having-died in quodam nemore, in cœnobio eremitarum, qui ibidem non in a-certain wood in the-convent of-hermits who there not longe ab oppido erant: ut decuit Andegavensium ducem, far from the-town were as befitted of-the-Angevins the-duke humatus fuit. Holdinus quoque dux Rutenorum Flandrias buried was Holdin also duke of-the-Ruteni to-Flanders delatus, in Terivana civitate sua sepultus est. Ceteri autem carried in Therouanne city his-own buried was the-other moreover consules et proceres, ut præceperat Arturus, ad vicinas consuls and nobles as had-ordered Arthur to the-neighboring Abbatias delati sunt. Hostes quoque suos miseratus, præcepit Abbeys carried were the-enemies also his-own having-pitied he-ordered indigenis sepelire eos: corpusque Lucii ad senatum deferre, the-natives to-bury them and-the-body of-Lucius to the-senate to-carry mandans non debere aliud tributum ex Britannia reddi. sending-word not to-be-due other tribute from Britain to-be-paid Deinde post subsequentem hyemem, in partibus illis moratus then after the-following winter in parts those stayed est: et civitates Allobrogum subjugare vacavit. Adveniente he-has and the-cities of-the-Allobroges to-subjugate he-gave-time arriving vero æstate, cum Romam petere affectaret, et montes but the-summer when Rome to-seek he-desired and the-mountains transcendere incœpisset, nunciatur ei Modredum nepotem to-cross he-had-begun it-is-announced to-him Mordred nephew suum, cujus tutelæ commiserat Britanniam, ejusdem his-own whose to-the-keeping he-had-committed Britain of-the-same diademate per tyrannidem et proditionem insignitum with-the-diadem through tyranny and treachery crowned esse; reginamque Ganhumaram, violato jure priorum to-have-been and-the-queen Guinevere violated the-law of-the-former nuptiarum, eidem nefanda Venere copulatam esse. nuptials to-the-same by-unspeakable Venus joined to-have-been

BOOK XI

Modredus, cæsis multis ex Arturi exercitu, tandem victus Wintoniam petit

I · MORDRED DRIVEN TO WINCHESTER

Geoffrey tells the last battles briefly, as he found them in the British book and heard them from Walter of Oxford. Arthur returns to Britain, while Mordred has promised the Saxon Cheldric the land from the Humber to Scotland and gathered eighty thousand pagans and Christians. At Richborough Gawain and Auguselus fall, but Arthur drives Mordred to Winchester, and Guinevere, despairing, takes the veil among the nuns of Julius the martyr at the City of the Legions.

De hoc quidem, consul auguste, Gaufridus Monumetensis of this indeed O-consul august Geoffrey of-Monmouth tacebit. Sed ut in Britannico præfato sermone invenit, et will-be-silent but as in the-British aforesaid discourse he-found and a Gualtero Oxinefordensi in multis historiis peritissimo from Walter of-Oxford in many histories most-skilled viro audivit, vili licet stylo, breviter tamen propalabit, a-man heard in-a-mean though style briefly yet he-will-make-known quæ prælia inclytus ille rex post victoriam istam, in what battles famous that king after victory this into Britanniam reversus, cum nepote suo commiserit. Ut Britain having-returned with nephew his-own joined when igitur infamia prænunciati sceleris aures ipsius attigit, therefore the-ill-report of-the-announced crime the-ears of-him reached continuo dilata inquietatione, quam Leoni regi Romanorum at-once put-off the-disturbance which on-Leo king of-the-Romans ingerere affectaverat: dimisso Hoelo duce Armoricanorum to-inflit he-had-sought dismissed Hoel duke of-the-Armoricans cum exercitu Galliarum, ut partes illas pacificaret: confestim with the-army of-the-Gauls that parts those he-might-pacify forthwith cum Insulanis tantummodo regibus, eorumque exercitibus in with the-Island only kings and-their armies into Britanniam remeavit. Prædictus autem sceleratissimus proditor Britain he-returned the-aforsaid moreover most-wicked traitor ille Modredus, Cheldricum Saxonum ducem in Germaniam that Mordred Cheldric of-the-Saxons duke into Germany direxerat, ut in illa quoscunque posset associaret sibi, had-sent that in it whomever he-could he-might-join to-himself et associatis quibuscunque, iterum citissimis velis rediret. and joined whomever again with-swiftest sails might-return Spoponderat etiam se ipsi hoc pacto daturum partem he-had-promised also himself to-him on-this bargain about-to-give part illam insulæ, quæ a flumine Humbro usque ad Scotiam that of-the-island which from the-river Humber all-the-way to Scotland porrigebatur, et quicquid in Cantia tempore Vortegirni Horsus stretched and whatever in Kent in-the-time of-Vortigern Horsa et Hengistus possederant. At ille peracto ipsius præcepto, and Hengist had-possessed but he carried-out of-him the-order cum octingentis navibus plenis armatis Paganis applicuerat: et with eight-hundred ships full with-armed Pagans had-landed and fœdere dato, huic proditori quasi suo regi parebat. Associaverat a-treaty given this traitor as-if his-own king he-obeyed he-had-joined quoque sibi Scotos, Pictos, Hibernienses, et quoscunque also to-himself the-Scots Picts Irish and whomever callebat habuisse avunculum suum odio. Erant autem he-knew to-have-had uncle his-own in-hatred were moreover omnes numero quasi octoginta milia, tam Paganorum quam all in-number about eighty thousand as-well of-Pagans as Christianorum, quorum auxilio fretus, et quorum multitudine of-Christians whose on-the-help relying and whose by-the-multitude comitatus, Arturo in Rutupi portum applicanti obviam venit: accompanied to-Arthur into of-Rutupi the-port landing in-the-way he-came et commisso prælio maximam stragem dedit applicantibus. and joined battle very-great slaughter he-dealt on-the-landing-men Auguselus etenim rex Alaniarum, et Walgatus nepos regis, Auguselus for king of-Albany and Gawain nephew of-the-king cum innumerabilibus aliis in die illa corruerunt. Successit with countless others on day that fell succeeded autem Auguselo in regnum Eventus filius Uriani fratris moreover to-Auguselus in the-kingdom Eventus son of-Urian brother sui, qui postea in decertationibus istis, multis probitatibus his-own who afterward in contests these by-many feats-of-prowess claruit. Postquam tandem, etsi magno labore, littora adepti shone after at-last although with-great labor the-shores gained fuerunt, mutuam reddendo cladem, Modredum et exercitum they-had mutual by-returning disaster Mordred and the-army ejus pepulerunt in fugam. Assiduis namque debellationibus of-him they-drove into flight with-constant for warfare usi, sapienter turmas suas disposuerant: quæ partim having-used wisely troops their-own they-had-disposed which partly pede, partim equo distributæ, tali modo decertabant: quod on-foot partly on-horse distributed in-such manner fought that cum pedestre agmen ad invadendum vel resistendum intenderet, when the-foot column to attacking or resisting strove equestre ilico obliquo irruens, omni nisu hostes penetrare the-mounted on-the-spot slantwise rushing with-all effort the-enemies to-pierce conaretur, unde eos ad diffugiendum coegerunt. Perjurus ergo tried whence them to fleeing they-compelled the-perjured therefore ille revocatis undique suis, insequenti nocte Guintoniam that-one recalled from-everywhere his-own on-the-following night Winchester ingressus est. Quod ut Ganhumaræ reginæ annunciatum entered has which when to-Guinevere the-queen announced est, confestim desperans, ab Eboraco ad urbem Legionum was forthwith despairing from York to the-City of-the-Legions diffugit, atque in templo Julii martyris, inter monachas fled and in the-church of-Julius martyr among the-nuns ejusdem caste vivere proposuit, et vitam monachalem suscepit. of-the-same chastely to-live resolved and the-life monastic took-up

Modredus occiditur: Arturus vulneratus regnum Constantino tradit

II · THE BATTLE OF CAMBULA

Arthur besieges Winchester and routs Mordred, who flees to Cornwall and makes his stand on the river Cambula. Arthur breaks into Mordred's troop with six thousand men, and the traitor falls with many thousands. Nearly every leader on both sides is killed, and Arthur, mortally wounded, is carried to the island of Avalon to be healed, giving the crown to his kinsman Constantine, son of Cador, in the year 542.

At Arturus acriori ira accensus, quoniam tot centena but Arthur with-keener wrath kindled since so-many hundreds comilitonum suorum amiserat: in tertia die datis prius of-fellow-soldiers his-own he-had-lost on the-third day given first sepulturæ peremptis, civitatem adivit: atque intra eam to-burial the-slain the-city he-approached and within it receptum nebulonem obsedit. Qui tamen cœptis suis withdrawn the-scoundrel besieged who yet from-undertakings his-own desistere nolens, sed ipsos qui ei adhærebant pluribus to-desist unwilling but those who to-him adhered in-many modis inanimans, cum agminibus suis egreditur, atque ways encouraging with columns his-own goes-out and cum avunculo suo præliari disponit. Inito ergo certamine, with uncle his-own to-fight arranges begun therefore the-contest facta est maxima cædes in utraque parte, quæ tandem made was very-great slaughter on either side which at-last magis in partem illius illata, coegit eum campum turpiter more upon the-side of-him inflicted compelled him the-field shamefully relinquere. Qui deinde non multum curans, quæ sepultura to-leave who then not much caring what burial peremptis suis fieret: cito remige fugæ evectus, to-the-slain his-own might-be-made with-swift oarsman of-flight borne-away Cornubiam versus iter arripuit. Arturus autem interna Cornwall toward the-way took-up Arthur moreover by-inward anxietate cruciatus, quoniam totiens evasisset, confestim anxiety tormented since so-often he-had-escaped forthwith persecutus est eum in prædictam patriam usque ad pursued has him into the-aforesaid country all-the-way to flumen Cambula, ubi ille adventum ejus expectabat. Porro the-river Cambula where he the-coming of-him awaited further Modredus, ut erat omnium audacissimus, et semper Mordred as he-was of-all the-boldest and always ad invadendum celerrimus, confestim milites suos per for attacking the-swiftest forthwith knights his-own by catervas distribuit, affectans vincere vel mori potius, quam companies distributed desiring to-conquer or to-die rather than prædicto modo diutius fugere. Remanserant adhuc ei ex in-the-aforesaid manner longer to-flee had-remained still to-him from prædicto numero sociorum sexaginta milia, ex quibus fecit the-aforesaid number of-allies sixty thousand from whom he-made turmas tres: et in unaquaque posuit sex milia armatorum troops three and in each he-put six thousand of-armed-men et sexcentos sexaginta sex. Præterea vero fecit unam and six-hundred sixty six besides indeed he-made one turmam ex ceteris qui superfuerant, et unicuique aliarum troop from the-rest who had-remained and to-each of-the-others ductoribus datis, eam tutelæ suæ permisit. His itaque leaders given it to-the-keeping his-own entrusted these and-so distributis quemlibet eorum inanimabat, promittens ceterorum distributed each of-them he-animated promising of-the-others possessiones eis, si ad triumphandum perstarent. Arturus the-posessions to-them if for triumphing they-stood-firm Arthur quoque suum exercitum in adversa parte statuit, quem per also his-own army on the-opposite side set which into novem divisit agmina pedestria cum dextro ac sinistro cornu nine divided columns on-foot with right and left wing quadrata: et unicuique præsidibus commissis, hortatur ut squared and to-each commanders committed he-urges that perjuros et latrones interimant, qui monitu proditoris the-perjured and robbers they-should-destroy who by-the-warning of-the-traitor sui de externis regionibus in insulam advecti, suos their-own from foreign regions into the-island brought their-own eis honores demere affectabant. Dicit etiam diversos from-them honors to-take-away sought he-says also diverse diversorum regnorum Barbaros imbelles atque belli usus of-diverse kingdoms Barbarians unwarlike and of-war of-the-practice ignaros esse, et nullatenus ipsis virtuosos viris et pluribus ignorant to-be and in-no-way to-these valiant men and in-many debellationibus usis resistere posse, si audacter invadere Wars practiced to-resist to-be-able if boldly to-attack et viriliter decertare affectarent. Ipsis itaque commilitones and manfully to-fight they-should-desire them and-so fellow-soldiers suos hinc et inde cohortantibus, subito impetu their-own on-this-side and on-that exhorting with-sudden onset concurrunt acies, et commisso prælio crebros ictus innectere clash the-lines and joined battle frequent blows to-interweave elaborant. Fiunt ilico in utrisque partibus tantæ they-labor there-are-made on-the-spot on both sides such strages, tanti morientium gemitus, tanti invadentium furores, slaughters such of-the-dying groans such of-the-attackers furies quantos laboriosum est describere et dolorosum audire. as-great-as laborious it-is to-describe and grievous to-bear Undique etenim vulnerabant et vulnerabantur: perimebant on-every-side for they-wounded and they-were-wounded they-slew et perimebantur. Postquam autem multum diei in hunc and they-were-slain after moreover much of-the-day in this modum duxerunt, irruit tandem Arturus cum agmine uno, manner they-had-spent rushed at-last Arthur with column one quo sex milia sexcentos et sexaginta sex posuerat, in in-which six thousand six-hundred and sixty six he-had-put upon turmam illam ubi Modredum sciebat esse, et viam gladiis troop that where Mordred he-knew to-be and a-way with-swords aperiendo, eam penetravit, atque tristissimam cædem ingessit. by-opening it pierced and the-saddest slaughter inflicted Concidit namque proditor ille nefandus, et multa milia cum fell for traitor that unspeakable and many thousands with eo. Nec tamen ob casum ejus diffugiunt ceteri: sed ex him nor yet on-account-of the-fall of-him flee the-rest but from omni campo confluentes, quantum audaciæ dabatur, resistere all the-field flocking-together as-much-as of-boldness was-given to-resist conantur. Committitur ergo dirissima pugna inter eos, qua try is-joined therefore a-most-dire fight between them in-which omnes fere duces qui in ambabus partibus affuerant, all almost the-leaders who on both sides had-been-present cum suis catervis corruerunt. Corruerunt etenim in parte with their-own companies fell fell for on the-side Modredi, Cheldricus, Elafius, Egbrictus, Bunignus, Saxones: of-Mordred Cheldric Elafius Egbrict Bunignus Saxons Gillapatriæ, Gillamor, Gislafel, Gillarius, Hibernenses. Scoti Gillapatric Gillamor Gislafel Gillarius Irish Scots etiam et Picti cum omnibus fere quibus dominabantur. In also and Picts with all almost whom they-ruled on parte autem Arturi Olbrictus rex Norwegiæ, Aschillius rex the-side moreover of-Arthur Olbrict king of-Norway Aschil king Daciæ, Cador Limetiæ Cassibellaunus, cum multis milibus of-Dacia Cador of-Limetia Cassibellaunus with many thousands suorum tam Britonum quam ceterarum gentium quas of-their-own as-well of-Britons as of-other peoples whom secum adduxerat. Sed et inclytus ille rex Arturus letaliter with-him he-had-brought but also famous that king Arthur mortally vulneratus est, qui illinc ad sananda vulnera sua in insulam wounded was who thence for to-be-bealed wounds his-own into the-island Avallonis advectus, cognato suo Constantino, filio Cadoris of-Avalon borne to-kinsman his-own Constantine son of-Cador ducis Cornubiæ, diadema Britannæ concessit, anno ab duke of-Cornwall the-diadem of-Britain granted in-the-year from incarnatione dominica quingentesimo quadragesimo secundo. the-incarnation of-the-Lord five-hundredth fortieth second

Rebellant Saxones

III · THE SAXONS REBEL

The Saxons and Mordred's two sons rise against Constantine and, failing, seize London and Winchester. Saint Daniel of Bangor dies, and Theonus of Gloucester becomes archbishop of London. Saint David, archbishop of the City of the Legions, dies at Menevia in the abbey Saint Patrick founded, and Kincus of Llanpatern succeeds him.

Constantino igitur diademate insignito, insurrexerunt Constantine therefore with-the-diadem crowned rose-up Saxones, et duo filii Modredi nec in eum prævalere the-Saxons and two sons of-Mordred nor against him to-prevail quiverunt: sed post plurima prælia diffugiendo, unus were-able but after very-many battles by-fleeing one Londonias, alter vero Guintoniam ingressus, eas obtinere London the-other but Winchester having-entered them to-hold cœperunt. Tunc defunctus est sanctus Daniel Bangornensis began then died has saint Daniel of-Bangor ecclesiæ religiosissimus Antistes, et Theonus Gloucestrensis of-the-church most-religious Prelate and Theonus of-Gloucester episcopus in Archiepiscopatum Londoniarum eligitur. Tunc bishop to the-Archbishopric of-London is-elected then obiit sanctissimus urbis Legionum archiepiscopus David died the-most-holy of-the-City of-the-Legions archbishop David in Menevia civitate, intra abbatiam suam, quam præ ceteris in Menevia city within abbey his-own which before the-other suæ diœcesis monasteriis dilexerat, quia beatus Patricius, of-his-own diocese monasteries he-had-loved because blessed Patrick qui nativitatem ejus prophetaverat, ipsam fundavit. Dum who the-birth of-him had-propheesied it founded while enim ibi apud confratres suos moram faceret, subito for there among brethren his-own stay he-made by-sudden languore gravatus, defunctus est, et jubente Malgone sickness weighed-down died he-has and ordering Malgo Venedotorum rege in eadem ecclesia sepultus. Pro of-the-Venedotians king in the-same church buried in-place-of eo ponitur in Metropolitana sede Kincus Lampaternensis him is-put in the-Metropolitan see Kincus of-Llanpatern ecclesiæ antistes, et ad altiozem dignitatem promovetur. of-the-church prelate and to a-higher dignity is-promoted

Constantinus, post filios Modredi interfectos, ipse a Conano interficitur

IV · CONSTANTINE AND MORDRED'S SONS

Constantine subdues the Saxons and takes Mordred's sons, killing one before the altar of Saint Amphibalus at Winchester and the other before an altar in a London monastery. In the third year he is killed by Conan, struck by God's judgment. He is buried beside Uther Pendragon in the stone circle near Salisbury called Stonehenge.

At Constantinus insecutus est Saxones, et eos potestati but Constantine pursued has the-Saxons and them to-power suæ subjugavit. Et prædictos filios Modredi cepit: et his-own subjugated and the-aforesaid sons of-Mordred took and alterum juvenem Guintoniæ in ecclesiam sancti Amphibali the-one youth at-Winchester into the-church of-saint Amphibalus fugientem, ante altare trucidavit: alterum vero Londoniis fleeing before the-altar he-butchered the-other indeed at-London in quorundam fratrum Cœnobio absconditum, atque tandem in of-certain brothers the-Convent hidden and at-last juxta altare inventum, crudeli morte affecit. Exin tertio beside the-altar found with-cruel death afflicted thereafter in-the-third anno interfectus est a Conano, sententia Dei percussus, year killed he-was by Conan by-the-sentence of-God struck et juxta Utherpendragon intra lapidum structuram sepultus and beside Uther-Pendragon within of-stones the-structure buried fuit, quæ haud longe a Salesberia mira arte composita, he-was which not far from Salisbury with-wondrous art put-together Anglorum lingua Stanheng nuncupatur. of-the-English in-the-tongue Stonehenge is-called

Conanus solio potitur

V • CONAN TAKES THE THRONE

Aurelius Conan, Constantine's nephew, a youth of wonderful prowess, rules the whole island and would deserve the crown but for his love of civil war. He imprisons the uncle who should have reigned and kills his two sons. He dies in the second year of his reign.

Huic successit Aurelius Conanus miræ probitatis juvenis, to-him succeeded Aurelius Conan of-wondrous prowess a-youth et ipsius nepos, qui monarchiam totius insulæ tenens and of-him nephew who the-monarchy of-the-whole island holding ejusdem diademate dignus esset, si non foret civilis belli of-the-same of-the-diadem worthy would-be if not he-were of-civil war amator: avunculum etenim suum, qui post Constantinum a-lover uncle for his-own who after Constantine regnare debuit, inquietavit, atque in carcerem posuit: ejusque to-reign ought harassed and in prison put and-his duobus filiis peremptis, regnum obtinuit, secundoque regni two sons slain the-kingdom obtained and-in-the-second of-reign sui anno defunctus est. his-own year died he-has Wortiporius Conano succedit

VI • VORTIPORIUS SUCCEEDS CONAN

Wortiporius succeeds Conan, and the Saxons rise against him with a great fleet of their countrymen from Germany. He defeats them in battle. He governs the whole kingdom for four years with diligence and peace.

Conano successit Wortiporius: in quem insurrexerunt to-Conan succeeded Wortiporius against whom rose-up Saxones, conducentes concives suos ex Germania the-Saxons bringing fellow-citizens their-own from Germany maximo navigio. Sed ipse praelium cum ipsis inivit, et with-a-very-great fleet but he battle with them entered and superavit: et monarchiam totius regni adeptus, populum overcame and the-monarchy of-the-whole kingdom having-gained the-people quatuor annis gubernavit cum diligentia et pace.

for-four years governed with diligence and peace

Malgo, rex factus, pulcritudinem corporis Sodomitarum peste deturpat

VII • KING MALGO'S VICE

Malgo, the handsomest man in Britain, expels many tyrants and is strong in arms, generous, and of great prowess. He makes himself hateful to God by sodomy. He rules the whole island and adds to it by hard battles Ireland, Iceland, Gothland, the Orkneys, Norway, and Denmark.

Cui successit Malgo omnium fere Britanniae pulcherrimus, to-whom succeeded Malgo of-all almost of-Britain the-most-beautiful multorum tyrannorum depulsor, robustus armis, largior of-many tyrants the-expeller sturdy in-arms more-generous ceteris: et ultra modum probitate præclarus, nisi Sodomitana than-the-others and beyond measure in-prowess illustrious unless in-the-Sodomitic peste volutatus, sese Deo invisum exhibuisset. Hic etiam totam plague wallowing himself to-God hateful he-bad-shown he also the-whole insulam obtinuit: et sex comprovinciales Oceani insulas, island obtained and six neighboring of-the-Ocean islands Hiberniam videlicet, atque Islandiam, Godlandiam, Orcades, Ireland namely and Iceland Gotland the-Orkneys Norwegiam, Daciam, adjecit dirissimis præliis potestati suæ.

Norway Dacia added by-most-dire battles to-power his-own Britannia, sub rege Caretico bellis civilibus afflicta, præda fit Saxonibus et Africanis

VIII • CARETICUS AND GORMUND

Careticus, a lover of civil war, is hateful to God and the Britons. The Saxons bring in Gormund, king of the Africans, who has conquered Ireland, and with 166,000 Africans he hunts Careticus from city to city and besieges him in Cirencester. Isembard, nephew of King Louis of the Franks, forsakes his faith to join Gormund, who burns the city, drives Careticus beyond the Severn, and burns the island from sea to sea.

Malgoni successit Careticus, amator civilium bellorum, invisus to-Malgo succeeded Careticus a-lover of-civil wars hateful Deo et Britonibus. Cujus inconstantiam comperientes to-God and to-the-Britons whose inconstancy learning Saxones, iverunt propter Gormundum regem Africanorum in the-Saxons went for Gormund king of-the-Africans into Hiberniam, in quam maximis navigiis advectus, gentem Ireland into which with-very-great fleets borne the-people patriæ subjugaverat. Exin proditione eorum, cum centum of-the-country he-bad-subjugated thereafter by-the-treachery of-them with hundred sexaginta sex millibus Africanorum ad Britanniam transfretavit, sixty six thousands of-Africans to Britain crossed quam in una parte mentitæ fidei Saxones, in alia vero which on one side of-lying faith the-Saxons on the-other indeed cives patriæ, civilia bella inter se assidue agentes, the-citizens of-the-country civil wars among themselves constantly waging penitus devastabant. Inito ergo fœdere cum Saxonibus utterly laid-waste entered therefore a-treaty with the-Saxons oppugnavit Careticum regem et post plurima prælia inter eos, he-attacked Careticus the-king and after very-many battles between them fugavit eum de civitate in civitatem, donec eum trusit he-put-to-flight him from city to city until him he-thrust in Cirecestriam, et obsedit. Ubi Isembardus nepos Ludovici into Cirencester and besieged where Isembard nephew of-Louis regis Francorum venit ad eum, et cum eo fœdus amicitiae king of-the-Franks came to him and with him a-treaty of-friendship inivit, et Christianitatem suam tali pacto pro amore ejus entered and Christianity his-own on-such terms for love of-him deseruit, ut auxilio ejus regnum Galliæ avunculo eripere forsook that by-the-help of-him the-kingdom of-Gaul from-the-uncle to-snatch posset, a quo (ut aiebat) vi et injuste expulsus erat. he-might by whom as he-said by-force and unjustly expelled he-had-been Capta tandem prædicta civitate et succensa, commisit taken at-last the-aforesaid city and fired he-joined prælium cum Caretico, et eum fugavit ultra Sabrinam battle with Careticus and him put-to-flight beyond the-Severn in Guallias. Mox depopulans agros, ignem cumulavit in into Wales soon ravaging the-fields fire he-beaped upon finitimas quasque civitates: qui non quievit accensus, donec neighboring all cities which not rested kindled until cunctam pene superficiem insulæ, a mari usque ad the-whole almost surface of-the-island from sea all-the-way to mare exussit: ita ut cunctæ coloniæ crebris arietibus, sea it-burned-up so that all settlements with-frequent rams omnesque coloni cum sacerdotibus ecclesiæ, mucronibus and-all settlers with the-priests of-the-church blades undique micantibus, ac flammis crepitantibus, simul humi on-every-side flashing and flames crackling together on-the-ground sternerentur. Diffugiebant ergo reliquiæ tantis cladibus were-laid-low fled therefore the-remnants by-such disasters affectæ, quocunque tutamen ipsis cedentibus patebat. afflicted wherever safety to-them yielding lay-open

Auctoris in Britones exprobatio

IX · THE AUTHOR'S REPROACH TO THE BRITONS

Geoffrey asks the idle, sinful Britons why, thirsting always for civil war, they have so weakened themselves. Once they conquered distant kingdoms, but now, like a good vine turned bitter, they cannot defend their wives and children. Since their kingdom is divided against itself, as the Gospel warns, and pride will not let them obey one king, their country is laid waste by pagans, and their descendants will scarcely recover it.

Quid, ociosa gens pondere immanium scelerum oppressa: why O-idle people by-the-weight of-monstrous crimes oppressed quid semper civilia bella sitiens, tete domesticis in tantum why always civil wars thirsting thyself by-domestic to so-great-a-degree debilitasti motibus, quæ cum prius longe posita regna hast-weakened commotions who though before far placed kingdoms potestati tuæ subdideris, nunc velut bona vinea degenerata, in to-power thy thou-subjected now like a-good vine degenerated into amaritudinem versa, patriam et conjuges liberosque nequeas bitterness turned country and wives and-children thou-canst-not ab inimicis tueri? Age ergo, age civile dissidium: parum from enemies to-defend carry-on therefore carry-on civil discord little intelligens Evangelicum illud: Omne regnum in se ipsum understanding Gospel-saying that every kingdom against it itself divisum desolabitur, et domus supra domum cadet. Quia ergo divided will-be-desolated and house upon house will-fall because therefore regnum tuum in se divisum fuit: quia furor civilis discordiæ kingdom thy against itself divided was because the-fury of-civil discord et livoris fumus mentem tuam hebetavit: quia superbia tua uni and of-envy the-smoke mind thy has-dulled because pride thy to-one regi obedientiam ferre non permisit: cernis idcirco patriam tuam king obedience to-bear not permitted thou-seest therefore country thy ab impiissimis paganis desolatam, domos etiam ejusdem supra by most-impious pagans desolated the-houses also of-the-same upon domos ruentes, quod posteri tui in futurum lugebunt. Videbunt houses falling which descendants thy into the-future will-mourn they-will-see etenim barbaræ lænæ catulos oppida, civitates, atque ceteras for of-the-barbarous lioness the-cubs towns cities and the-other eorundem possessiones obtinere. Ex quibus misere expulsi, of-the-same possessions to-hold from which wretchedly expelled prioris dignitatis statum vel nunquam vel vix recuperabunt. of-former dignity the-state either never or scarcely they-will-recover

Loegriam Saxones iterum occupant: Britones in Cornubiam et Gualias fugiunt

X · THE BRITONS FLEE TO CORNWALL AND WALES

Gormund gives most of the island, called Loegria, to the Saxons, and the remnants of the Britons withdraw to Cornwall and Wales, from which they raid the enemy. The archbishops of the City of the Legions, London, and York flee to the Welsh forests with the relics of the saints, and many sail to Armorica. Geoffrey will tell of this elsewhere, when he translates the book on their exile.

Postquam autem (ut prædictum est) infaustus Tyrannus after moreover as said-before it-has-been the-ill-starred Tyrant cum innumerabilibus Africanorum milibus totam fere with countless of-Africans thousands the-whole almost insulam vastavit, maiorem partem ejus quæ Loëgria vocabatur, island laid-waste the-greater part of-it which Loegria was-called præbuit Saxonibus, quorum proditione applicuerat. Secesserunt he-gave to-the-Saxons whose by-the-treachery he-had-landed withdrew itaque Britonum reliquiæ in Occidentales regni and-so of-the-Britons the-remnants into the-Western of-the-kingdom partes, Cornubiam videlicet atque Gualias. Unde crebras parts Cornwall namely and Wales whence frequent et ferales irruptiones incessanter hostibus fecerunt. Tres and deadly onrushes unceasingly on-the-enemies they-made three igitur archipræsules, videlicet urbis Legionum, Theonus therefore archbishops namely of-the-City of-the-Legions Theonus Londoniensis, et Thadioceus Eboracensis, cum omnes of-London and Thadioceus of-York when all ecclesias sibi subditas, usque ad humum destructas churches to-them subject all-the-way to the-ground destroyed vidissent: cum omnibus ordinatis, qui in tanto discrimine they-had-seen with all ordained who in so-great peril superfuerant, diffugiunt ad tutamina nemorum in Gualias had-survived flee to the-safeties of-the-woods in Wales cum reliquiis sanctorum, timentes ne barbarorum irruptione with the-relics of-the-saints fearing lest of-the-barbarians by-the-onrush delerentur tot et tantorum veterum sacra ossa, si should-be-destroyed of-so-many and so-great old-ones the-sacred bones if ipsa in imminente periculo desererent, et sese instanti them in imminent peril they-should-desert and themselves to-pressing martyrio offerrent. Plures etiam Armoricanam Britanniam martyrdom should-offer many also Armorican Britain magno navigio petiverunt: ita ut tota ecclesia duarum with-great fleet sought so that the-whole church of-two provinciarum, Loegriæ videlicet et Northanhumbriæ, a provinces of-Loegria namely and of-Northumbria by conventibus suis desolaretur: sed hæc alias referam, cum convents its-own was-desolated but these elsewhere I-shall-relate when librum de exulatione eorum transtulero. the-book about the-exile of-them I-shall-have-translated

Ita Britones regnum amittunt

XI • SO THE BRITONS LOSE THE KINGDOM

For a long time the Britons lose the crown and the island, and the part left to them, subject to three tyrants, they waste with civil war. Nor do the Saxons yet win the crown of the island. Subject to three kings, they fight sometimes among themselves and sometimes against the Britons.

Amiserunt deinde Britones regni diadema multis lost then the-Britons of-the-kingdom the-diadem for-many temporibus, et insulæ monarchiam, nec pristinam times and of-the-island the-monarchy nor the-former dignitatem recuperare nitebantur: immo partem illam dignity to-recover strove rather part that patriæ quæ eis adhuc remanserat, non uni regi:

 of-the-country which to-them still had-remained not to-one king sed tribus tyrannis subditam, civilibus præliis sæpissime but to-three tyrants subject with-civil battles very-often vastabant. Sed nec Saxones diadema insulæ adhuc adepti they-laid-waste but nor the-Saxons the-diadem of-the-island yet gained sunt, qui tribus etiam regibus subditi, quandoque sibi have who to-three also kings subject sometimes on-them ipsis, quandoque Britonibus inquietationem inferebant. themselves sometimes on-the-Britons disturbance brought Augustinus, a Gregorio Papa missus, in Britanniam venit

XII · AUGUSTINE COMES TO BRITAIN

Pope Gregory sends Augustine to preach to the English, who have wiped out Christianity in their part of the island. Among the Britons the faith has flourished since Pope Eleutherius, with seven bishoprics, an archbishopric, and many abbeys, among them Bangor, whose monks number over two thousand. Its abbot Dinoot refuses Augustine's demand for subjection, since the Britons have their own archbishop and hate the Saxons as dogs.

Interea missus est Augustinus a beato Gregorio papa in meanwhile sent was Augustine by blessed Gregory the-pope into Britanniam, ut Anglis verbum Dei prædicaret, qui Pagana Britain that to-the-English the-word of-God he-might-preach who by-Pagan superstitione cæcati in illa insulæ parte quam habebant, superstition blinded in that of-the-island part which they-held totam deleverant Christianitatem. In parte autem Britonum all had-destroyed Christianity in the-part moreover of-the-Britons adhuc vigeat Christianitas, quæ a tempore Eleutherii papæ still flourished Christianity which from the-time of-Eleutherius the-pope habita, nunquam inter eos defecerat. Postquam autem venit held never among them had-failed after moreover came Augustinus, invenit in eorum provincia septem Episcopatus et Augustine he-found in their province seven Bishopricks and Archiepiscopatum religiosissimis præsulibus munitos, et abbatias an-Archbishopric with-most-religious prelates furnished and abbeys complures: in quibus grex domini rectum ordinem tenebat. very-many in which the-flock of-the-Lord right order kept Inter ceteros, erat in civitate Bangor quædam nobilissima among the-others was in the-city Bangor a-certain most-noble ecclesia, in qua tantus fertur fuisse numerus monachorum, church in which so-great is-said to-have-been the-number of-monks ut cum in septem portiones esset cum præpositis sibi that when into seven portions was with set-over to-them Prioribus monasterium divisum, nulla harum portio minus Priors the-monastery divided no of-these portion less quam trecentos monachos haberet: qui omnes labore manuum than three-hundred monks had who all by-the-labor of-hands suarum vivebant. Abbas autem eorum Dinoot vocabatur: their-own lived the-Abbot moreover of-them Dinoot was-called miro modo liberalibus artibus eruditus. Qui Augustino in-wondrous manner in-the-liberal arts learned who to-Augustine petenti ab episcopis Britonum subjectionem, et suadenti ut seeking from the-bishops of-the-Britons subjection and urging that secum genti Anglorum communem evangelizandi laborem with-him for-the-people of-the-English common of-evangelizing the-labor susciperent: diversis argumentationibus, ipsos ei nullam they-should-undertake with-diverse arguments they to-him no subjectionem debere respondit, nec suam prædicationem subjection to-owe answered nor their-own preaching inimicis suis impendere: cum et suum Archipræsulem on-enemies their-own to-spend since both their-own Archprelate habent, et gens Saxonum patriam propriam eisdem they-had and the-people of-the-Saxons country own from-the-same auferre perstarent. Unde eos summo habebant odio: to-take-away persisted whence them in-the-highest they-held hatred fidemque et religionem eorum pro nihilo habebant: nec in and-the-faith and religion of-them for nothing they-held nor in aliquo Anglis magis quam canibus communicabant. anything with-the-English more than with-dogs they-communed

Ethelfridus, rex Northumbriæ, monachos Britones interficit

XIII · ETHELFRID KILLS THE MONKS OF BANGOR

Ethelbert of Kent, angered that the Britons spurn Augustine, urges Ethelfrid of Northumbria to destroy Bangor. At Leicester, where monks and hermits have gathered to pray for their people, Ethelfrid defeats Brocmail and has twelve hundred monks killed, crowned that day with martyrdom. The British leaders Bledericus of Cornwall, Margadud, and Cadvan then wound and rout Ethelfrid, killing ten thousand of his men, though Bledericus falls.

Ethelbertus ergo rex Cantiorum, ut vidit Britones Ethelbert therefore king of-the-Kentishmen when he-saw the-Britons dedignantes subjectionem Augustino facere, et eosdem disdaining subjection to-Augustine to-make and the-same prædicationem suam spernere: hoc gravissime ferens, preaching his-own to-spurn this most-grievously bearing Ethelfridum regem Northanhumborum, et ceteros regulos Ethelfrid king of-the-Northumbrians and the-other petty-kings Saxonum instimulavit, ut collecto grandi exercitu, in of-the-Saxons goaded that gathered a-great army upon civitatem Bangor abbatem Dinoot et ceteros clericos, qui eos the-city Bangor the-abbot Dinoot and the-other clerics who them spernerent, perditum irent. Acquiescentes ergo consilio spurned to-destroy they-should-go assenting therefore to-the-counsel ejus, collegerunt mirabilem exercitum, et provinciam Britonum of-him they-gathered a-wondrous army and the-province of-the-Britons petentes, venerunt Legecestriam, ubi Brocmail consul urbis seeking came to-Leicester where Brocmail consul of-the-city adventum eorum expectabat. Venerant autem ad eandem the-coming of-them awaited had-come moreover to the-same civitatem ex diversis Britonum provinciis innumerabiles city from diverse of-the-Britons provinces countless monachi et eremitæ, et maxime de civitate Bangor, ut pro monks and hermits and especially from the-city Bangor that for salute populi sui orarent. Collectis igitur undique the-safety of-the-people their-own they-might-pray gathered therefore from-everywhere exercitibus, Ethelfridus rex Northanhumborum prælium inivit armies Ethelfrid king of-the-Northumbrians battle entered cum Brocmail: qui pauciori numero militum resistens, ad with Brocmail who with-a-smaller number of-knights resisting at ultimum relicta civitate, sed prius maxima strage hostibus the-last left the-city but first very-great slaughter on-the-enemies illata, diffugit. At Ethelfridus civitate capta, cum intellexisset inflicted fled but Ethelfrid the-city taken when he-had-understood causam adventus prædictorum monachorum, jussit in eos the-cause of-the-coming of-the-aforesaid monks ordered against them primum arma verti, et sic mille ducenti eorum in first arms to-be-turned and so thousand two-hundred of-them on ipsa die martyrio decorati, regni cælestis adepti that-very day with-martyrdom adorned of-the-kingdom heavenly gained sunt sedem. Deinde cum prædictus Saxonum tyrannus have a-seat then when the-aforesaid of-the-Saxons tyrant Bangornensium urbem peteret: audita ipsius insania, venerunt of-the-men-of-Bangor the-city sought heard of-him the-madness came undique obviam illi duces Britonum, Bledericus videlicet from-everywhere in-the-way to-him the-leaders of-the-Britons Bledericus namely dux Cornubiæ, et Margadud rex Demetorum, Caduanus duke of-Cornwall and Margadud king of-the-Demetians Cadvan Venedotorum: et conserto prælio, ipsum vulneratum in of-the-Venedotians and joined battle him wounded into fugam propulerunt: sed et tantum numerum exercitus ejus flight drove but also so-great number of-the-army of-him peremerunt, ita quod decem milia circiter, et sexaginta they-slew so that ten thousand about and sixty sex corruerunt. In parte etiam Britonum cecidit Bledericus six fell on the-side also of-the-Britons fell Bledericus dux Cornubiæ, qui ducatum in eisdem præliis præstabat. duke of-Cornwall who the-leadership in the-same battles furnished

BOOK XII

Britannia tota inter Cadvanum et Ethelfridum dividitur

I · CADVAN AND ETHELFRID

The British princes make Cadvan king at Leicester and pursue Ethelfrid beyond the Humber, but friends make peace between them, Ethelfrid holding the land beyond the Humber and Cadvan the land this side of it. Ethelfrid's cast-off wife, pregnant, takes refuge with Cadvan and bears her son there; Cadvan's queen, who conceived at the same time, bears a son a little after. The boys, Cadwallo and Edwin, are raised together and sent to King Salomon of Armorica, where they win fame in war.

Exin convenerunt omnes principes Britonum in civitatem thereafter came-together all the-princes of-the-Britons into the-city Legecestriam, communemque assensum habuerunt, ut Leicester and-common assent they-had that Cadvanum facerent sibi regem, ipsoque duce Cadvan they-should-make for-themselves king and-him as-leader Ethelfridum ultra Humbrum persequerentur. Insignitoque Ethelfrid beyond the-Humber they-should-pursue and-crowned illo regni diademate, undique confluentes Humbrum him of-the-kingdom with-the-diadem from-everywhere flocking the-Humber præterierunt. Cumque id Ethelfrido nunciatum esset, they-passed and-when this to-Ethelfrid announced had-been associavit sibi omnes reges Saxonum, obviusque Cadvano he-joined to-himself all the-kings of-the-Saxons and-in-the-way to-Cadvan perrexerunt. Denique cum catervas suas in utraque parte went-forward finally when companies their-own on either side statuerent, venerunt amici eorum, talique pacto pacem inter they-set came friends of-them and-on-such terms peace between eos fecerunt: ut Ethelfridus trans Humbrum: Cadvanus them made that Ethelfrid across the-Humber Cadvan vero citra Humbrum fluvium Britanniam possiderent. but this-side-of the-Humber river Britain should-possess Cum autem conventionem suam obsidibus jurejurando when moreover agreement their-own with-hostages by-oath confirmassent, orta est tanta amicitia inter eos, ut omnia they-had-confirmed arisen has so-great friendship between them that all-things sua communia haberent. Interea contigit ut expulsa propria their-own common they-held meanwhile it-happened that expelled own conjugē Ethelfridus aliam duceret: expulsamque tanto haberet wife Ethelfrid another married and-the-expelled in-such held odio, ut eam ex regno Northanhumbriæ expelleret. Porro hatred that her from the-kingdom of-Northumbria he-drove further illa puerum in utero habens regem Caduanum adivit: orans she a-child in womb having king Cadvan approached praying ut ejus interventione marito suo resociaretur. Cumque that his by-the-intervention to-husband her-own she-might-be-reunited and-when id ab Ethelfrido nullatenus impetrari potuisset: remansit this from Ethelfrid in-no-way to-be-obtained could-have remained illa in thalamo Caduani, donec dies partus filium quem she in the-chamber of-Cadvan until the-day of-birth the-son whom conceperat in mundum produxit. Natus est etiam paulo she-had-conceived into the-world brought-forth born was also a-little post Caduano regi filius ex regina conjugē sua: nam after to-Cadvan the-king a-son from the-queen wife his-own for et illa eodem tempore gravida facta fuerat, exin nutriti also she at-the-same time pregnant made had-been thereafter reared sunt pueri, ut regium genus decebat, quorum alter videlicet were the-boys as royal race befitted of-whom one namely Caduallo nuncupatur, alter vero Edwinus. Interea cum Cadwallō is-called the-other but Edwin meanwhile when progressior ætas ipsos in adolescentiam promovisset: miserunt more-advanced age them into youth had-promoted sent eos parentes ad Salomonem regem Armoricanorum Britonum, them the-parents to Salomon king of-the-Armorican Britons ut in domo ejus documenta militiæ, ceterarumque that in the-house of-him the-lessons of-knighthood and-of-other curialium consuetudinem addicerent. Excepti itaque diligenter courtly the-custom they-might-learn received and-so diligently ab eo, in familiaritatem ipsius accedere cœperunt; ita ut non by him into intimacy of-him to-approach they-began so that not esset alter ætatis eorum in curia, qui posset cum rege there-was another of-age their in the-court who could with the-king aut esse secretius, aut loqui jucundius. Denique frequenter either to-be more-privately or to-speak more-pleasantly finally frequently ante illum in præliis congressum cum hostibus faciebant: before him in battles encounter with the-enemies they-made virtutemque suam præclaris probitatibus famosam agebant. and-valor their-own by-splendid feats-of-prowess famous they-made Cadwallo pactum cum Edwino facit, postea interrumpit

II • CADWALLO AND EDWIN

Returning after their fathers' deaths, Cadwallo and Edwin rule as friends, until Edwin asks leave to wear a crown in Northumbria. At the parley by the Douglas, Cadwallo's nephew Brian weeps onto the king's face. The Britons, Brian says, have had no prince to restore them since Malgo, and the Saxons, who betrayed Vortigern, Aurelius, Arthur, and Careticus, should be crushed, not exalted.

Succedente tandem tempore, defunctis parentibus in succeeding at-last time having-died the-parents into Britanniam reversi sunt, susceptoque regni gubernaculo, Britain returned they-have and-taken-up of-the-kingdom the-helm eam amicitiam, quam prius patres eorum habuerant, that friendship which before the-fathers of-them had-had exercere cœperunt. Emenso deinde biennio, rogavit to-practice they-began having-passed then two-years asked Cadwallonem Edwinus, ut sibi diadema habere Cadwallo Edwin that to-himself the-diadem to-have liceret, celebraretque statutas solennitates in it-might-be-allowed and-he-might-celebrate the-appointed solemnities in partibus Northanhumbroꝝ, quemadmodum ipse citra the-parts of-the-Northumbrians as he this-side-of Humbrum antiquo more consueverat. Cumque inde juxta the-Humber in-the-ancient manner had-been-wont and-when thereof beside fluvium Douglas colloquium facere incœpissent, disponentibus the-river Douglas a-parley to-bold they-had-begun arranging sapientioribus ut melius fieri poterat: jacebat Cadwallo in the-wiser that better to-be-done it-could lay Cadwallo on alia parte fluminis in gremio cujusdam nepotis sui, quem the-other side of-the-river in the-lap of-a-certain nephew his-own whom Brianum appellabant. At dum legati hinc et inde Brian they-called but while the-envoys from-here and from-there mutua responsa deferrent, flevit Brianus, lacrimæque ex oculis mutual answers carried wept Brian and-tears from the-eyes ejus manantes ita ceciderunt, ut faciem regis et barbam of-him flowing so fell that the-face of-the-king and beard irrorarent. Qui imbrem cecidisse ratus, erexit vultum suum, they-bedewed who rain to-have-fallen having-thought raised face his-own vidensque juvenem in fletum solutum, causam tam subitæ and-seeing the-youth into weeping dissolved the-cause of-so sudden mœstitiæ inquisivit. Cui ille: Flendum mihi est, gentique grief asked to-whom he to-be-wept by-me it-is and-for-the-people Britonum perpetuo: quæ a tempore Malgonis barbarorum of-the-Britons perpetually which from the-time of-Malgo of-the-barbarians irruptione vexata, nondum adepta est talem principem, qui by-the-onrush harried not-yet obtained has such a-prince who eam ad pristinam dignitatem reduceret. Adhuc etiam id it to former dignity might-lead-back still also that tantillum honoris quod ei remanebat, te patiente, minuitur, so-little of-honor which to-it remained thee permitting is-diminished cum advenæ Saxones, qui semper proditores ejus extiterant, since the-foreign Saxons who always betrayers of-it had-been in uno cum illa regio diademate incipiant insigniri. Nomine in one with it royal diadem begin to-be-crowned by-the-name etenim regis elati, famosiores per patriam ex qua venerunt for of-king elated more-famous through the-country from which they-came efficientur, citiusque concives suos invitare poterunt, they-will-be-made and-more-quickly fellow-citizens their-own to-invite they-will-be-able qui genus nostrum exterminare insistent. Consueverunt who race our to-exterminate will-press-on they-have-been-wont namque proditionem semper facere, nec ulli firmam fidem for treachery always to-do nor to-anyone firm faith tenere. Unde a nobis opprimendos esse, non exaltandos to-keep whence by us to-be-crushed to-be not to-be-exalted censerem. Cum ipsos primo rex Vortegirnus retinuit, sub I-should-judge when them first king Vortigern retained under umbra pacis remanserunt, quasi pro patria pugnaturi: sed the-shadow of-peace they-remained as-if for the-country about-to-fight but cum nequitiam suam manifestare quiverunt, malum pro bono when wickedness their-own to-show they-could evil for good reddentes, prodiderunt eum, populumque regni sæva returning they-betrayed him and-the-people of-the-kingdom with-savage clade affecerunt. Prodiderunt deinde Aurelium Ambrosium: disaster afflicted they-betrayed then Aurelius Ambrosius cui post horribilia sacramenta, una cum eo convivantes, to-whom after dreadful oaths together with him feasting venenum potare dederunt. Prodiderunt quoque Arturum, poison to-drink they-gave they-betrayed also Arthur quando cum Modredo nepote suo, postposito jure quo when with Mordred nephew his-own set-aside the-law by-which obligati fuerant, contra illum dimicaverunt. Postremo Caretico bound they-had-been against him they-fought finally to-Careticus regi fidem mentientes, Gormondum Africanorum regem the-king faith belying Gormund of-the-Africans king super ipsum conduxerunt: cujus inquietatione et patria upon him they-brought whose by-the-disturbance both the-country civibus erepta est, et prædictus rex indecenter expulsus. from-the-citizens snatched was and the-aforesaid king shamefully expelled

De ira inter Cadwallonem et Edwinum coorta

III · THE ANGER BETWEEN CADWALLO AND EDWIN

Cadwallo repents of the pact and tells Edwin that his counselors will not allow an island of one crown to be under two crowned kings. Edwin leaves in anger, saying he will be crowned without Cadwallo's leave. Cadwallo replies that he will cut off his head under the crown if he presumes to be crowned in Britain.

Hæc eo dicente, pœnituit Cadwallonem incœptæ pactionis: these him saying it-repented Cadwallo of-the-begun pact mandavitque Edwino, quod nullatenus a consiliariis and-sent-word to-Edwin that in-no-way from counselors suis impetrare poterat, ut permitterent eum petitioni his-own to-obtain he-could that they-should-permit him to-the-petition illius acquiescere. Aiebant enim contra jus veterumque of-him to-assent they-said for against the-law and-of-the-ancients traditionem esse, insulam unius coronæ duobus coronatis tradition to-be the-island of-one crown to-two crowned-ones submitti debere. Iratus igitur Edwinus, dimisso colloquio, to-be-submitted to-be-bound angered therefore Edwin dismissed the-parley secessit in Northanhumbriam, dicens sese sine licentia withdrew into Northumbria saying himself without the-leave Cadwallonis regali diademate initiandum. Quod cum of-Cadwallo with-royal diadem to-be-initiated which when Cadwalloni indicatum esset, nuntiavit ei per legatos, to-Cadwallo indicated had-been be-announced to-him through envoys se amputaturum ei caput sub diademate, si intra himself about-to-cut-off from-him the-head under the-diadem if within regnum Britanniae coronari præsumeret. the-kingdom of-Britain to-be-crowned he-should-presume Edwinus Cadwallonem a regno fugat

IV · EDWIN DRIVES CADWALLO FROM THE KINGDOM

Cadwallo is defeated beyond the Humber and flees to Ireland, and Edwin ravages the Britons' lands. The Spanish augur Pellitus foretells every landing, so that Edwin wrecks Cadwallo's ships at every port. Sailing for Armorica, Cadwallo's fleet is scattered by a storm and his ship barely reaches Guernsey, where he refuses food until he craves game, and Brian, finding none, cuts flesh from his own thigh and serves it as venison, and the king recovers and comes to Salomon.

Orta igitur discordia inter eos, cum utrorumque homines having-arisen therefore discord between them when of-both the-men sese plurimis decertationibus inquietavissent: convenerunt each-other with-very-many contests had-barried came-together ambo ultra Humbrum, factoque congressu, amisit Cadwallo both beyond the-Humber and-made the-encounter lost Cadwallo multa millia suorum, et in fugam versus est. Arrepto many thousands of-his-own and into flight turned was taken quoque per Albaniam itinere, Hiberniam insulam adivit. also through Albany the-way Ireland island he-approached

At Edwinus ut triumpho potitus fuit, ducit exercitum but Edwin when of-the-triumph gained had he-leads army suum per provincias Britonum: combustisque civitatibus, his-own through the-provinces of-the-Britons and-burned cities cives et colonos pluribus tormentis affecit. Dum autem citizens and settlers with-very-many torments afflicted while moreover sævitix suæ indulgeret, conabatur Cadwallo semper navigio to-savagery his-own he-indulged tried Cadwallo always by-ship in patriam suam reverti: nec poterat: quia ad quemcunque into country his-own to-return nor could because at whatever portum applicare incipiebat, obviabat ei Edwinus cum port to-land he-began met him Edwin with multitudo sua, introitumque ei negabat. Venerat namque multitude his-own and-entry to-him denied had-come for ad eum quidam sapientissimus augur ex Hispania, vocabulo to him a-certain most-wise augur from Spain by-name Pellitus, qui volatus volucrum cursusque stellarum edoctus, Pellitus who in-the-flights of-birds and-the-courses of-the-stars instructed prædicebat ei omnia infortunia quæ accidebant. Unde foretold to-him all misfortunes which befell whence reditu Cadwallonis notificato, obviavit ei Edwinus, navesque the-return of-Cadwallo made-known met him Edwin and-the-ships ejus illidebat, ita ut mersis sociis eidem omnem portum of-him dashed so that drowned the-comrades to-the-same every port abnegaret. Nescius ergo Cadwallo quid faceret, cum fere he-denied not-knowing therefore Cadwallo what he-should-do when almost in desperationem revertendi incidisset: tandem apud se into despair of-returning he-had-fallen at-last with himself deliberat, quod Salomonem regem Armoricanorum Britonum deliberates that Salomon king of-the-Armorican Britons adiret, rogaretque illum auxilium et consilium, quo he-should-approach and-ask him help and counsel by-which in regnum suum reverti quivisset. Cumque vela Armoricam into kingdom his-own to-return he-might-be-able and-when the-sails Armorica versus dirigeret, tempestates ex improviso validæ ruunt, toward he-directed storms from unforeseen strong rush disperguntque naves sociorum ejus, ita ut in brevi nulla and-scatter the-ships of-the-comrades of-him so that in short none cum altera remaneret. Invasit ilico timor nimius rectorem with another remained seized on-the-spot fear excessive the-steersman navis regis, quam, relicto remige, dispositioni fortunæ of-the-ship of-the-king which abandoned the-oarsman to-the-disposal of-fortune commisit. Ut igitur cum periculo mortis tota nocte inter he-committed when therefore with peril of-death the-whole night among obstantes undas nunc huc nunc illuc expulsa fuit: in opposing waves now hither now thither driven it-had-been at sequentis diei aurora applicuerunt in quandam insulam quæ of-the-following day the-dawn they-landed on a-certain island which Garnareia nuncupatur: ubi maximo labore nacti sunt Guernsey is-called where with-the-greatest labor gained they-have tellurem. Occupavit continuo Cadwallonem tantus dolor et the-land seized at-once Cadwallo such grief and ira ob suorum sociorum amissionem, ut tribus diebus wrath on-account-of of-bis-own comrades the-loss that for-three days et noctibus cibo vesci aspernaretur, ac in lecto infirmatus and nights on-food to-feed he-disdained and in bed weakened jaceret. Quarto deinde instante die cœpit eum maxima lay on-the-fourth then approaching day began him a-very-great cupiditas edendi ferinam carnem: vocatoque Briano, indicavit desire of-eating game flesh and-called Brian he-indicated quod concupiscebatur. At ille sumpto arcu cum pharetra, cœpit what he-desired but he taken the-bow with the-quiver began ire per insulam, ut si casus aliquam feram offerret, escam to-go through the-island that if chance some wild-beast should-offer food ille ex ea acquireret. Cumque eam totam pergrasset, nec id he from it might-acquire and-when it all he-had-traversed nor that quod quærebat reperisset, maximis cruciatus est angustiis, which he-sought had-found with-the-greatest tormented he-was distresses quia domini subvenire nequiret affectui. Timebat ei because of-his-lord to-come-to-the-aid he-could-not to-the-craving he-feared for-him ne mors infirmitatem illius subsequeretur, si appetitum suum lest death the-sickness of-him should-follow if appetite his-own explere non valuisset. Usus ergo arte nova, scidit femur to-fill not he-had-been-able having-used therefore art new he-cut thigh suum, et inde frustum carnis abstraxit: paratoque veru torruit his-own and thence a-piece of-flesh drew-off and-prepared the-spit roasted illud, et ad regem pro venatione portavit. Mox ille ferinam it and to the-king for venison carried soon he game carnem esse existimans, cœpit ea vesci et sese reficere, flesh to-be thinking began on-it to-feed and himself to-refresh admirans, quod tantam dulcedinem in aliis carnibus non marveling that such sweetness in other meats not reperisset. Satiatus tandem, hilarior factus est et levior, he-had-found sated at-last more-cheerful made he-was and lighter ita ut post tres dies totus sanus fieret. Incumbente deinde so that after three days wholly sound he-became pressing then congruo vento, armamenta navis parant: erectoque velo a-fitting wind the-tackle of-the-ship they-prepare and-raised the-sail æquoreum iter aggrediuntur, et in Kidaletam urbem applicant. the-sea way they-undertake and at Kidaleta city they-land Deinde venientes ad regem Salomonem, suscepti ab illo sunt then coming to king Salomon received by him they-were benigne, et ut decebat venerati: et cum causam adventus kindly and as befitted honored and when the-cause of-the-coming eorum didicisset, auxilium eis in hunc sermonem promisit. of-them he-had-learned help to-them in this speech promised

Salomonis regis Armorici oratio

V · THE SPEECH OF KING SALOMON OF ARMORICA

Salomon grieves that the Britons have lost so fruitful an island and cannot resist the English, whom his own people despise. While Armorica's people and the island's were one, only the Romans could conquer them, and only through the nobles' discord. Since Maximianus and Conan came to Armorica, weaker heirs have lost the kingdom to invaders, while his own Britons still defend Armorica against all its neighbors.

Dolendum nobis est, egregii juvenes, patriam avorum to-be-grieved by-us it-is O-excellent youths the-country of-the-grandfathers vestrorum a Barbara gente oppressam esse, et vos your by a-Barbarian people oppressed to-be and you ignominiose expulsos. Et cum ceteri homines regna sua ignominiously expelled and when other men kingdoms their-own tueri queant, mirum est populum vestrum tam fœcundam to-defend are-able wondrous it-is people your so fruitful insulam amisisse: nec genti Anglorum, quam nostrates pro an-island to-have-lost nor the-people of-the-English whom our-countrymen for vili habent, resistere posse. Dum gens hujus meæ Britanniae vile hold to-resist to-be-able while the-people of-this my Britain una cum vestratibus in vestra Britannia cohabitaret, together with your-countrymen in your Britain dwelt dominabatur omnium provincialium regnorum, nec fuit uspiam it-ruled of-all provincial kingdoms nor was anywhere populus, præter Romanos, qui eam subjugare quivisset. Nec a-people except the-Romans who it to-subjugate could-have nor hoc quidem per suam potestatem Romani fecerunt, ut this indeed through their-own power the-Romans did as mihi nuper dictum est: sed per dissidium inter nobiles to-me lately told it-has-been but through discord among the-nobles dictæ insulæ ortum. Romani autem, licet eam ad tempus of-the-said island arisen the-Romans moreover though it for a-time subditam habuissent, amissis rectoribus suis ac interfectis, subject they-had-held lost rulers their-own and killed cum dedecore expulsi abscesserunt. Sed postquam Maximiano with dishonor expelled departed but after Maximianus et Conano ducibus ad hanc venerunt provinciam, residui and Conan as-leaders to this they-came province the-remnant qui remanserunt nunquam eam deinceps gratiam habuerunt, who remained never that thereafter grace had ut regni diadema continue haberent. Quanquam enim that of-the-kingdom the-diadem continually they-should-have although for multi principes eorum antiquam patrum dignitatem servarent, many princes of-them the-ancient of-the-fathers dignity kept plures tamen debiliores heredes succedebant, qui eam penitus, more yet weaker heirs succeeded who it utterly invadentibus hostibus, amittebant. Unde debilitatem populi invading enemies lost whence the-weakness of-the-people vestri doleo, cum ex eodem genere simus: et sic Britones your I-grieve since from the-same race we-are and so Britons nominentur, sicut et gens regni quæ patriam, quam they-are-named as also the-people of-the-kingdom which the-country which videtis, omnibus vicinis adversatam viriliter tuetur.” you-see to-all neighbors opposed manfully defends Cadwallonis responsum

VI · CADWALLO'S REPLY

Cadwallo answers that the nobles followed Maximianus and Conan, leaving the ignoble to inherit their honors, who, as Gildas testifies, gave themselves to pride, fornication, and every vice. Kings were anointed for cruelty and killed for mildness, and the clergy sinned with the laity, so God sent a foreign people to punish them. He asks for help as Salomon's kinsman, since both descend from Malgo, whose son Runo's daughter was Salomon's ancestress.

Postquam his et aliis finem dicendi fecit, aliquantulum, after to-these and others an-end of-speaking he-made somewhat verecundans Cadwallo, in hunc modum respondit: "Gratias abashed Cadwallo in this manner answered thanks multimodas tibi ago, rex, regibus atavis edite: quia manifold to-thee I-give O-king from-kings ancestral sprung because auxilium mihi promittis, ut regnum meum recuperem. Hoc help to-me thou-promisest that kingdom my I-may-recover this autem quod dicebas, mirum esse gentem meam non servasse moreover which thou-saidst wondrous to-be people my not to-have-kept avorum dignitatem, postquam Britones ad has provincias of-the-grandfathers the-dignity after the-Britons to these provinces venerunt: nequaquam id admirandum censeo. Nobiliores came by-no-means that to-be-wondered-at I-judge the-nobler namque totius regni prædictos duces secuti fuerunt, et for of-the-whole kingdom the-aforesaid leaders followed had and ignobiles remanserunt, qui ipsorum potiti sunt honoribus. the-ignoble remained who of-them gained have the-honors Qui cum vicem nobilium obtinere cœpissent, extulerunt who when the-place of-the-nobles to-hold they-had-begun raised se ultra quam dignitas expetebat, et ob divitiarum themselves beyond what dignity required and on-account-of of-riches affluentiam superbi, cœperunt tali et tantæ fornicationi the-abundance proud they-began to-such and so-great fornication indulgere, qualis nec inter gentes audita est: et (ut to-indulge as not-even among the-gentiles heard has-been and as Gildas historicus testatur) non solum hoc vitium, sed omnia Gildas the-historian testifies not only this vice but all-things quæ humanæ naturæ accidere solent, perpetrarunt. Et invaluit which to-human nature to-befall are-wont they-perpetrated and prevailed præcipue, quod totius boni evertit statum, odium veritatis especially what of-all good overturns the-state hatred of-truth cum assertoribus suis: amorque mendacii cum fabricatoribus with asserters its-own and-love of-falsehood with fabricators suis: susceptio mali pro bono: veneratio nequitiae pro its-own acceptance of-evil for good veneration of-wickedness for benignitate: exceptio Satanæ pro Angelo lucis. Ungebantur kindness reception of-Satan for an-Angel of-light were-anointed reges non propter Deum, sed qui ceteris crudeliores kings not for-the-sake-of God but who than-the-others crueler exstarent: et paulo post ab unctoribus, non pro veri stood-out and a-little after by the-anointers not for of-the-truth examinatione, trucidabantur: aliis electis trucioribus. Si quis examination were-butchered others chosen more-savage if any vero eorum mitior, et veritati aliquatenus propior videretur, indeed of-them milder and to-truth somewhat nearer seemed in hunc quasi Britanniae subversorem, omnium odia against this-one as-if of-Britain the-subverter of-all the-hatreds telaque torquebantur. Denique omnia quæ Deo placebant and-weapons were-burled finally all-things which to-God pleased et displicebant, æquali lance inter eos pendebant, si non and displeased in-an-equal balance among them weighed if not graviora essent displicentia. Itaque agebantur cuncta quæ heavier were the-displeasing and-so were-done all-things which saluti erant contraria: ac si nihil medicinæ a vero omnium to-salvation were contrary as if no of-medicine by the-true of-all medico largiretur. Et non solum hoc seculares viri, sed et physician were-bestowed and not only this secular men but also ipse grex domini, ejusque pastores sine discretione faciebant. itself the-flock of-the-Lord and-its shepherds without discernment did Non igitur admirandum est, degeneres tales, Deo ob not therefore to-be-wondered-at it-is degenerates such to-God on-account-of talia scelera invidiosos, patriam illam amittere, quam prædicto such crimes hateful the-country that to-lose which in-the-aforesaid modo maculaverant. Volebat etenim Deus vindictam ex ipsis manner they-had-defiled wished for God vengeance from them sumere, dum externum populum supervenire passus est, qui to-take while a-foreign people to-come-upon allowed has who nos patriis agris exterminaret. Dignum tamen esset, us from-ancestral fields should-drive-out worthy yet it-would-be si Deus permitteret, cives pristinae dignitati restituere: ne if God should-permit the-citizens to-former dignity to-restore lest generi nostro opprobrium sit, nos debiles fuisse rectores, qui to-race our reproach it-be we weak to-have-been rulers who tempore nostro in id non desudaverimus. Idem etenim nobis in-time our at it not have-toiled the-same for to-us atavus fuit: unde auxilium tuum securius postulo. Malgo ancestor was whence help thy more-securely I-ask Malgo namque summus ille rex Britanniae, qui post Arturum quartus for highest that king of-Britain who after Arthur fourth regnaverat, duos genuit filios, quorum unus Ennianus, alter had-reigned two begot sons of-whom one Ennianus the-other vero Runo vocabatur. Ennianus autem genuit Belin: Belin but Runo was-called Ennianus moreover begot Belin Belin Iagonem: Iago Caduanum patrem meum. Runo autem, qui Iago Iago Cadvan father my Runo moreover who post obitum fratris expulsus fuit inquietatione Saxonum, after the-death of-the-brother expelled was by-the-disturbance of-the-Saxons hanc provinciam adivit: deditque filiam suam Hoelo duci, this province approached and-gave daughter his-own to-Hoel the-duke filio magni Hoeli: qui cum Arturo patrias subjugaverat. the-son of-great Hoel who with Arthur the-countries had-subjugated Ex illa natus est Alanus; ex Alano Hoelus pater tuus, qui from her born was Alan from Alan Hoel father thy who dum vixit, toti Galliæ non minimum inferebat timorem.” while he-lived on-all Gaul not the-least brought fear

Brianus Edwini Magum occidit

VII • BRIAN KILLS EDWIN'S MAGUS

Brian crosses to Britain in a beggar's clothes with a sharp iron staff to kill the augur Pellitus. Among the poor at Edwin's gate in York he meets his sister, carried off by Edwin from Worcester, who points out the Magus. Brian stabs Pellitus under the breast and escapes to Exeter, which he fortifies, and King Penda of Mercia besieges him there.

Interea hiemante eo apud Salomonem consilium inierunt, ut meanwhile wintering him with Salomon counsel they-entered that Brianus in Britanniam transfretaret, Magumque Edwini regis Brian into Britain should-cross and-the-Magus of-Edwin the-king aliquo modo perimeret, ne solita arte adventum Cadwallonis in-some way should-slay lest by-wonted art the-coming of-Cadwallo ei indicaret. Cumque in portum Hamonis applicuisset, to-him he-should-indicate and-when into the-port of-Hamo he-had-landed finxit se intra vestimenta cujusdam pauperis, pauperem: he-feigned himself within the-clothes of-a-certain poor-man a-poor-man fecitque sibi baculum ferreum et acutum, quo Magum and-made for-himself a-staff iron and sharp with-which the-Magus interficeret, si illum casus obtulisset. Deinde perrexit he-might-kill if him chance should-have-offered then he-went-on Eboracum. Nam tunc Edwinus in eadem urbe manebat. Ut to-York for then Edwin in the-same city stayed when igitur illam ingressus est, associavit se pauperibus, qui ante therefore it entered he-has he-joined himself to-the-poor who before januam regis eleemosynam expectabant. Eunte autem eo the-door of-the-king alms awaited going moreover him et redeunte, egressa est soror ejus ex aula, habens pelvim and returning gone-out has the-sister of-him from the-hall having a-basin quandam in manu, ut aquam reginæ apportaret: illam certain in hand that water to-the-queen she-might-bring her rapuerat Edwinus ex urbe Wigornensium, dum post fugam had-carried-off Edwin from the-city of-the-Worcester-men while after the-flight Cadwallonis in provincias Britonum desæviret. Cum itaque of-Cadwallo on the-provinces of-the-Britons he-raged when and-so ante Brianum præteriret, agnovit eam continuo, et in fletum before Brian she-passed he-recognized her at-once and into weeping solutus, eam demissa voce vocavit. Ad vocem ergo ipsius, dissolved her with-lowered voice called at the-voice therefore of-him faciem puella vertens, dubitavit primo quis ipse esset: at ut face the-girl turning doubted at-first who he was but when propius accessit, agnito fratre, pene in extasim collapsa nearer she-approached recognized the-brother almost into a-swoon collapsed est, timens ne aliquo infortunio notificatus ab hostibus she-has fearing lest by-some misfortune made-known by the-enemies caperetur. Postpositisque osculis et familiaribus verbis, indicavit he-be-taken and-set-aside kisses and familiar words she-indicated fratri breviter, quasi aliud loquens, statum curiæ, et to-the-brother briefly as-if other-things speaking the-state of-the-court and Magum, quem ipse quærebat, qui forte tunc inter pauperes the-Magus whom he sought who by-chance then among the-poor deambulabat, dum eleemosyna eisdem distribueretur. Porro walked-about while alms to-the-same were-distributed further Brianus, ut viri notitia usus est, præcepit sorori, Brian when of-the-man with-the-knowledge used has instructed to-the-sister nocte sequenti ex thalamis furtim egredi, et ad se extra on-night the-following from the-chambers stealthily to-go-out and to him outside urbem juxta quoddam templum vetus venire, ubi ipse adventum the-city beside a-certain temple old to-come where he the-coming ejus in crepidinibus loci expectaret. Deinde intromisit of-her in the-recesses of-the-place would-await then he-put se intra turbam pauperum, in parte illa ubi Pellitus himself within the-crowd of-the-poor in the-part that where Pellitus ipsos collocabat. Nec mora: cum aditum percutiendi habebat, them placed nor delay when access of-striking he-had erexit burdonem quem supra dixi, infixitque Magum sub he-raised the-pilgrim's-staff which above I-said and-fixed the-Magus under pectore, atque eodem ictu interfecit. Mox projecto baculo the-breast and with-the-same blow killed soon thrown-away the-staff inter ceteros delituit pauperes, nulli astantium suspectus, et among the-other he-hid poor to-none of-the-bystanders suspected and præfata latibula favente Deo petivit. At soror, instante jam the-aforesaid hiding-places favoring God sought but the-sister approaching now nocte pluribus modis egredi conata est: nec valuit, quia Edwinus night in-many ways to-go-out tried has nor was-able because Edwin ob necem Pelliti exterritus, vigiles circa curiam posuerat, on-account-of the-killing of-Pellitus terrified watchmen around the-court had-placed qui quæque abdita explorantes, egressum ei abnegabant. who all hidden-places exploring exit to-her denied Cumque id comperisset Brianus, recessit ex illo loco, ivitque and-when this he-had-learned Brian withdrew from that place and-went Exoniam, ubi convocatis Britonibus, ea quæ fecerat, to-Exeter where called-together the-Britons those-things which he-had-done notificavit. Missis postmodum ad Cadwallonem legatis, munivit made-known sent afterward to Cadwallo envoys he-fortified urbem illam: mandavitque universis Britonum proceribus, ut city that and-sent-word to-all of-the-Britons the-nobles that oppida sua et civitates defensare insisterent, lætique towns their-own and cities to-defend they-should-press-on and-joyful adventum Cadwallonis expectarent, qui in brevi Salomonis the-coming of-Cadwallo should-await who in short of-Salomon auxilio fretus, eis præsidio veniret. Hoc itaque per on-the-help relying to-them for-protection would-come this and-so through totam insulam divulgato, Peanda rex Merciorum cum maxima the-whole island spread-abroad Penda king of-the-Mercians with a-very-great multitudine Saxonum venit Exoniam, Brianumque obsedit. multitude of-Saxons came to-Exeter and-Brian besieged Cadwallo Peandam, exercitu ejus fugato, captivum facit

VIII • CADWALLO CAPTURES PENDA

Cadwallo lands with ten thousand knights from Salomon and relieves Exeter, capturing Penda, who submits and gives hostages. He ravages Northumbria, and Edwin meets him with the English kings at Hevenfeld. Edwin is killed with almost all his people, his son Offrid, and Godbold, king of the Orkneys.

Interea applicuit Cadwallo cum decem millibus militum, meanwhile landed Cadwallo with ten thousands of-knights quos ei Salomon rex commiserat: petivitque celeriter whom to-him Salomon the-king had-entrusted and-sought swiftly obsidionem quam prædictus rex tenebat. Ut autem cominus the-siege which the-aforesaid king held when moreover near perrexit: divisit milites suos in quatuor partes, hostesque he-went-on he-divided knights his-own into four parts and-enemies suos adire non distulit. Conserto deinde prælio, captus his-own to-approach not delayed joined then battle taken est Peanda continuo, et exercitus ejus peremptus. Cunque was Penda at-once and the-army of-him slain and-when ipse alium aditum salutis non haberet, subdidit se he other access of-safety not had subjected himself Cadwalloni, deditque obsides, promittens sese cum illo to-Cadwallo and-gave hostages promising himself with him Saxones inquietaturum. Triumphato itaque illo, convocavit the-Saxons about-to-harass triumphed-over and-so him called-together Cadwallo proceres suos multo tempore dilapsos: petivitque Cadwallo nobles his-own for-long time scattered and-sought Northanhumbriam contra Edwinum, patriamque vastare non Northumbria against Edwin and-the-country to-lay-waste not cessavit. Quod cum Edwino nunciatum esset: associavit sibi ceased which when to-Edwin announced had-been he-joined to-himself omnes regulos Anglorum, et in campo, qui Hevenfeld all the-petty-kings of-the-English and in the-field which Hevenfeld appellatur, obviam veniens, bellum cum Britonibus commisit. is-called in-the-way coming war with the-Britons joined Illato ocyus prælio interficitur Edwinus, et totus fere brought more-swiftly the-battle is-killed Edwin and the-whole almost populus quem habebat: nec non et filius ejus Offridus cum people which he-had nor not also the-son of-him Offrid with Godboldo rege Orcadum, qui eis in auxilium venerat.

Godbold king of-the-Orkneys who to-them in help had-come Cadwallo Osricum et Ædanum in pugna occidit

IX · CADWALLO KILLS OSRIC AND AEDAN IN BATTLE

Cadwallo roams the English provinces sparing neither women nor children, meaning to wipe the English from Britain. He kills Edwin's successor Osric and his two nephews. He also kills Aedan, king of the Scots, who came to their aid.

Habita igitur victoria, Cadwallo universas Anglorum provincias had therefore the-victory Cadwallo all of-the-English provinces pervagando ita debacchatus est in Saxones, ut ne sexui by-roaming so raged has against the-Saxons that not to-sex quidem muliebri vel parvulorum ætati parceret: quoniam even female or of-little-ones to-age he-spared since omne genus Anglorum ex finibus Britanniae abrasere every race of-the-English from the-borders of-Britain to-scrape-away volens, quoscunque reperiebat, inauditis tormentis afficiebat. wishing whomever he-found with-unheard-of torments he-afflicted Deinde commisit prælium cum Osrico qui Edwino successerat: then he-joined battle with Osric who to-Edwin had-succeeded atque illum interemit, et duos nepotes ejus, qui post illum and him slew and two nephews of-him who after him regnare debuerunt. Sed et Ædanum regem Scotorum, qui to-reign ought but also Aedan king of-the-Scots who eis auxilio venerat.
to-them for-help had-come

Oswaldus rex fit Northanhumbriæ

X · OSWALD BECOMES KING OF NORTHUMBRIA

Oswald succeeds in Northumbria, and Cadwallo drives him to Severus' wall and sends Penda against him. Besieged at Hevenfeld, the heavenly field, Oswald raises the cross and has his men pray aloud to the living God against the proud British king. At dawn they win, but Cadwallo pursues the holy king, and at Burne Penda kills him.

Eis itaque interfectis, successit Oswaldus in regnum them and-so killed succeeded Oswald in the-kingdom Northanhumbriæ, quem Cadwallo post ceteros qui eum of-Northumbria whom Cadwallo after the-others who him inquietaverunt, in provinciam, usque ad murum, quem harried into the-province all-the-way to the-wall which Severus Imperator olim inter Britanniam Scotiamque Severus the-Emperor once between Britain and-Scotland construxerat, fugavit. Postea misit Peandam regem had-built put-to-flight afterward he-sent Penda king Merciorum, et maximam partem sui exercitus ad of-the-Mercians and the-greatest part of-his-own army to eundem locum, ut cum eo bellum consereret. At Oswaldus, the-same place that with him war he-might-join but Oswald dum a prædicto Peanda, in loco qui vocatur Hevenfeld, while by the-aforesaid Penda in the-place which is-called Hevenfeld id est, celestis campus, quadam nocte obsideretur: erexit that is heavenly field on-a-certain night he-was-besieged raised ibidem crucem domini, et commilitonibus suis indixit, there the-cross of-the-Lord and to-fellow-soldiers his-own he-enjoined ut suprema voce in hæc verba clamarent: Flectamus that with-the-utmost voice in these words they-should-cry let-us-bend genua omnes, et Deum omnipotentem vivum et verum in knees all and God almighty living and true in commune deprecemur, ut nos ab exercitu superbo Britannici common let-us-entreat that us from the-army proud of-the-British regis, et ejusdem nefandi ducis Peandæ defendat: scit enim king and of-the-same unspeakable leader Penda he-may-defend knows for ipse, quia justa pro salute gentis nostræ bella suscepimus. he that just for the-safety of-the-people our wars we-have-undertaken Fecerunt ergo omnes ut jusserat: et sic incipiente diluculo did therefore all as he-had-ordered and so beginning the-dawn in hostes progressi, juxta suæ fidei meritum against the-enemies having-advanced according-to of-their-own faith the-merit victoria potiti sunt. Quod ut Cadwalloni nunciatum fuit, of-the-victory gained they-have which when to-Cadwallo announced was acri ira ignescens, collegit exercitum suum, et sanctum with-keen wrath kindling he-gathered army his-own and the-holy regem Oswaldum insequutus est: et collato prælio, in loco king Oswald pursued he-has and joined battle in the-place qui Burne vocatur, irruit in eum Peanda atque interfecit. which Burne is-called rushed upon him Penda and killed Oswius post Oswaldum rex factus, Cadwalloni se submittit

XI · OSWY SUBMITS TO CADWALLO

Oswald's brother Oswy buys peace from Cadwallo, now master of Britain, with gold and silver, and Alfrid and Ethelwald rise against him and flee to Penda. Penda asks Cadwallo for leave to attack Oswy, accusing him at a Pentecost crown-wearing in London of fetching Saxons from Germany. He accuses Oswy of breaking the peace and of driving out his own kinsmen.

Perempto igitur Oswaldo cum multis milibus suorum, slain therefore Oswald with many thousands of-his-own successit ei in regnum Northanhumborum frater ejus succeeded to-him in the-kingdom of-the-Northumbrians the-brother of-him Oswius, qui multa donaria auri et argenti Cadwalloni toti Oswy who many gifts of-gold and of-silver to-Cadwallo the-whole jam Britanniae imperanti donans, pacem ejus adeptus est, now Britain commanding giving the-peace of-him gained has et sese ipsi submitit, Nec mora, insurrexerunt in eum and himself to-him submitted nor delay rose-up against him Alfridus frater ejus et Ethelwaldus filius fratris ejus. Sed Alfrid brother his and Ethelwald son of-the-brother his but cum perstare nequivissent, diffugerunt ad Peandam regem when to-stand-firm they-had-been-unable they-fled to Penda king Merciorum, ipsum implorantes, ut collecto exercitu cum eis of-the-Mercians him imploring that gathered an-army with them trans Humbrum iret: regique Oswio regnum suum across the-Humber he-should-go and-from-the-king Oswy kingdom his-own auferret. At Peanda timens pacem infringere, quam rex should-take but Penda fearing the-peace to-break which king Cadwallo per regnum Britanniae statuerat, distulit sine Cadwallo through the-kingdom of-Britain had-established put-off without licentia ipsius inquietationem incipere, donec illum aliquo the-leave of-him disturbance to-begin until him in-some modo incitaret: ut vel ipse in Oswium regem insurgeret, way he-might-incite that either he against Oswy the-king should-rise-up vel sibi cum eo congregiendi copiam concederet. or to-himself with him of-engaging the-opportunity should-grant Quadam igitur solennitate Pentecostes, cum rex Cadwallo on-a-certain therefore solemnity of-Pentecost when king Cadwallo diadema Britanniae portando, festum Londoniis celebraret: et the-diadem of-Britain by-wearing the-feast at-London celebrated and universi Anglorum reges, præter Oswium solum, nec non all of-the-English the-kings except Oswy alone nor not et Britonum duces adessent, adivit Peanda regem, et ab also of-the-Britons the-leaders were-present approached Penda the-king and from eo quæsit, cur Oswius solus aberat, cum ceteri Saxonum him asked why Oswy alone was-absent when the-other of-the-Saxons principes adessent. Cui cum Cadwallo respondisset, ipsum princes were-present to-whom when Cadwallo had-answered him infirmitatis causa deesse: adjecit ipse, dicens, illum misisse of-sickness by-reason to-be-absent added he saying him to-have-sent propter Saxones in Germaniam, ut fratrem suum Oswaldum for the-Saxons into Germany that brother his-own Oswald in ipsos utrosque vindicaret. Adjecit etiam, illum pacem upon them both he-might-avenge he-added also him the-peace regni infregisse, qui solus prælium et contentionem inter of-the-kingdom to-have-broken who alone battle and strife between eos inceptat, cum Ethelfridum regem Northanhumborum, them had-begun when Ethelfrid king of-the-Northumbrians et Ethelwaldum fratris sui filium, bellis inquietatos, and Ethelwald of-the-brother his-own the-son with-wars harried a patria propria expulisset. Petivit quoque licentiam ut from the-country own he-had-expelled he-sought also leave that eum, vel interficeret, vel a regno fugaret. him either he-might-kill or from the-kingdom he-might-put-to-flight

Margadud Cadwalloni consilium dat

XII · MARGADUD COUNSELS CADWALLO

Cadwallo consults his household. Margadud, king of the Demetians, reminds him that he meant to drive the English from Britain and that no faith is owed to those who always plot treachery. He urges him to let Penda attack Oswy, so that the English may destroy one another in civil war.

Rex igitur in diversas meditationes inductus, familiares the-king therefore into diverse meditations led intimates suos sevocavit, præcepitque conjicere quid super tali re his-own called-aside and-ordered to-conjecture what about such a-matter autumarent. Conjicientibus eis plura, Margadud rex they-thought conjecturing them many-things Margadud king Demetiorum inter ceteros dixit: “Domine, quoniam genus of-the-Demetians among the-others said O-lord since the-race Anglorum te ex finibus Britanniae expulsurum proposuisti, of-the-English thyself from the-borders of-Britain about-to-expel hast-proposed cur a proposito tuo divertens, ipsos inter nos in pace why from purpose thy turning-aside them among us in peace manere pateris? Eia ergo, permitte saltem, ut ipsi inter to-remain dost-thou-suffer come therefore permit at-least that they among semetipsos civilem habeant discordiam, et mutuis cladibus themselves civil may-have discord and by-mutual disasters affecti a patria nostra exterminentur. Non est enim fides afflicted from country our may-be-driven-out not is for faith illi servanda, qui semper insidiatur, ut eum cui eam to-him to-be-kept who always lies-in-wait that him to-whom it debet versutis laqueis capiat. Saxones ergo, ex quo he-owes with-crafty snares he-may-catch the-Saxons therefore from when primum patriam nostram ingressi sunt, semper insidiantes first country our entered have always lying-in-wait gentem nostram prodiderunt. Quam itaque fidem eis tenere people our have-betrayed what therefore faith to-them to-keep debemus? Da ocyus Peandæ licentiam, ut in prædictum ought-we give more-swifly to-Penda leave that against the-aforesaid Oswium insurgat: ut sic civili discordia inter eos exorta Oswy he-may-rise that so civil discord between them having-arisen alter alterum perimens, ab insula nostra deleantur.” the-one the-other slaying from island our they-may-be-destroyed

Peanda ab Oswio occiditur

XIII • PENDA IS KILLED BY OSWY

Penda ravages Oswy's lands and refuses his gifts, and Oswy, trusting in God, kills him and thirty leaders by the Winwaed. Penda's son Wulfred rebels against Oswy until Cadwallo orders peace. Cadwallo dies after forty-eight years, worn by age and sickness, on 17 November; the Britons set his embalmed body in a bronze image on a bronze horse over London's west gate, a terror to the Saxons, and build Saint Martin's church beneath it.

His igitur et pluribus aliis dictis motus Cadwallo, Peandæ these therefore and many others said moved Cadwallo to-Penda licentiam dedit congregiendi cum Oswio. Qui deinde collecto leave gave of-engaging with Oswy who then gathered innumerabili exercitu, petivit Humbrum, et provinciam ejusdem a-countless army sought the-Humber and the-province of-the-same patriæ vastando, prædictum regem acriter cœpit inquietare. At country by-laying-waste the-aforesaid king fiercely began to-harry but Oswius ad ultimum necessitate coactus, promisit ei innumera Oswy at the-last by-necessity compelled promised him countless regia ornamenta, et maiora donaria quam credi potest, ut royal ornaments and greater gifts than to-be-believed can that patriam suam vastare desineret, et prætermissa inquietatione country his-own to-lay-waste he-should-cease and abandoned the-disturbance quam inceperat, domum rediret. Cumque ille precibus ejus which he-had-begun home should-return and-when he to-the-prayers of-him nullatenus assensum præberet: rex ille ad divinum respiciens in-no-way assent offered king that to divine looking adiutorium, licet minorem haberet exercitum, inivit tamen aid though a-smaller he-had army he-entered yet prælium cum illo juxta fluvium Winved, et Peanda, nec non battle with him beside the-river Winwæd and Penda nor not et triginta ducibus peremptis, victoriam adeptus est. Interfecto also thirty leaders slain victory gained has killed igitur Peanda, Wulfredus filius ejusdem, donante Cadwallone, therefore Penda Wulfred son of-the-same granting Cadwallo successit in regnum, qui consociatis sibi Eba et Edberto succeeded in the-kingdom who joined to-himself Eba and Edbert Merciorum ducibus, rebellavit adversus Oswium: sed jubente of-the-Mercians leaders rebelled against Oswy but ordering tandem Cadwallone, pacem cum illo habuit. Completis tandem at-last Cadwallo peace with him had completed at-last quadraginta octo annis, nobilissimus ille atque potentissimus forty eight years most-noble that and most-mighty Cadwallo rex Britonum, senio et infirmitate gravatus, Cadwallo king of-the-Britons by-old-age and sickness burdened xv Kalendas Decemb. ab hoc seculo migravit. Cujus on-the-fifteenth Kalends of-December from this world departed whose corpus Britones balsamo et aromatibus conditum in quadam body the-Britons with-balsam and spices embalmed in a-certain ænea imagine, ad mensuram staturæ ejus fusa, mira bronze image to the-measure of-the-stature of-him cast with-wondrous arte posuerunt. Imaginem autem illam super æneum equum, art placed image moreover that upon a-bronze horse miræ pulcritudinis armatam, et super Occidentalem portam of-wondrous beauty armed and over the-Western gate Londoniarum erectam in signum prædictæ victoriæ, et of-London raised for a-sign of-the-aforsaid victory and Saxonibus in terrorem statuerunt. Sed et ecclesiam subtus, to-the-Saxons for terror they-set but also a-church beneath in honorem sancti Martini ædificaverunt, in qua pro ipso in honor of-saint Martin they-built in which for him et fidelibus defunctis, divina celebrantur obsequia. and the-faithful departed divine are-celebrated services

Cadwalloni filius Cadwalladrus succedit

XIV · CADWALLO'S SON CADWALLADER SUCCEEDS

Cadwallader, whom Bede calls the youth Ethelwald, rules manfully and peacefully at first. After twelve years he falls sick, and civil discord breaks out among the Britons. His mother was Penda's half-sister, whom Cadwallo married after making peace with her brother.

Successit itaque in regni gubernaculum Cadwalladrus filius succeeded and-so in of-the-kingdom the-helm Cadwallader son ejus, quem Beda Ethelwaldum juvenem vocat, et in initio his whom Bede Ethelwald the-youth calls and in the-beginning viriliter et pacifice tractavit. At cum duodecim annos post manfully and peaceably he-governed but when twelve years after sumptum diadema præteriisset, in infirmitatem cecidit, et taken the-diadem he-had-passed into sickness he-fell and civile dissidium inter Britones ortum est. Mater ejus fuerat civil discord among the-Britons arisen has the-mother of-him had-been soror Peandæ: patre tantum eodem: matre vero diversa, ex the-sister of-Penda by-father only the-same by-mother indeed different from nobili genere Gewisseorum edita fuerat. Eam memoratus the-noble race of-the-Gewissae born she-had-been her the-mentioned rex Cadwallo, post factam cum fratre concordiam, in king Cadwallo after made with the-brother concord into societatem thori accepit: et Cadwalladrum ex illa progeniuit. fellowship of-the-bed received and Cadwallader from her begot Britones ex Britannia abeunt: Cadwalladri lamentum

XV · CADWALLADER'S LAMENT

Famine and then a plague so great that the living cannot bury the dead drive the Britons overseas, singing that God has given them as sheep to the slaughter. Sailing for Armorica, Cadwallader laments that God's vengeance uproots a people whom neither Romans, Scots, Picts, nor Saxons could drive out. He bids the Romans, Scots, Picts, Ambrones, and Saxons return, since Britain lies open to them, deserted by God's wrath.

Quo igitur (ut dicere cœperam) languente, discordia afficiuntur him therefore as to-say I-had-begun languishing by-discord are-afflicted Britones, et opulentam patriam detestabili dissidio destruunt. the-Britons and the-opulent country with-detestable dissension they-destroy Accessit etiam aliud infortunium: quia fames dira ac was-added also another misfortune because famine dire and famosissima insipienti populo adhæsit, ita ut totius cibi most-notorious to-the-foolish people clung so that of-all food sustentaculo quæque vacuaretur provincia, excepto venatoriæ of-the-support each was-emptied province except of-the-hunting artis solatio. Quam famem pestifera mortis lues consecuta est: art the-solace which famine a-pestilent of-death plague followed has quæ in brevi tantam populi multitudinem stravit, quantam which in short so-great of-the-people a-multitude laid-low as non poterant vivi humare. Unde miseræ reliquiæ, patriam not could the-living to-bury whence the-wretched remnants the-country factis agminibus diffugientes, transmarinas petebant regiones, made columns fleeing overseas sought regions et cum ululatu magno sub velorum sinibus hoc modo and with wailing great under of-the-sails the-folds in-this manner cantantes: “Dedisti nos Deus tanquam oves escarum: in singing thou-hast-given us O-God as sheep of-food among gentibus dispersisti nos.” Ipse etiam rex Cadwalladrus the-nations thou-hast-scattered us he-himself also king Cadwallader cum navigio miserabili Armorica petens, prædictum planctum with a-fleet wretched Armorica seeking the-aforesaid lament hoc modo augebat: Væ nobis peccatoribus, ob immania in-this manner increased woe to-us sinners on-account-of monstrous scelera nostra, quibus Deum nullatenus offendere diffugimus, crimes our by-which God in-no-way to-offend we-shunned dum pœnitentiæ spatium habebamus. Incumbit ergo illius while of-penitence room we-had presses therefore of-that potestatis ultio: quæ nos ex natali solo extirpat: quos power the-vengeance which us from native soil uproots whom nec olim Romani, nec deinde Scoti vel Picti: nec versutæ neither once the-Romans nor afterward the-Scots or Picts nor the-crafty Saxonum prodiones exterminare quiverunt. Sed in vanum of-the-Saxons treacheries to-drive-out could but in vain patriam contra illos toties recuperavimus: cum non fuit Dei the-country against them so-often we-recovered since not was of-God voluntas, ut in ea perpetuo regnaremus. Ipse verus iudex, the-will that in it perpetually we-should-reign he-himself the-true judge cum vidisset nos nullatenus a sceleribus nostris cessare velle, when he-had-seen us in-no-way from crimes our to-cess to-wish ac neminem genus nostrum a regno expellere posse: and no-one race our from the-kingdom to-expel to-be-able volens corripere stultos, indignationem suam direxit, qua wishing to-chastise the-foolish indignation his-own directed by-which propriam nationem catervatim deserimus. Redite ergo, Romani: own nation in-troops we-desert return therefore O-Romans redite Scoti et Picti: redite Ambrones et Saxones: ecce patet return O-Scots and Picts return O-Ambrones and Saxons behold lies-open vobis Britannia, ira Dei deserta: quam vos desertam to-you Britain by-the-wrath of-God deserted which you deserted facere nequivistis. Non nos fortitudo vestra expellit: sed to-make could-not not us strength your drives-out but summi regis potentia, quam nunquam offendere distulimus. of-the-highest king the-power which never to-offend we-delayed

Britones Alanum regem petunt: Saxones tota Britannia potiuntur

XVI · THE SAXONS TAKE ALL BRITAIN

Cadwallader is welcomed by King Alan, Salomon's nephew, while Britain lies desolate for eleven years, deadly to Saxons and Britons alike. When the plague ends, the surviving Saxons summon their countrymen from Germany. The newcomers settle the empty land from Albany to Cornwall, the Britons' remnant keeps to the Welsh forests, and from that time the English reign.

Ut igitur inter hos et alios gemitus in Armoricanum when therefore amid these and other groans on the-Armorican littus appulsus fuit: venit cum tota multitudo sua shore driven he-was he-came with the-whole multitude his-own ad regem Alanum Salomonis nepotem: et ab illo digne to king Alan of-Salomon nephew and by him worthily susceptus est. Britannia ergo cunctis civibus, exceptis received he-was Britain therefore of-all citizens excepted paucis, quibus in Gualliarum partibus mors pepercerat, a-few whom in of-Wales the-parts death had-spared desolata, per undecim annos Britonibus horrenda fuit. desolated for eleven years to-the-Britons dreadful was Saxonibus quoque eadem tempestate ingrata, qui in illa sine to-the-Saxons also at-the-same time unwelcome who in it without intermissione moriebantur. Quorum residui, cum tam feralis intermission died of-whom the-survivors when so deadly lues cessavisset, continuum morem servantes, nunciaverunt plague had-ceased continual custom keeping announced concivibus suis in Germania, Britanniam insulam indigena to-fellow-citizens their-own in Germany Britain the-island of-native gente carentem, facile illis subdendam, si in illam habitaturi people lacking easily to-them to-be-subjected if into it about-to-dwell convenirent. Quod cum ipsis indicatum fuisset, nefandus they-should-come which when to-them indicated had-been unspeakable populus ille, collecta innumerabili multitudine virorum ac people that gathered a-countless multitude of-men and mulierum, applicuit in partes Northanhumbriæ: et desolatas of-women landed in the-parts of-Northumbria and the-desolate provincias ab Albania usque ad Cornubiam inhabitavit. Non provinces from Albany all-the-way to Cornwall inhabited not enim aderat habitator qui prohiberet, præter pauperculas for was-present an-inhabitant who might-forbid except the-poor Britonum reliquias quæ superfuerant, quæ intra abdita of-the-Britons remnants who had-survived who within the-bidden-places nemorum in Gualliis commanebant. Ab illo tempore potestas of-the-woods in Wales dwelt from that time the-power Britonum in insula cessavit: et Angli regnare cœperunt. of-the-Britons in the-island ceased and the-English to-reign began Cadwalladrum ad Britanniam redeuntem angelus Dei deterret

XVII · AN ANGEL FORBIDS THE RETURN

When his people have recovered and the island is purified of the plague, Cadwallader asks Alan's help to win back his kingdom. As he readies the fleet, an angelic voice thunders that God will not let the Britons reign until the time Merlin foretold to Arthur. He is to go to Pope Sergius in Rome and do penance, and the Britons will regain the island only when they bring his relics back from Rome.

Deinde cum aliquantulum temporis emensum esset, et then when a-little of-time passed had and prædictus populus roboratus fuisset, recordatus Cadwalladrus the-aforesaid people strengthened had-been having-remembered Cadwallader regni sui jam a supradicta contagione purificati, of-the-kingdom his-own now from the-above-said contagion purified auxilium ab Alano petivit: ut pristinæ potestati restitueretur. help from Alan sought that to-former power be-might-be-restored At cum id a rege impetravisset, intonuit ei vox but when this from the-king he-had-obtained thundered to-him a-voice angelica, dum classem pararet, ut cœptis suis angelic while the-fleet he-prepared that from-undertakings his-own desisteret. Nolebat enim Deus Britones in insula Britannia he-should-desist was-unwilling for God the-Britons in the-island of-Britain diutius regnare, antequam tempus illud venisset, quod longer to-reign before the-time that had-come which Merlinus Arturo prophetaverat. Præcepit etiam illi, ut Romam Merlin to-Arthur had-protphesied it-ordered also him that to-Rome ad Sergium Papam iret, ubi peracta pœnitentia inter to Sergius the-Pope he-should-go where completed penance among beatos annumeraretur. Dicebat etiam populum Britonum per the-blessed he-might-be-numbered it-said also the-people of-the-Britons through meritum suæ fidei insulam in futuro adepturum, postquam the-merit of-their-own faith the-island in the-future about-to-gain after fatale tempus superveniret. Nec id tamen prius futurum, the-fated time should-come nor that yet sooner about-to-be quam Britones reliquiis ejus potiti, illas e Roma in than the-Britons of-the-relics of-him having-gained them from Rome into Britanniam asportarent. Tunc demum revelatis etiam ceterorum Britain should-carry then at-length revealed also of-the-other sanctorum reliquiis, quæ propter paganorum invasionem saints the-relics which on-account-of of-the-pagans the-invasion absconditæ fuerant, amissum regnum recuperarent. Quod hidden had-been the-lost kingdom they-would-recover which cum auribus beati viri intimatum fuisset: accessit ilico when to-the-ears of-the-blessed man made-known had-been he-went on-the-spot ad Alanum regem, et quod sibi revelatum fuerat, indicavit. to Alan the-king and what to-him revealed had-been indicated Cadwalladrus Romam petit, ubi paulo post moritur

XVIII · CADWALLADER GOES TO ROME AND DIES THERE

Alan compares the revelation with the prophecies of the Eagle of Shaftesbury, the Sibyl, and Merlin, finds them in agreement, and urges Cadwallader to obey, leaving Britain and sending his son Ivor and nephew Ini to rule the British remnant. Cadwallader renounces the world and goes to Rome. Confirmed by Pope Sergius, he falls suddenly sick and dies on 20 April 689, entering the hall of the heavenly kingdom.

Tunc Alanus sumptis diversis libris, et de prophetiis Aquilæ then Alan taken diverse books both of the-prophecies of-the-Eagle qui Sehstoniæ prophetavit, et de carminibus Sibyllæ ac who at-Shaftesbury prophesied and of the-songs of-the-Sibyl and Merlini, cœpit scrutari omnia, ut videret, an revelatio of-Merlin began to-examine all that he-might-see whether the-revelation Cadwalladri scriptis oraculis concordaret. Et cum nullam of-Cadwallader with-the-written oracles agreed and when no discrepantiam reperisset: suggestit Cadwalladro, ut divinæ discrepancy he-had-found he-suggested to-Cadwallader that divine dispensationi pareret: et Britannia postposita, quod angelicus to-the-dispensation he-should-obey and Britain set-aside what the-angelic ei præceperat monitus, perficeret, filium autem suum to-him had-ordered warning he-should-perform son moreover his-own Ivor, ac Ini nepotem suum ad reliquias Britonum regendas Ivor and Ini nephew his-own for the-remnants of-the-Britons to-be-ruled in insulam dirigeret: ne gens antiquo illorum genere edita, into the-island he-should-send lest a-people from-ancient their race born libertatem barbarica irruptione amitteret. Tunc Cadwalladrus liberty by-barbarian onrush should-lose then Cadwallader abjectis mundialibus, propter Deum regnumque perpetuum, cast-off worldly-things for-the-sake-of God and-the-kingdom everlasting venit Romam, et a Sergio Papa confirmatus, non multo came to-Rome and by Sergius the-Pope confirmed not much post inopino etiam languore correptus est, duodecima after by-unexpected also sickness seized he-was on-the-twelfth autem die Kalendarum Majarum, anno ab incarnatione moreover day of-the-Kalends of-May in-the-year from the-incarnation Dominica sexcentesimo octogesimo nono, a contagione of-the-Lord six-hundredth eightyeth ninth from the-contagion carnis solutus, cœlestis regni aulam ingressus est. of-the-flesh released of-the-heavenly kingdom the-hall entered he-has

Ivor et Ini frustra Saxones inquietant

XIX · IVOR AND INI HARASS THE SAXONS IN VAIN

Ivor and Ini harry the English for forty-nine years, but plague, famine, and habitual discord have so degraded the proud people that they cannot drive the enemy back. Grown barbarous, they are no longer called Britons but Welsh. The wiser Saxons keep peace, till the land, and rebuild the cities, and under Athelstan, the first to wear a crown among them, they rule all Loegria, while the Welsh never recover the island's monarchy and suffer ceaseless strife.

Cum autem Ivor et Ini naves sibi collegissent, when moreover Ivor and Ini ships for-themselves had-gathered quos potuerunt associaverunt sibi, et applicuerunt in whom they-could they-joined to-themselves and landed on insulam, atque xlix annis gentem Anglorum sævissima the-island and for-forty-nine years the-people of-the-English with-most-savage inquietatione affecerunt: sed non multum profuit. Supra harassment afflicted but not much it-profitd above dicta namque mortalitas, et fames, atque consuetudinarium said for the-mortality and famine and habitual dissidium, in tantum coegerat populum superbum dissension to such-a-degree had-compelled the-people proud degenerare, quod hostes longius arcere nequiverant. to-degenerate that the-enemies farther to-keep-off they-had-been-unable Barbarie etiam irrepente, jam non vocabantur Britones, sed barbarism also creeping-in now not they-were-called Britons but Gualenses: vocabulum sive a Gualone duce eorum, sive a Welsh the-word whether from Gualo leader their or from Guales eorum regina, sive a barbarie trahentes. At Saxones Guales their queen or from barbarism drawing but the-Saxons sapientius agentes, pacem etiam et concordiam inter se more-wisely acting peace also and concord among themselves habentes, agros colentes, civitates et oppida reædificantes having the-fields tilling cities and towns rebuilding erant, et sic abjecto Britonum dominio, jam toti Loegriæ were and so cast-off of-the-Britons the-dominion now over-all Loegria imperaverant, duce Athelstano, qui primus inter eos diadema bad-ruled as-leader Athelstan who first among them the-diadem portavit. Degenerati autem a Britannica nobilitate Gualenses, wore degenerated moreover from British nobility the-Welsh nunquam postea monarchiam insulæ recuperaverunt: immo, never afterward the-monarchy of-the-island recovered rather nunc sibi interdum Saxonibus ingrati, consurgentes, now to-themselves sometimes to-the-Saxons hostile rising-up internas atque domesticas clades incessanter habebant. internal and domestic disasters unceasingly had Auctor finem historiæ suæ facit

XX · THE AUTHOR ENDS HIS HISTORY

Geoffrey leaves the later Welsh kings to his contemporary Caradoc of Llancarfan. He leaves the Saxon kings to William of Malmesbury and Henry of Huntingdon, whom he bids be silent about the British kings. They do not have the book in the British tongue that Walter, archdeacon of Oxford, brought, which Geoffrey has taken care to translate into Latin.

Reges autem illorum qui ab illo tempore in Gualiiis the-kings moreover of-them who from that time in Wales successerunt: Karadoco Lancarbanensi contemporaneo meo, in succeeded to-Caradoc of-Llancarfan contemporary my in materia scribendi permitto. Reges vero Saxonum Guillelmo the-matter of-writing I-leave the-kings but of-the-Saxons to-William Malmesberienſi, et Henrico Huntingdonenſi: quos de of-Malmesbury and to-Henry of-Huntingdon whom about regibus Britonum tacere jubeo, cum non habeant illum the-kings of-the-Britons to-be-silent I-bid since not they-have that librum Britannici sermonis, quem Gualterus Oxinefordenſis book of-the-British tongue which Walter of-Oxford archidiaconus ex Britannia advexit: quem de historia archdeacon from Britain brought which about the-history eorum veraciter editum in honore prædictorum principum, of-them truthfully composed in honor of-the-aforesaid princes hoc modo in Latinum sermonem transferre curavi. in-this manner into the-Latin tongue to-translate I-have-taken-care
